TOP fails to respond

Chances for debate among local candidates dwindling

by LYNN ASINOF

Although candidates of the To Overall Progress Party (TOP) have not yet responded to an invitation to debate candidates of the Wheeling Independent Party (WHIP), the possibility of such a meeting now is doubtful.

The meeting was proposed Friday by WHIP campaign manager Sheila Schultz in a letter to Michael Valenza, campaign manager for the TOP party. Mrs. Schultz, at that time, suggested the Wheeling Jaycees sponsor the joint panel discussion.

The Jaycees, however, are waiting for an indication that both parties are interested in the proposed discussion before considering the project.

INCUMBENT TED C. Scanlon, TOP candidate for village president, said his ticket has not had time to discuss the matter in depth. He said he hoped the party would reach a decision within the week, saying the candidates' busy schedules have delayed consideration of the challenge.

Scanlon, however, indicated the challenge was issued too late in the election campaign, since TOP candidates already have committed themselves to a full campaign schedule. "We went ahead and booked ourselves solid except for church days," he said.

Scanlon said the present TOP campaign consists of door-to-door canvassing and a series of neighborhood coffees. He said he believed this approach had proven to be a successful way of reaching the people.

"I think we are accomplishing a lot more than whatever they're asking for," he said of the proposal. "If (Gov. Daniel) Walker can go with walking and talking, we'll go with walking and talking."

Even if the TOP candidates do decide to take part in the panel discussion, it may be too late for the Jaycees to organize such a meeting. There is now only one month of campaigning left before the election.

JAYCEES PRES. Tony Altieri said in order to organize the panel discussion, the Jaycees would have to call a special meeting. He said the Jaycees have already had their membership meeting for this month and the next one is not scheduled until the second Thursday in April. "I'm just sitting tight," he said. "I can't do anything without the membership."

Although two of the WHIP candidates for village election are members of the Jaycees, Altieri said neither of them mentioned the possibility of an election debate at the last membership meeting.

"We're not planning on it at this point," he said. "Quite frankly, it just seems rather unlikely."

Mrs. Schultz said it was unfortunate that the Jaycees had not been notified earlier about the proposed discussion. "As you know, the Buffalo Grove Jaycees have done this type of thing before, so I didn't think it would come as a complete surprise," she said. "It was unfortunate."

Village board changes appearance filing rule

The Wheeling Village Board Monday night passed an ordinance shortening the filing period for persons who wish to address the board at its weekly meetings.

Previously, the board required persons wishing to address the board contact the village clerk by noon of the Saturday preceding the meeting. Since the village office is not open on Saturdays, the trustees voted to change this deadline to noon on Friday.

Although some village residents have attacked the ordinance's revision, no one spoke against it at the meeting. Previously, Sheila Schultz, 393 S. Meadowbrook Ln., told the board she thought the revised deadline was restrictive.

Trustee Al Lang asked the ordinance be revised after board members strongly criticized a lengthy discussion of the zoning hearings for the W. Strong Street area. The trustees said several persons had used that discussion for political purposes.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said the board should enforce the ordinance governing verbal communications to prevent such incidents in the future.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, Peter Guttilla, Wheeling's new police chief, was sworn into office by Village Clerk Evelyn Diens.

The board also voted to approve density and sideyard variations for the high-rise condominium project being built at 610 McHenry Rd. by developer George Manda.

The trustees directed the village manager to seek bids for a new vehicle for the village animal warden. The present vehicle is a converted 1961 ambulance.

At the suggestion of Trustee Bill Hein, the board also asked the director of public works investigate the possibility of installing water softening devices in village wells.

The board also accepted the public improvements at Whippetree Village, thus releasing the development's letter of credit for these facilities. The village will now take over maintenance of these improvements.

Trustee Ron Bruhn was not present at the meeting.

High school discipline to be probed

The High School Dist. 214 Board decided Monday it wants to look into the problem of discipline in its schools, perhaps by calling a meeting where building administrators can express their opinions on the situation.

The board reached agreement on that issue after board member Jack Costello, newly announced candidate for reelection, expressed concern over the amount of insubordination reported in the suspension reports received by the board.

Two accident victims out of intensive care treatment

Two victims of last week's three-car accident on Dundee Road near the Tri-State Tollway have been removed from intensive care treatment. A third victim, however, remains in poor condition in Highland Park Hospital's intensive care unit.

Diane Mazza, 850 Mark Ln., Wheeling, has been removed from intensive care treatment and is listed in stable condition. She suffered eye injuries, a fractured leg and multiple contusions in the crash.

Joan Vido of Deerfield remains in poor condition. She received severe head injuries, a fractured arm and a fractured leg in the accident.

Diego Vido also of Deerfield is listed in good condition. He suffered facial lacerations and possible internal injuries in the crash.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

The convicted triggerman in the Joseph "Jock" Yablonski murders has testified four former United Mine Workers officials told him ex-union president "Tony" Boyle ordered the killings "for the welfare of the UMW."

Three hundred government agents, using armored personnel carriers have tightened the circle around militant Indians entrenched at Wounded Knee, S.D.

The government will recommend Amtrak be given two more years to prove it can save the passenger train... but that four money-losing routes be dropped now.

Urging a one-year delay in enforcing clean air standards, Ford Motor Co. warned that allowing unreliable pollution control devices would be like throwing "a catastrophe into hands of the public."

Railroad labor and management negotiators announced tentative agreement on new contracts for 14 unions representing 500,000 rail workers. An official for the machinists' union said he may reject the proposal.

The state

The Illinois House passed, 115-42, and sent to the Senate a bill that would forbid the Environmental Protection Agency from banning open burning of leaves.

A suit filed in Juvenile Court charges that two children from Illinois were beaten, isolated, and kept in handcuffs in a room in a Texas institution for neglected children.

Bills to provide emergency loans to financially troubled mass transit systems in the state, including up to $18.9 million for the CTA, moved to the passage stage in the Senate.

The world

Operation Homecoming's reception center, idle for five days, will receive 142 released American prisoners by the end of the week, 108 of them today.

Six persons have been detained for questioning in Bermuda and all handguns have been ordered turned in for ballistics tests in the search for assassins of Gov. Sir Richard Sharples.

In the latest Northern Ireland violence a British patrol shot and killed an armed man in Belfast, and a soldier died in a land mine ambush.

The war

American jet fighters today bombed Communist positions along Cambodia's southern Highway 2, where Cambodian command reported a relentless all-night attack against troops in the village of Prasat Neang Khmau... In Saigon, it was announced that South Korea, whose troops piled up a 10-1 kill ratio against the Communists, officially cease operations today.

350 to sing in choir fest Sunday

The combined voices of 350 children will be heard Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Second Annual Children's Choir Festival to be held at Bethel Lutheran Church, Palatine.

The children, ranging in age from fourth graders through eighth graders, and representing 22 choirs from throughout the Northwest suburbs, will be under the direction of Helen Kemp, associate professor at Westminster Choir College, Princeton, N.J.

Children in the massed choir have been practicing for the concert, including a session last Saturday under the direction of Sue Davidson. In addition to the concert Sunday, local choir directors can attend a workshop for children's choirs on Saturday.

There will be no charge for the Sunday festival, but an offering will be accepted. Bethel Lutheran Church is at 2150 W. Frontage Rd.

Hawthorn plan vote tonight

The second part of a public hearing on the proposed annexation of land for the Hawthorn Development will be held tonight before the Buffalo Grove Plan Commission. After the hearing the commission will vote and make a recommendation to the village board.

The question of providing adequate schools and park space for the development has been raised at previous meetings.

Michael Di Vincenzo, superintendent of School Dist. 102 said the development could add as many as 700 students, placing a severe financial burden on the school system. The school district at present has about 300 students.

The Tekton Corp. and the Richard's Group, developers of the project, have said they will donate 16 acres of land for construction of park and schools. Di Vincenzo, however, said the school district probably cannot afford to build a school on the site.

PARK DISTRICT Pres. William J. Kiddle Jr. said of the 16 acres to be donated by the developer, as many as 10 acres could be claimed by the school district.

On the remaining six acres, the developer plans to build a swimming pool, recreation center, parking area and retention pond for the private use of the homeowners in the development. Kiddle said there will be little, if any, land for the park district.

Kiddle said a plan for providing a private recreation area instead of donating land to the park district could be acceptable. He said, however, because the developers' plans lack detail, it is not possible to see if they would meet park district approval.

The 124-acre development, if approved, will be located northeast of Aptakisic Road (Weiland Road) and the Lake-Cook County line. The project will contain 1,234 privately owned units, consisting of condominiums, townhouses and multi-plex units. It will house between 3,500 and 4,000 persons.

A LITTLE WOBBLY but eager to learn, skaters through fifth grades meet Tuesdays and Wednesdays at Knight's Palace in Arlington Heights. Participants also have time during the class for free skating.

Candidates present platforms tonight

The 10 candidates running for Buffalo Grove village trustee will present their platforms tonight at the Buffalo Grove Jaycees' meeting.

The candidates are trying for three positions on the village board. The election is April 17.

Three candidates represent the Village Independent Party (VIP), three represent the Concerned Citizens of Buffalo Grove (CCBG) party and four are running as independents.

The meeting will be at the Buffalo Grove Golf Club and will begin at 7 p.m. The public is invited.

"I have become more and more concerned about the number of times in subordination and bad language is reported," Costello said. "I think we should deal very harshly with that. I wouldn't tolerate that kind of language and I don't think we should ask our people to tolerate it either."

SUPT. EDWARD GILBERT said the only actions the school could take would be to increase the length of suspensions required for insubordination or "if the violation is flagrant, we could go for expulsion."

Suspensions for up to 10 days may be made by school administrators. Expulsion, which could be for a full semester, must be acted on by the board.

Board member Richard Bachhuber said he does not like the idea of using expulsion as a discipline tool. "I think we ought to find some other way to control things instead of throwing a kid out," he said.

Board member Gene Artemenko suggested the board meet specifically to discuss approaches to discipline problems and added that Gilbert and other administrators could also find out whether any other school districts are using other methods to control students.

IN OTHER ACTION, the board authorized $57,015 for seven school buses which will be used during the day next year to bus students to outside locations connected with their classes.

Among the locations students will be bused to next year are automobile dealerships where they will work as part of the auto mechanics program and elementary and nursery schools where students in child care and social science classes will work.

Assistant Supt. Rod McLennan said last year the district spent $23,000 on busing for class purposes and added that expanding the programs may eventually allow the schools to save space.

Money for the buses will come from the district's transportation fund, not the fund which provides for educational programs.

Kildeer School to close temporarily

by JILL BETTNER

The Dist. 96 School Board Monday night agreed to close Kildeer School temporarily after the third school in the district opens early next year.

The board took the action on the recommendation of a 13-member community relations committee, appointed to study the projected use of school facilities.

Supt. William Hitzeman told the Herald the move from Kildeer to the new school on Penny Lane in Buffalo Grove would probably take place during Christmas vacation.

'Sweetheart dinner' for dads

Brownies in Lake County Buffalo Grove will sponsor a "Sweetheart Dinner" for their fathers at 7 p.m. Friday. The dinner is an annual event and will be followed by a games night.

The affair will be at Kildeer Countryside School in Long Grove. Brownies from troops 111, 133, 226, 51 and 177 have been working on decorations for the affair for several weeks.

Kildeer students in grades one, two and three will be assigned to Willow Grove School and pupils in grades four through eight will be assigned to the new school.

IT HAS NOT YET been determined exactly how long Kildeer will be closed. Hitzeman said the building will definitely be vacant from the time the new school is occupied at least until the following June.

In its second report, the committee will make a firm recommendation on how long Kildeer should remain closed. The group will also suggest what remodeling, if any, should be done while the school is vacant.

The School Dist. 96 architect has estimated the cost of completely remodeling Kildeer at about half a million dollars. Hitzeman said the funds are not currently available.

According to the committee, when the third school was planned in 1971, school officials expected area developments would add at least 600 new students to the district. However, because of delays, the projects are behind schedule and there will not be enough students in the district next year to fill three schools.

"We must realize that this is a temporary delay, and not a permanent respite," the report states. The committee expects that the developments now under construction will increase student enrollment in Dist. 96 by 1,600 students within five years. On this basis, the capacity of the district's present schools will be exceeded sometime before 1978.

Discussing the decision to close Kildeer, the report says, "Foremost in our minds was the educational aspect — the question of what is best for the students from the standpoint of learning."

OTHER FACTORS taken into consideration were the following points:

- Under the Individually Guided Education (IGE) program, recently adopted in Dist. 96, it is desirable that students and faculty at each grade level have the maximum opportunity to work together.

- Many parents in the district strongly favor "neighborhood schools."

- The new developments in the area are some distance from present Dist. 96 schools and the building on Penny Lane.

- The operation of three schools would entail additional expenses estimated in excess of $50,000 a year.

- The distribution of students is such that there would be little difference in school bus expense between a two-school and a three-school operation.

- Materials for a third library would require an estimated $100,000.

- Willow Grove School was designed as a primary school and lacks certain facilities needed for junior high school students. Both Kildeer and the new school are equipped for junior high pupils.

- Approximately 820 or 75 per cent of Dist. 96 students live in Buffalo Grove.

The other 25 per cent come from Long Grove and surrounding communities. Educational theory suggests that it is psychologically unsound to shift a child through three different buildings in his years in elementary schools. However, the 38 per cent annual turnover rate in the Lake County Strathmore section of Buffalo Grove indicates that few students from that area will complete their elementary education within Dist. 96.

- The grade-level mix of students in the district has remained fairly stable for the last three years. However, there is an indication that second home buyers in the Lake County Strathmore area are younger than the first buyers. This suggests that the grade-level mix may shift toward the primary grades.

Hitzeman said much of the equipment at Kildeer would probably be moved to the new school when the students are transferred. He said depending on which grades are later scheduled at Kildeer, new equipment may be purchased for the Long Grove School.

Village to start issuing fund-raising licenses

Starting May 1, the Wheeling civic organizations will be able to purchase a special $5 temporary business license for their fundraising activities.

Currently, these organizations have to purchase a regular $40 temporary license in order to hold carnivals, fairs or other community activities.

The village board Monday night approved the ordinance creating this new type of business license. The ordinance will become effective May 1, the date when new business licenses are issued.

The license will be good for not more than 60 days during each year. This means one license can cover more than one event, if the events do not exceed the proscribed time limit.

Trustee John Koeppen said civic organizations might reduce their paper work if they applied for all their fundraising events at the same time. This way all of the dates for the license could be listed at one time.

In order to qualify for this permit, an organization must be registered with the state as a not-for-profit organization.

Trustee Al Lang proposed the new license last year when several organizations asked to have the $40 fee waived because their events were not-for-profit.

"The reason for changing this fee to $5 is because a lot of not-for-profit organizations in the village doing charitable works have complained about the $40 fee," he said.

Harper budget freeze a surprise

It's probably stating the case too strongly to say that observers of Harper College were shocked when the school's administration announced its budget freeze last week.

But they were at least very surprised. The Harper board received a memo Thursday announcing that, because enrollment has fallen below projections this year, a freeze is being placed on a number of budget categories until the end of the fiscal year.

The freeze will save the college about $100,000, according to William Mann, the school's business manager. Mann also said the projections being used to figure next year's budget will be revised and that budget will be affected by the enrollment changes.

THE PROBLEM facing Harper, because enrollment is not as high as expected, is simple. Last fall, the school hired faculty and made plans assuming a certain number of students. When those students didn't materialize, the school's cost per pupil was pushed upward.

There are, of course, a lot of questions raised by the freeze. For one thing, since the first semester enrollment was below projections, it seems as though the college administration could have taken action earlier, and saved some more money, ey, instead of waiting until mid-March.

Wandalyn Rice

Secondly, the freeze was announced with little fanfare and got little reaction from the Harper board members. The faculty was upset at being surprised, but the board members passed over the action as an administrative matter.

That is quite different from the way some other boards in this area would have reacted. And it may point to a problem, or at least a potential problem, if the board is becoming isolated from the budget process.

BUT THE BIGGEST unanswered question left by the budget freeze is more long range than that. Just how is Harper going to adjust to the new realities as demonstrated in enrollment patterns?

The place the enrollment projections fell down was in estimating the number of students who would be enrolling in transfer programs — the programs that lead to four-year colleges and universities.

That is the same area where all sorts of other higher education institutions have been having trouble with their projections. Since the draft is ending, the job market for college grads is tight and other things are happening; fewer students are planning on getting their degrees from four-year colleges than in the past.

While this will cause Harper problems, especially as they try to predict the future with sufficient accuracy to decide whether to buy a second campus, Harper also may end up with some real benefits from the enrollment shift.

LAST YEAR Harper had to turn away 1,400 students who wanted to enter vocational programs because it didn't have the facilities needed to accommodate that many students. New buildings will be going up, however, because the state has provided more money and vocational programs should be expanding.

In addition, Harper may find the drop in the number of transfer students an additional reason to emphasize increased cooperation on vocational programs with the local high school districts. The high schools are offering more and more vocational programs and Harper may find a growing demand from the students in those programs for more specialized training for the two years following high school.

The adjustment to increased vocational programs will not come overnight. Vocational programs are more expensive than standard academic classes.

But Harper's enrollment projections now seem to be confirming what a lot of people at that school have known for years — the junior college is going to become more and more oriented toward vocational programs.

Press groups urge 'shield' law support

Two Chicago press organizations this week announced support of an absolute "shield" law for journalists to protect sources of published and unpublished information.

The Chicago Headline Club's board of directors approved a model shield law drawn by the National Joint Media Committee. The committee included representatives of the club's parent organization, Sigma Delta Chi, as well as the American Society of Newspaper Editors, the Radio-Television News Directors Association and the National Press Photographers Association.

The club urged the Illinois General Assembly to pass an absolute shield bill recognizing that forcing journalists to disclose sources or unpublished information "inhibits the free flow of information to the public."

In a similar action, the board of governors of the Chicago Press Club endorsed "wholeheartedly the efforts of Chicago Journalists and Illinois newsmen in seeking an absolute 'shield' law in Illinois to provide the fullest protection of sources and unpublished information."

Notice of the group's action was sent to committees of both houses of the General Assembly, the press club said.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon is reported having some trouble deciding what to recommend in his long-awaited energy message to Congress.

Perhaps he should give some thought to the earth tremors that have shaken parts of America recently. For those babies produce tremendous amounts of energy.

In 1972, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), the earth had about 4,500 discernible tremors.

Of these, 13 had a magnitude of between 7.0 and 7.9 on the Richter Scale. Which NOAA said was about an average year in terms of "worldwide energy release."

SENSING I MIGHT be onto something big, I called a seismologist and asked what 7.9 Richter points meant in terms of energy.

"That is the equivalent of about 500 billion trillion ergs," he replied.

"Thanks," I said. "I had it figured that way but I wanted someone to confirm it."

Calls to other seismologists elicited the information that 500 billion trillion ergs equal the energy output of 15 billion kilowatt hours of electricity.

Now we're getting somewhere.

The United States annually uses something in excess of one trillion kilowatt hours. So, as you can see, a few good-sized earthquakes could go a long way toward meeting America's annual energy requirements.

But first we've got to find some way of harnessing the energy the tremors release.

Eucharistic Vigil March 23

In the spirit of Lent, St. Raymond Church, Elmhurst and Lincoln Streets in Mount Prospect, will have a Eucharistic Vigil March 23. It will be the second such vigil in the greater Chicago area.

It will begin with mass at 8 p.m. The homily will be preached by the Rev. William Buhrlied, with the theme, "The Message of Fatima." Mass will be sung by the all-male choir from Our Lady of Victory Church in Chicago.

The Rev. Halpin, pastor emeritus of St. will speak about one of the Blessed Virgin Mary's requests at Fatima. After a short coffee break, the scriptural rosary will be led by Brother Francis, O.F.M. Conv., Marytown, Kenosha, Wis.

The Rev. Daniel Lowery, C.S.S.R., Redemptorist Provincial, will deliver the last homily, on reparation. Benediction and midnight Mass will conclude the vigil.

The public is invited to attend the special Lenten service at the church. For information, phone Margaret Wilkinson, 437-2262.

Crane's a broken record . . . but interesting

Phil Crane is an unrehabilitated educator.

Crane, more respectfully U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, takes to a speaker's stand like he used to take to the professor's lectern when he was teaching history.

And if you pay attention to him, usually you hear something interesting.

Those who have occasion to hear him frequently hear recurring anecdotes and variations on a single theme. The theme he follows has earned him the reputation of one of the most conservative members of the U.S. Congress. It is a label that he does not scorn, but also one which he does not particularly flaunt.

Disdaining textbook definitions of conservatism and liberalism, Crane would rather center on a particular theme he considers the key to success: self-enterprise. He will apply that key to the fields of business, politics or government, particularly government. One of the recurring themes of his lectures is that in matters of government, you can do it yourself better than anybody else can do it for you.

Society, says Crane, functions better when government keeps its nose out of society's affairs. Where government is necessary, says Crane, it works better at the local level than it does "from the banks of the polluted Potomac."

LAST WEEK, Crane delivered one of his variations on his central theme to the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors at their annual dinner in Des Plaines.

He seized upon the real estate market as the fundamental example that government cannot reasonably control prices or values and still preserve a free market. Real estate, he said, is the prime example that "the Marxist philosophy of the labor theory of value" is fallacious.

That theory, that the value of a product is determined by its contents and the amount of labor needed to create it, is no more clearly refuted in any market but real estate, he said.

People who deal in real property, said Crane, know that "a fair price is only what I am willing to pay," and that such a price cannot be determined by some arbitrary standard.

That concept of a free market, Crane told the real estate dealers, is under attack currently because of three fallacies in the thinking of those who run the federal government:

1. We no longer have "problems;" we have only "crises." ("The danger in identifying all problems as crises is that it leads to crash programs to solve them.")

2. Free enterprise is the culprit that creates all these crises.

3. Only government has solutions to these crises.

THESE fallacies, said Crane, have led to a continuing attack on the system of enterprise. And, professorially, he also categorized the sources of that attack:

1. Those of anti-capitalist mentality (presumably, communists, socialists, etc.) whom Crane said represent the smallest segment of those attacking free enterprise.

2. Politicians. Crane depicted some politicians as "snake-oil salesmen" who ride "crises" to fame, and lumped in with them a large segment of the news media which "give them a platform to disseminate their ignorance."

3. Sincere, generous-minded citizens and officeholders who believe that the solution to all the people's woes is in governmental action.

The examples cited by Crane to demonstrate that government must be left to the people it is meant to serve — that is, at the local level — cannot be summarized in this space.

It is perhaps best articulated with this comment from Crane. "I said when I first ran for Congress in the 13th District in 1969 that there was more brainpower and more expertise in that district alone than there was in all of the Washington bureaucracy for the solving of their problems. After four years in Congress, I am beginning to believe that that is true of every congressional district in the United States."

Fund shift costs Headstart 27,000

by JOANN VAN WYE

A controversy has developed concerning the purchase of buses to provide transportation for 120 preschool children to the four Headstart centers in the Northwest suburban area.

A total of $27,000 in federal funds has been taken from the Northwest Suburban Headstart Inc. budget by the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity and given to Pace Inc. for the purchase of four buses to serve the area. Under the proposed program, which is slated to go into effect April 1, Pace Inc. will be under contract to the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity to provide transportation for area Headstart students.

Currently, the Northwest Suburban Headstart board of directors has a contract with Ritzenthaler-Central West Bus Lines in Arlington Heights to transport the students. And although the purchase of buses is expected to save Northwest Suburban Headstart Inc. money, the local group contends many questions about the new service remain unanswered and details of the plan are in constant flux.

THE NORTHWEST Suburban Headstart Board wants to know who will do the bus routing, who will train the drivers, where the buses will be kept, who will maintain the buses and what is Pace Inc.

Approximately 120 3 to 5-year-old students from families falling below the federal poverty level use the bus service. The students attend Headstart centers in Palatine, Arlington Heights, Des Plaines and Wheeling.

The board also is concerned with the proposed $2.10 an hour salary for the drivers. The board contends the salary is too low for this area and it will be next to impossible to find drivers, even parents, to work for that wage. Even if the board could find drivers to work for the wages, it feels the drivers would only stay until they could find a higher paying job and they would be faced with the task of constantly having to hire and train new drivers.

Radios are another problem. The board feels all four buses should be equipped with a radio since they will be covering a 250 square mile area. The radios would allow them to call for help if something should happen to the bus or one of the students.

YET ANOTHER problem is that the four buses for this area will not be available from Ladendorf Motors Inc. in Des Plaines by April 1 and no interim plan has been developed.

Since December the board has written several letters and held special meetings with representatives of the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity and Office of Health, Education and Welfare.

None of the board's concerns have been satisfactorily answered to date, according to Micky Enright, the board's president.

David Hughes, executive director of the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity, met with the board on Monday to discuss the bus transportation situation.

"The board raised some legitimate questions and concerns that need to be answered. We feel the questions can be answered to the satisfaction of the local program and that is where we stand," said Hughes.

ANOTHER meeting has been scheduled for 3:30 p.m. on March 20 at the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity office to answer the questions.

Mrs. Enright said several board members and parents from the area plan to attend the meeting.

Representatives of Mitchell-Watkins, the Chicago consulting firm that conducted the feasibility study on the purchase of buses for Headstart, will be at the March 20 meeting to answer questions. The board has been unsuccessful in its attempts to get a copy of the feasibility study, according to Mrs. Enright.

Mrs. Enright feels since most Cook County Headstart centers are located in black communities the Northwest Suburban Headstart is in the minority and problems particular to this area are being overlooked. She hopes the problems can be rectified before the plan goes into effect on April 1.

Inner city kids breaking barriers

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Crossing the threshold from the inner city school to the suburban high school is a difficult experience for most teenagers at Maryville Academy, a home for dependent children in Des Plaines.

The inner city student entering a competitive suburban high school often finds he can't keep up with his classmates, a realization that compounds his already difficult adjustment problems. He cuts class, lags further behind in his assignments and can end up wandering through the halls most of the day.

The Threshold program at Maine North High School in Des Plaines helps inner city teenagers adjust to life in a suburban school. Special classes with individual instruction are designed to improve such basic skills as English and math to help students become a part of the regular academic program at Maine North.

THE THRESHOLD students come from poor or ghetto schools, often have long truancy records or don't attend school at all, said Linda Selway, social worker at Maine North. Most of those entering high school on the ninth grade have reached only the third or fourth grade level academically.

But the inner city students have the same potential for learning as their suburban classmates, according to Sherman

Roth, director of guidance at Maine North. The problem is to improve their skills in subjects like English and math to a level where they can participate in classroom work and to help them adjust socially so they can get along with other students and teachers he said.

The state-funded Threshold program starts in a classroom at Maryville where new students are tested to determine their academic achievement level. Richard Matejko, Maine North teacher in the Maryville classroom, then tutors each one individually.

Social behavior is "an equally big part" of the adjustment, Matejko said. Students have to learn the importance of good classroom behavior, getting to school on time and keeping up with assignments. Entering students are given a "social awareness test" to find out how they would react in everyday situations.

Once the student is socially and academically ready for high school he is placed in a special classroom at Maine North and taught by Mark Recker and Betty Goerss.

IN THE Threshold classroom students sit at tables, not desks. There's a typewriter, record player and, along one wall, a stand of paperback books. Students get individual lessons in English, math, history, general science or business. When they're finished, they play chess, listen to records or go to the library. The break between assignments, Mrs. Goerss said, relieves the pressure of keeping up class period after class period.

The program, started a year ago, gets $60,000 annually under the state's orphanage act. Some 45 students are enrolled in different stages of Threshold during the school year.

Its success, Mrs. Goerss feels, is based on individual instruction. Student start at their own academic level, regardless of their age. If one of them is to make progress, she said, "the important thing is to give him something he can do. That first good grade can be a turning point, sometimes reversing years of failure."

As they improve, the Threshold kids are gradually introduced to the regular program at Maine North, which at each step is made to seem "as desirable as possible," said Mrs. Goerss. When they learn to meet the competition of regular classes, Threshold students are transferred to the full high school program. The sequence usually takes about a year.

ONE SUCCESS story in the Threshold program is a 15-year-old boy who completed classes at Maryville in six weeks. He realized he would be better off at Maine North, said Mrs. Goerss, but had trouble adjusting to his new environment. He was hostile and uncooperative. Gradually, through Threshold classes at Maine North, he adjusted and became successful in some of the regular classes at the school. He made friends with other students and plans to try out for the school football team next fall.

The program isn't designed for every inner city student at Maryville, said Mrs. Goerss. Some students over 17 have no plans to graduate from high school and are placed in a special class at Maryville taught by Matejko. They learn basic skills in the morning and work in the afternoon, said Matejko. Other Maryville students have higher achievement levels than those in the Threshold program and are able to enter the regular program at Maine North immediately.

School news notes

RECENTLY, TWO teachers at Hawthorne School, Wheeling, Miss Ruth Nordin and Mrs. Barbara Klein, attended a seminar on individualized reading. The seminar, which was held at the Hillside Holiday Inn, Chicago, was sponsored by Educational Consultant Associates and featured Vicky Jacobson as the speaker.

Miss Jacobson, a reading consultant in Roseville, Minn., explained procedures to follow in developing an individualized reading program and delineated the continuum in individualization for reading instruction.

Miss Nordin and Mrs. Klein attended the meeting in order to learn about methods and techniques for individualization which could be used to strengthen the reading program at Hawthorne. They were especially impressed with the practices for implementing a reading skills program unique to a particular school situation, as explained by Miss Jacobson.

The two teachers plan to use their summer vacation to develop "skill cards" related to the reading materials available in Hawthorne's learning center so that these skill cards will be ready for use by intermediate grade children at Hawthorne next fall.

MRS. MINERVA COYNE, bilingual teacher at Hawthorne School, Dist. 21, Wheeling, and the second and third grade children involved in the bilingual program took a cue from Hawthorne's PTC Hamburger Day and created their own Spanish version of this fund-raising project recently.

The Spanish Hamburger Day menu consisted of a home cooked Mexican lunch, including tacos, beans, rice, and "plenty of chili sauce."

The menu was selected by the children, who also figured out the approximate cost per person and shopped for the ingredients. Mrs. Coyne and her young assistant chefs prepared the food in the teachers' lounge and sold the lunch to teachers and students who wanted it for 65 cents.

Students who signed up for the lunch got more for their money than they had expected. While enjoying their "Spanish hamburgers" in the art room, they were treated to a selection of Spanish music and a demonstration of dancing steps by their Spanish hosts and hostesses.

The project was undertaken as part of a cultural identification unit prepared by Mrs. Coyne. This Hamburger Day was unique because it provided both the Spanish and Anglo children involved with first-hand knowledge and appreciation of Spanish culture and traditions in the United States.

THE WINTER MONTHS are long ones and many have dreams of getting away to far off places.

Mrs. Dorothy Atkinson's third graders at Twain School, Dist. 21, Wheeling, couldn't get away, so they brought one of these places to class. Mrs. Atkinson's class visited Switzerland and enjoyed tasting Swiss Chocolate and Swiss Cheese at the end of their Swiss study.

FIFTH GRADERS Miss Linda Nedelman and Don Sase at Frost School, Dist. 21, Mount Prospect, were given a special treat recently in their study of law.

Besides researching how a bill becomes a law, they invited lawyer and State Rep. Eugene Schickman from Arlington Heights to the classroom to explain first-hand how this event takes place.

Schickman gave the students pamphlets and carefully explained the steps involved in a bill becoming law. He also told what the qualifications are in order to become a representative, senator and President.

A question and answer period followed and the children asked many questions about drugs, divorce, remarriage and crime. He then explained what a felony is and gave his viewpoint on capital punishment.

Steve Lueck summed up the classes feelings when he expressed his pleasure "that such an important man would come to a fifth grade class and talk. We really learned a lot!"

AN ARMCHAIR tour of the world was presented by Paul Stanley, a missionary and parent, to Miss Cathy McCarty's third graders recently at Frost School, Dist. 21, Mount Prospect.

Stanley showed slides of Norway, Sweden, Austria, Germany, Vietnam, Czechoslovakia, Canada and Alaska.

The children were very impressed with the line guard at the Czechoslovakian border. They also were excited to see far away homes and schools in comparison to their own.

NICK ZAFER was recently named Citizen of the Month in Mrs. Susan Harris' fifth grade class at Kilmer School, Buffalo Grove.

Sixth grader, Liz Froberg, received the Citizen of the Month award in Mrs. Beverly Grave's class. This is a double award for Miss Froberg, who won the honor last year also.

MISS DEE LEVIS, a teacher at Twain School, Dist. 21, Wheeling, has been initiated into the Gamma Iota Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma sorority. The organization is made up of outstanding women educators.

Search of river for lost youth discontinued

The 10-day search of the Des Plaines River for the body of a Chicago youth believed drowned in a March 3 canoeing mishap has been discontinued, according to Cook County Sheriff's police.

Periodic boat patrols will continue to cruise the river searching for John Plenta, 18, of 3434 N. Neva Ave., who was lost while canoeing with friends near Devon Avenue.

Early rescue attempts were hampered by high water and mud conditions along the river's banks. Cook County Forest Rangers and Rosemont fire fighters made unsuccessful attempts then to find the youth by dragging the river with hooks.

Since then however, operations had been stepped up to include Sheriff's police, Chicago and Melrose Park fire department rescue workers and Illinois Underwater Recovery team divers. The divers covered a four-mile area of the river from underwater Dam No. 4, where the youth was lost, to North Avenue.

The American Red Cross also joined in the search with the Illinois Air National Guard, which supplied a helicopter and the Metropolitan Sanitary District, which contributed a boat to the search efforts.

Sheriff's police, who coordinated the search, said at one point a total of 60 rescue workers were dragging the river as far south as Lockport, some 30 miles from Chicago.

Money is name of the game for chess ace Acers

Move over, Bobby, here comes Jude

by KURT BAER

Jude Acers says someday he will beat World Chess Champion Bobby Fischer. And when he does it will be for a whole castleful of money.

Money is the reason Acers plays chess. He admits it without qualm and says he is only sorry more chess masters can't make a living at the sport.

The 29-year-old chess master is in town, a guest at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel, to give a chess playing exhibition at Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg. He will take on 20 challengers at a time today and tomorrow at 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. in the shopping center's central court.

In some respects the Woodfield exhibition is just a warm-up for Acers who will engage 120 chess challengers on ABC's Wide World of Sports April 21.

"I'M THE ONLY chess master in the country making a living out of playing chess," he says, adding he fully expects to be a millionaire long before he stops playing.

But money hasn't always been a part of Jude Acers' game.

A child of Southern orphanages, he became a chess master at 17, youngest ever at that time in the South. His early career was filled with playing chess for $15 and $20 a night in San Francisco bars and coffee houses.

"My first year on a national tour, my manager lost $10,000 on me," he says. "Today I'd want $5,000 to even walk into a tournament. And I'd want a million dollars, in the bank, to play Fischer."

Acers blames the fact that most U.S. chess masters "still have to play for crumbs" on the powerful U.S. Chess Federation, an association which he says has blacklisted him from major tournaments and refused to promote him to Grand Master standing.

The fortunes of war for Jude Acers began to turn when the eyes of the world, if not the television cameras, focused on Fischer's match with Russian Grand Master Boris Spassky.

THE MATCH, with all the antics and intrigue that accompanied it, shattered the popular image of chess as a stuffy game played by old men who sit around in winged-back leather chairs, and millions of Americans began to learn the Danish Gambit and to study the games of the masters.

Acers is not among those who criticize Fischer for his eccentric behavior during his match with Spassky, although he says he respects Bobby as "the most dangerous player in chess."

"Fischer is worth the price because you need showmen," Acers says. "But he never should have barred the television cameras. That could have killed chess in America."

The next-world championship match should be held in about two years Acers says, "if Fischer will play."

"Bobby is dangerous because he'll only quit while he's ahead. The farther ahead he gets in a match, the more ruthless, the more precise his playing becomes. It's exactly the opposite of what you would expect."

ACERS TALKS about Fischer, his habits, game strategy and personal eccentricities, the way top professional boxers study and work to out-psyche their opponents.

But far beyond the limelight of world championship matches, Acers is just as fanatical about chess in places like Woodfield and Grand Rapids, Mich., where he recently finished an exhibition.

"I love playing with children," he says, adding that "at times you have to carry them along so they learn from the game."

He will tutor a child in chess, from the ground up, for $300. It is a game that can and must be learned.

"There have probably only been two or three natural chess geniuses," he says.

It's all part of his game plan to promote chess and, not incidentally, himself. He has even authored his own motto, "All he is is everything."

Bobby Fischer, it's your move.

CHESS MASTER Jude Acers has been meeting 20 area high school chess clubs this week while town for a chess exhibition at Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg. Acers will take on 20 challengers at 3 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. today and tomorrow at the shopping center. All comers are invited to bring their favorite board and challenge the master. Acers says he is the only chess master in the country currently making a living from the game, which he learned in a Southern orphanage. Someday, he believes, he will play and beat World Chess Champion Bobby Fischer.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

A rubber bridge player would have no problem with today's hand. He would win the club lead and say to himself, "If trumps break 2-2, I will try to make seven, but if they don't break I will just draw trumps; concede a trick to the ace of hearts and take the small slam."

That is eminently correct in rubber bridge but duplicate is a different matter. When Phyllis (Mrs. Stanley) Smith of Detroit played it in the mixed pairs at the Hawaiian regional, she won the club lead; played her ace of spades; led a second spade to dummy's queen and stopped to think about seven.

She finally decided to risk the play of a diamond from dummy on the theory that

If East (who held the last trump) were void of diamonds he would almost surely have doubled six spades to get a diamond lead so she called for dummy's ace of diamonds.

West dropped the 10. Phyllis thought a while longer and led the king of diamonds. West's jack dropped and there were no more problems. She pulled the last trump; discarded a heart and two clubs on the diamonds and claimed seven.

The extra trick turned out to be worth two match points only, but she had taken virtually no risk and the top score helped Phyllis and her partner, Jim Zimmerman of Cleveland, win the event in a photo finish.

County needs merit selection

Can you name 10 — or even one — of the 76 Circuit Court judges in Cook County?

How about the 24 Appellate Court judges in the State of Illinois?

The seven justices of the Illinois Supreme Court?

Chances are that unless you are a practicing attorney or someone in the inner circle of politics, the answer to all three questions is no.

For that reason, among others, we strongly support the constitutional amendment being proposed again in the Illinois General Assembly which would change the procedure for selecting judges in all three categories from popular election to appointment by the governor.

The need for appointment of judges is most evident in the Circuit Court of Cook County. In each judicial election, voters are faced with "laundry lists" of candidates for the Circuit Court which makes intelligent selection nearly impossible.

Under the proposed constitutional amendment, already approved once by Cook County voters, three candidates for each of these judicial posts would be selected by non-partisan judicial nominating commissions. One of the three would then be appointed by the governor following a 28-day period in which the public would be given an opportunity to examine their qualifications and make their preferences known to the governor.

While eliminating the farcical situation of asking voters to make reasoned judgments on dozens of Circuit Court candidates, the appointment system would also be a step toward eliminating political clout as a means of gaining seats in the higher courts.

Though Appellate and Supreme Court districts are of more manageable size and the number of candidates is such that the public has an opportunity to examine their qualifications, the fact is that candidates for these courts are selected through political conventions. In each district of these two powerful courts, the candidates who emerge with the blessing of their party are those who carry the most political weight.

And in most of these districts, the choice of the Appellate Court judge or Supreme Court justice boils down simply to which candidate can control the convention of the dominant party in his district.

In the 1970 referendum on the state constitution, Cook County voters approved a merit selection plan for judges by 68,000 votes, but the proposition was soundly defeated Downstate. There is a reason for that.

While Cook County voters must choose 76 Circuit Court judges, in some Downstate circuits as few as three judges are required to serve areas encompassing up to 12 counties. There is ample opportunity there for the citizens to acquaint themselves with the candidates and to make reasonable choices.

Recognizing this, the proposed constitutional amendment — which was drawn by the Committee on Courts and Justice and will be sponsored in the Illinois House of Representatives by Rep. Brian Duff, R-Wilmotte — would leave the question of merit selection up to local referendums in each of the circuits outside of Cook County.

Chances appear good that the constitutional amendment will achieve the 3/5ths majority it needs in both houses of the legislature. A survey in September showed that 82 per cent of state senators and 77 per cent of state representatives favored the plan, and it has strong bipartisan support in Cook County.

At least 30 civic organizations, ranging from bar associations to the League of Women Voters, to the Illinois Retail Merchants Association, favor the plan.

But even if the amendment is passed by the legislature, it will need ratification by 3/5ths of the people in referendum.

The problem then appears to be convincing Downstate voters that the plan is sorely needed in the Cook County Circuit Court and the higher courts, but that it will not affect their system of electing local voters without their consent.

We encourage those civic organizations who favor merit selection of judges to lend their financial and informational resources to selling the plan to Downstate.

Mrs. Gandhi's logic

In an unexpected slap at the United States, Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi recently deplored the "savage" bombing of North Vietnam.

It would not have been tolerated, she said in a speech in New Delhi, had the victims been European.

It is a lamentable fact that no race or variety or nationality of people has ever shrunk from killing its own or related kinds in war or purge or revolution or repression. As proof of that, we need only recall the still-fresh horrors of the Bangladesh war.

It was not America's involvement in the war in Vietnam but its failure to support India against Pakistan last year that is the source of the present unfortunate chill that governs Indian-American relations.

The wisest thing would be to chalk up Mrs. Gandhi's remarks as something she felt necessary for domestic consumption and make no more of it.

She's disturbed by Rep. Sam Young

As a constituent of Rep. Sam Young, R-10th, I was disturbed by a news report about the freshman congressman having accepted campaign contributions last year from employees of a major American oil producer, and his being co-sponsor of a measure which would remove natural gas prices from government regulations.

Rep. Young, who sits on the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, which will consider the bill, said he was a co-sponsor of the legislation in response to complaints from oil and gas dealers and from consumers in his district. I'm curious as to who these consumers are, and whether they could possibly have been complaining about prices not being high enough!

I would appeal to Rep. Young to consider that it has been these kinds of situations which have made the public grow cynical about their elected officials, and to remember that the voters of the 10th Congressional District sent him to Washington to represent their own needs and interests, not those of wealthy and powerful businesses and industries.

The public's issue

Theroux: is tax reform ahead?

What more appropriate topic, with income and property taxes glaring at us around a corner, than tax reform?

Marshall Theroux, an assessor in Wheeling Township, is an authority on the subject, and contributes this week's "Public Issue" column on the topic, "Property taxes: what can we expect in the future?"

Theroux was elected to his post four years ago. He's legislative chairman of the Cook County Tax Assessor's Assn. He's also a manufacturer's representative and lives in Arlington Heights.

by MARSHALL THEROUX

Over 8,000 people were in touch with our Wheeling Township offices during 1972 for help or information about property taxes. The one recurring theme was: "What can I do to reduce my tax bill? It's just too high to be reasonable."

No tax is popular, but the very visibility of the property tax is probably the reason it heads the hate list. It comes all at once, in one big bill.

Most other taxes are somewhat more subtle. They are collected in little bits — drop by drop like the proverbial Chinese water torture.

To hear many tell it, the most constructive improvement that could be taken to better the lot of the average citizen would be the elimination, or at least the drastic curtailment, of the tax.

We must keep in mind that the only way to reduce the property tax without raising other taxes is for the government to spend less money. As the American Economic Foundation states: "Government is never a source of goods. Everything produced is produced by the people and everything that government gives to people it must first take from the people."

Observers generally agree that spending by schools or fire departments or police departments probably will not be lower in the future. So we can't realistically expect to see reduced local spending.

Nevertheless, it appears to me that public pressure against the property tax will force our various tax-spending bodies to seek other sources of revenue. Already we have seen the Illinois income tax has delivered many dollars to local schools and villages and in that way prevented substantial increases in taxes in most areas these last couple of years.

cal schools, may be required by the courts to find alternative methods of funding.

Two cases now before the U.S. Supreme Court have received considerable public attention. These are the "Serrano" case from California and the "Texas" case from Texas. There are also about 50 similar suits filed in 31 other states.

The thrust of this movement is the premise that, as the California Supreme Court states, the public school financing system (like Illinois) "makes the quality of a child's education depend on the resources of his school district and ultimately upon the pocketbook of his parents... such financing... denies... the equal protection of the laws."

If the Supreme Court agrees with this thesis, the Illinois legislature will be forced to direct that school monies be raised in some different way. Local school taxes will be limited.

This will not, of course, reduce the costs to run the schools, but it will vary the traditional amounts that people pay. Some will pay more; some will pay less.

It is interesting in this regard to note that Chicago, with its well publicized school problems, might come out on the short end of such a change.

According to the Research Department of the Chicago Board of Education, the property assessment per student in their district is something over $28,000.

To compare this with my area, Dist.

214 and its feeder elementary districts, we find the assessment per student calculated on the same basis is just over $17,500.

In other words, Chicago's tax base per student is about 50 per cent higher than that for the typical "rich" suburban area of Wheeling and Elk Grove townships!

This partly explains why the Chicago school tax rate on the last tax bills was $3.08 per $100 valuation and the comparable rates in this area averaged about $5.50 per hundred.

Any alternative method of funding schools is going to be difficult, but if we are forced to follow the Serrano and Rodriguez pattern I believe we will have to recognize that property taxes are going to remain the main source of school funding.

That's primarily due to the fact that the sheer magnitude of the money requirement would make present income or sales taxes seem nominal. And the public wouldn't accept doubling either of those taxes either.

So the burden falls back to the property owner. It appears the state would have two options: first, it might levy a state-wide tax, bring all these dollars into Springfield and distribute them by formula to the schools. Or, secondly, the state might establish a certain tax rate that all school districts across the state would be allowed to levy, so that the money would be collected and disbursed locally. Then those districts in which such rate would not raise enough money to meet desired standards would receive an additional allocation from the state treasury.

In either case of state property tax control, we find ourselves in another thick.

Law, common sense and justice will require that assessments be comparable all across the state. An owner of $25,000 worth of property in Decatur should receive the same state-required tax load as the owner of $25,000 worth of property in Cairo or Rockford or here in the Northwest suburbs.

And that, in turn, means it becomes more vital than ever before that property assessment be consistent across the state, as well as within any given assessor's jurisdiction.

It's fairly well documented that this is not the case today. A recent task force is the Department of Local Government known as the "Kissel Commission" recently completed an investigation into assessment practices in Cook and McHenry counties.

This report found that Cook County assessment methods are, for the most part, "secretive, discriminatory and non-uniform in application" and did not produce "relatively just and equal assessments,"

Controls needed at accident site

After reading about yesterday's car and bus accident on Roselle and Wise Roads, I felt I had procrastinated long enough in writing this.

For some time I have felt there should be a slower speed limit, a large school bus crossing sign, lights or stop signs on Higgins Road and Plum Grove Roads where the high school buses cross to Co-nant High School.

There is a 50 mile per hour sign just on the other side of Plum Grove Road leading to the school but to cars speeding along Higgins Road no one is aware there is a school there.

There are lights and signs and stop lights galore where there are stores or plant entrances and exits but where it really is needed there is none.

Let's do something about this situation now.

Olga Larsen
Hoffman Estates

Thank you

The board of education and administration of Community Consolidated School Dist. 54 would like to publicly thank the many people who performed so efficiently following the unfortunate bus-automobile accident which occurred on Tuesday, February 27, near the intersection of Wise and Roselle roads in Schaumburg.

The calm, efficient and dedicated manner in which the bus driver, Mrs. Picciotto; the Schaumburg Police Department; the Schaumburg Fire Department; Robert Frost school personnel; administrators; Schaumburg Transportation Company personnel; and our school nurses performed their duties was very gratifying to observe.

We can never repay the service performed by ambulance personnel representing the Hoffman Estates, Roselle and Ontarioville Fire Departments. When the children arrived at Alexian Brothers Medical Center and Northwest Community Hospital, the staffs there took over with calmness and efficiency, thus lessening the shock to the children and their parents alike.

Calamities such as this should never happen, but when they do, it is nice to know that people can and will work together to do everything possible for everyone involved.

as required by statute.

The commission therefore called for a state-wide Office of Assessment Practice Standards to be established and for greater authority of the state to require all assessors to follow uniform standards and methods to achieve relatively just and equal assessments, both within each assessing district and among districts.

Every concerned taxpayer should support these reasonable proposals, especially in view of the possibility that we might be faced with a court required state-wide tax levy.

In my office and at meetings of homeowners groups, PTA's and local service clubs I find a great legitimate concern about property taxes and taxes in general.

If there is one general suggestion I can make, it is that every property owner make his feelings known, not just to assessors, but also to those who have the legal responsibility to do those things we want them to do — to educate our children, give us parks and fire departments and policemen. If we want to increase the services we get, we will have to be willing to pay for them. If we want to reduce our taxes, we must let our various taxing bodies know that we are willing to cut down on what they do for us.

Our representatives, I believe, truly want to do what we want them to do. But we all have an obligation to give them guidance.

Let your voice be heard!

Illinois State Chamber of Commerce polls high school students

'True story' of business isn't told

by LEA TONKIN

The fat cats of the business world are gloating over the idea of using the federal government to subsidize their profits, and using the federal government to subsidize their profits, and using the federal government to subsidize their profits.

Intervention is in the eyes of the beholder, a recent survey of 3,000 Illinois high school students would count this a pretty accurate picture of the goings-on in the business world. The survey was conducted by the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce in 17 public high schools as an economic understanding poll.

But reality in the business world is quite different, says Lester W. Brann Jr., the organization's president. "The survey findings illustrate clearly the true story of business is not being told to students and others," he said after the survey is released Monday.

In contrast to the opinion of many high school students business profits on sales average 16 per cent, the actual profits are closer to 4 per cent, Brann said. "The free market system," he adds, "provides an opportunity for consumers to select from a wide variety of products objectively advertised and merchandised. Moreover, business is spending untold millions in far-ranging programs to expand its social responsibility role."

THE SURVEY was conducted last fall. Twenty questions on the American economic system were included in the survey.

Despite their critical attitudes of business, about 70 per cent of the students surveyed disagreed with the idea every-one capable of working should be guaranteed an income by the federal government. And nearly two-thirds of the students said the average worker lives better today than he did 10 years ago. Some 86 per cent believe large businesses are necessary to the nation's well-being and most agree the good features outweigh the bad.

Brann says the survey will be used by the association to implement a three-year program aimed at bettering business's image. Educational programs are being planned to foster understanding and to improve unfavorable attitudes.

Business needs to turn its pockets inside out, to let people know what is good and bad about its operations, says Raymond Becker of Arlington Heights, director of community and government affairs for the Interlake Inc. steel firm. He's one of a team of Interlake representatives who are already going out to tell their story to students. Along with 16 other business representatives, Becker tackled a 500-student conference at Chicago's Evergreen Park High School last week with the theme, "America's growing anti-business mood: myth or reality?"

"The answers we got from the kids were generally along the lines of the (chamber) survey," says Becker. "We think the kids' level of understanding business has been lowered in the last 10 years — that's why we're doing this.

"WE WERE happy and pleasantly surprised at the level of answers we got from the kids, though," he added. Most of the students had taken a basic economics course and were able to talk freely about the workings of the economy.

Leading off the program was a presentation of the Interlake film, "What's to become of Uncle Sam's Super System?" It reviews the free enterprise system and compares it with alternative systems.

"Then we broke off into discussion groups of 30 to 40 students," said Becker. "We talked in general about the free enterprise system. I said, 'What do you think about the term? What does it mean, something for nothing or competitively free?'" This opened up discussion of the pros and cons of capitalism and profit making.

Becker found a distrust of advertising claims, concern for social responsibility, the belief business should police its own ranks in most cases, the call for government control of transportation and a willingness to pay a fair share for the cost of environmental cleanup.

"I didn't feel they were anti business. They're not great economists perhaps, but they have great interest," Becker said. "What understanding there is, we want to keep and expand, and where there is no understanding, we think they ought to hear the story from us."

BANKERS, salesmen, plant superintendents and environmental experts were among the people rounded up by Becker to participate in the high school program. Among those was Tom Reid of Prospect Heights, who discussed consumer standards at the symposium. He is director of public affairs for the Illinois Manufacturers Association.

Louis Marchese of Arlington Heights led a group discussion on the consequences of additional government intervention in business. As in the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce survey, he found the students favored greater government controls.

"The people were very anxious to get some information on this," said Marchese. "... I think they began to realize that the country needs free enterprise and that we need certain freedom from government intervention." The discussions led to a general conclusion that government regulation is necessary for food and drug standards, uniform tax laws and in other areas, but that it is wasteful for certain other enterprises.

"They like the idea of competition, but not deception," said Marchese. They're saying, 'Businessmen, clean up your industry.'"

"I think you start out with the idea of our side versus their side. But you find that in your discussions that everyone is a consumer, and all our problems interrelate."

Look into this burglary insurance

by CARLTON SMITH

Burglary insurance, if you can't get it, is something you need pretty badly. Because, of course, it's exactly in the high-risk areas, where you're most likely to be hit, that the insurance companies decline to insure you.

So if your insurance agent tells you "we don't sell theft insurance in your area," better put stout locks on doors and windows. It's also time to find an insurance broker who knows about the insurance available under a federal program, for those who can't buy insurance from private companies. No one is turned down by the government, and policies are issued for both residential and business premises.

The government policy costs somewhat more, but in several respects it outperforms most private policies:

- It covers theft from a locked car trunk; many private policies don't.
- There's no dollar limit on loss of jewelry or furs; private policies typically have a $250 limit.
- You're covered on "observed theft" — as when burglars hold you at bay with a gun while cleaning out the house. Many private policies exclude this.
- You'll neither be denied coverage because you have a history of being burglarized — nor will your coverage be canceled because you have to use it, even several times.

On all claims, including those for the losses mentioned above, there is a deductible of $75, or 5 per cent of the gross loss, whichever is greater.

The government policy does have a couple of drawbacks. One is a requirement of solid locks on all doors and easily accessible windows. You won't be insured for this before a policy is issued — but if you make a claim, you'd better have the locks, or no pay (Earlier, a special type of "baffle lock" was required; that's now eliminated.)

THERE MUST be visible signs of forced entry. If you go away leaving a door or window unlocked, and your burglar can walk in without having to break in — that one's on you. Unfortunately, a slick job of picking your lock, with no sign of forcible entry, may leave you similarly embarrassed. (So buy pick-resistant locks.)

The federal program, under the Department of Housing and Urban Development, is administered by private insurance companies in each of the 11 states, and District of Columbia, in which the insurance is available. But any private broker or agent can sell the insurance — though many seem to be not well informed about it, or even unaware of it.

Cost of coverage is determined by the classification of your own particular locality as a high, average or low crime area.

THE COST of a $10,000 policy, the maximum coverage, is $80, $70, and $60 a year in, respectively, a high, average or low-crime area.

Quality of Life Congress

Parenting: dilemma of middle years

by ELEANOR RIVES

Improving the quality of life is the most important work in the world today, according to Lee Salk, Ph.D., director of the Division of Pediatric Psychiatry, New York Hospital - Cornell Medical Center.

Dr. Salk, author of "What Every Child Would Like His Parents to Know," was the key speaker at one session of the American Medical Association's National Congress on the Quality of Life, held last week.

This year's congress was designed to increase public awareness of the importance of the middle years, ages 25-45, when adults work for the orderly growth and development of children. Dr. Salk's session was devoted to "Parenting — The Hope of the Future."

"Fifty per cent, or more, of all hospital beds in the United States are filled with people with some emotional disorder," he stated. "Most problems have their roots in early childhood experiences."

DR. SALK CONTENDS that parents and professionals must concentrate preventive efforts on the very young, since the early years determine mental health in the mature years. Yet whom can parents turn to for help with the problems of parenting? Where can they become educated in parenthood?

The pediatrician is too busy. Professional help is available at the level of psychiatric treatment. There is little in between, Dr. Salk declared.

"Parents are the most neglected people in our population," he said.

He pointed out that behavior analysts all recognize the importance of early experience on later behavior. This conclusion may be found in books, but it stops there. It doesn't get to the parents or the pediatrician, he said.

IN THE EARLY weeks and months of infancy, each need of a child must be satisfied in order for the need to go away. "For some reason, our society thinks you shouldn't freely gratify needs," said Dr. Salk. "If a need is unmet at an early stage of development, the individual goes through life trying to gratify that need. Just as hungry people see the world in terms of their hunger, frustrated children see the world in terms of their frustration.

"What a biological organism needs at a given stage of development cannot be replaced later on," he added.

Dr. Salk pointed out some of the unbelievable myths of today: that a baby can't see when he's born, that you shouldn't pick up a baby when he cries, that his smile is "just gas," that crying is good for the lungs.

"Nonsense," he exclaimed. "Is bleeding good for the veins?"

A BABY NEEDS sensory stimulation; even as a fetus, it responds to external sound with an increased heartbeat. A baby needs handling; he needs sucking. A baby cries for a reason; the parent should try to discover the reason, to meet the need. If he is crying to elicit a reaction — to be picked up — then pick him up. Meeting his needs teaches a child he can trust people, he asserted.

"This is the type of information we should impart to parents, then let them decide for themselves," he said.

But parents are bombarded with conflicting advice from all sides. They have been influenced over the years with the false attitude that parenthood comes naturally. They lack confidence and knowledge, said Dr. Salk.

The best parent is a confident parent, one who gratifies his baby's needs and gives him a sense of trust. When the baby is seven or eight months old, a parent may begin to set limits and to stimulate his interest in the environment. The child begins to discover the world is predictable, he said.

DR. SALK'S child-rearing philosophy is aimed at trying to create people who have a capacity to love, who are respectful of the rights of others, who are responsible, and who will fill a constructive role in society. Accomplishing this objective is achieved first by instilling in the infant a deep feeling of dependency and love, then by helping him to achieve independence and cope with the frustrations, rules and regulations of the world.

"The role of the successful parent," he said, "is to render himself useless."

At New York Hospital, Dr. Salk has set up three programs to help parents in their role as molders of children. The first is for all new mothers. He explains behavior of newborn infants, advises how to get the father involved (in addition to his participation in the labor and delivery rooms) and answers all questions.

THE SECOND program is the "First Year of Life" series in which groups of 15 couples attend four sessions during the first year of their child's life. They discuss childhood behavior, compare experiences, and are reassured by the similarity of their problems.

A third program is a class which Dr. Salk conducts for 13-year-olds to impress upon them the responsibilities of parenthood and to help them decide if they will some day be able to meet the emotional needs of children of their own. In weighing their decision, they become more sensitive to the needs and problems of their parents.

"To improve the quality of life, we must teach people the importance of parenthood and of meeting the needs of their children as they develop," said Dr. Salk. "For a world of brotherhood and peace, we must create loving, constructive human beings."

Suburban Living

ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

100 artists, craftsmen at CRAFTERia art fair

A red balloon floating over Kirk Developmental Training Center in Palatine will mark the site Saturday, March 24, of the arts and crafts fair sponsored by Northwest Suburban Club of Alpha Gamma Delta.

Mrs. Henry H. Barker Jr., Mount Prospect, co-chairman of the "CRAFTERia" reports that nearly 100 artists and craftsmen will be at the show to display and sell their work.

"Some are coming from as far away as Minneapolis, Minn.," she said. "A few will be coming from Madison, Wis., and nearly every suburb from here to Gary will be represented."

Among area artists will be Joseph Romano from Niles, who has permanent displays of his metal sculpture in several Chicago loop buildings. He specializes in portrayals of people in different professions; however, he will be showing some of his three dimensional metal wall hangings.

The "clock man," Shelly Rosenthal from Skokie, will bring his collages that contain parts of watches and clocks. Eleanor Masciola, a ceramics specialist whose El-Cair Studio is in Palatine, will also be there. Also from Palatine is Nancy Fortunato whose work includes watercolors, pen and ink and scratch board.

Christi Hansen, Mount Prospect, will display her portraits of children done in oils and acrylics.

POLANDA GRAVES, a landscape artist and resident of this area, will be at the fair as will be Pat and Terry Lira of Des Plaines, designers of fabric flowers sold under the name of Pater Originals, and Flo Fenneman who creates children's name plaques from salt clay.

Of interest to men will be displays of handcrafted belt buckles and leather belts and billfolds. Joaquin Alves from Racine, Wis., will show his custom tailored leather jackets. B. William Fuerst, a wood carver from Villa Park, will be selling his hand-carved pipes.

In addition to the craft fair, members of the sorority will hold a bake sale, a white elephant sale and serve refreshments all day. Doors will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Proceeds of the fair will go to Kirk Center to purchase a video tape recorder to aid in specialized training. A donation of 25 cents will be asked at the door. The school is located at 520 S. Plum Grove Road.

Adolescents influence the family

by ELEANOR RIVES

That adolescence is an age of turmoil was the shared opinion of a panel of experts discussing "Families With Adolescent Children" at the American Medical Association's Quality of Life Congress last week.

That it is also an age of turmoil for the family of the adolescent was further stressed by Gerald Kissen, Ph.D., program policy adviser for children and adolescents for the Illinois Department of Mental Health.

"The presence of an adolescent usually influences and changes the family to a greater extent than having practically any other age children in its structure," he said.

Others on the panel were Rhea Majica Hammer, executive director of the Spanish Division of TV Channel 26; Mrs. T. Wilkins Davis, president of the Women's Auxiliary to the National Medical Association; George Williams, executive director of Parents Without Partners; Dana L. Farnsworth, M.D., vice chairman of the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse; and Robert Bermudez, M.S.W., Department of Psychiatry, Louisiana State University.

BERMUDEZ EMPHASIZED the difficulty of setting limits for adolescent behavior today. Pointing out that rebellion is absolutely essential in the identity-seeking process, he added that one of our greatest dilemmas and challenges as parents is to find ways to interact constructively with our adolescents.

"Parents should set as few limits as possible, and only those that are enforceable," he said. "The more rules you set, the more there are to be broken. Sit down and discuss limits with your adolescent — what's really important? Involve him and be as open as possible. Kids admire honesty. A few words in a frank discussion — not in anger — really sink in."

THE IMPORTANCE OF privacy was emphasized by Dr. Kissen. "We have millions of stimulated, over-stimulated and under-satisfied youngsters today," he stated. "Every person needs some privacy a part of every day."

To which Dr. Farnsworth added, "The only thing worse than no privacy is complete lack of the stimulation of being with other people."

Dr. Farnsworth voiced his concern with the youngsters who use drugs, not with drugs themselves. He noted that 70 per cent of the influences on adolescents are detrimental to their welfare. "I'm a doctor, but I'm interested in values, too," he said. "You know, compassion without competence produces quacks; competence without compassion produces hangmen."

GEORGE WILLIAMS described the complex problem of the single parent who must deal with the adolescent without the sustaining help of a marriage partner, a problem which involves, or will involve, a great many people since one out of every two marriages is doomed to failure.

Later when someone in the audience said, "The greatest thing a man can do for his children is love their mother," Williams replied that the reverse is also true.

"Why not stress faithful married love and prevention of divorce?" asked a spectator. "Why not offer this deal to children?"

Dr. Farnsworth added, "A good marriage depends more on being a good person than in finding the right person."

Sex clinics need 'housecleaning' say researchers Masters, Johnson

by DOROTHY OLIVER

Hundreds of sex clinics which are no more than corner treatment centers operating under low standards or no standards at all have opened up across the country, charged Dr. William H. Masters and Virginia E. Johnson at the American Medical Association's second National Congress on the Quality of Life last week in Chicago.

The public's need for help in sexual dysfunction is now bursting into the open and unprofessional clinics, "business centers more than sex clinics," have mushroomed to meet the demand, the two sex researchers said.

"We are dismayed, yes — but discouraged, no," said Masters. "The public will rise up and demand professional treatment."

BEFORE THAT happens Masters, director of the Reproductive Biology Research Foundation in St. Louis, Mo., called for a "professional house cleaning" by physicians, psychologists, and marriage counselors active in sex counseling.

"Professional treatment centers will have to be created, credentials established and professional training provided for counselors," he said adding this should be done on a national level.

"The social need for clinics is clear," Masters said. "But to whom can people turn, whose therapy can they trust?"

To avoid the charlatans, those who need sexual counseling should consult with a local medical society or the clinical psychology department of a university rather than "thumbing through the Yellow pages" for a clinic.

MASTERS ESTIMATED that 50 per cent of all marriages are contending with various degrees of sexual dysfunction adding that was a conservative estimate.

At present, he said, there are not enough well trained sex therapists available. "We've got a decade of training ahead of us to meet the need."

Masters and Johnson told the audience of physicians, social workers, counselors and other professionals that a "bridge of communication" must be established between husbands and wives to overcome roadblocks which thwart a successful, fulfilling marriage.

Non-verbal, physical communication as

IT WAS POINTED out that we have confused love and sex terms with our children. Love is the ability and capacity to make one's self completely vulnerable to another person. We've lost some of this concept today.

Panel members and audience agreed that we must all become involved. They reached a number of conclusions: We must counteract the anti-social and anti-family influences of TV and movies. Schools, colleges and universities must return to offering pre-adolescence education. We must teach our children more effective and adequate ways of gaining satisfaction than by the use of drugs. We may set sensible limits over enforceable behavior and let other decisions rest with the adolescent's own sense of responsibility.

And — we must get young people to believe in themselves as good people, they decided.

State Dept. seeking secretaries

The U.S. Department of State will conduct a recruiting drive for secretaries to staff American Embassy jobs abroad the week of March 19.

Heleen Gruber, a recruiting officer for the department who has served in a number of foreign posts, will do the interviewing at the Illinois State Employment Service, 9th floor, 40 W. Adams, Monday through Friday.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday and noon till 7 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday. No appointment is necessary.

To qualify a girl must be adaptable, resourceful and possess typing and shorthand skills and have some work experience. She must be 21, an American citizen, a high school graduate, in excellent health and willing to serve at any of the 300 embassies and consulates around the world.

All prospective employees must undergo a character check.

The Department of State also has secretarial positions open in Washington.

Miss Gruber may be contacted at 793-4959 during next week.

DEDICATED TO MAKING everyone aware of coronary symptoms and informing them of the area's mobile intensive care units, Arlington Heights Nurses Club members passed out pamphlets to commuters at the railroad station Monday morning. Margaret Sucher and Dorothy Cools found Harley Drake a winning listener. Club members also speak before children's and adult groups, distribute literature to public buildings and inform the public by direct mail.

Laureen Mary Bohn's engagement to Wilbert Louis Heinemann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert E. Heinemann, 737 S. Chestnut, Arlington Heights, is announced by her parents, Mrs. Charlene M. Bohn, 906 W. St. James, Arlington Heights, and Stewart J. Bohn, Atlanta, Ga. No date has been set for the wedding.

Laureen will be a June '73 graduate of Arlington High School. Will, a '69 graduate of Arlington High School, is with Kubny & Associates, general contractors, St. Charles.

Linda L. Gausman and Mark E. Ride-nour are planning a July 14 wedding. The couple's engagement and approaching marriage are announced by Linda's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Gausman, 1403 Cedar Lane, Mount Prospect. Mark is the son of Mrs. Dolores Ride-nour of Evansville, Ind., and the late D. E. Ride-nour.

Linda, a '69 graduate of Wheeling High School, will graduate in May from Purdue University. Mark, who received his undergraduate degree from Purdue, will graduate there in August with an M.S. in industrial administration.

A July 21 wedding is planned by Sharon Schumacher and Tim Thomas. The couple's engagement and approaching marriage are announced by Sharon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Schumacher, 274 Berkley Lane, Hoffman Estates. Tim is the son of Mrs. Edward Thomas, 1411 W. Kingston, Schaumburg.

Both graduates of Conant High School, Sharon is now with Union Oil Co., Palatine, and Tim is with Uddeholm Steel Corp., Elk Grove Village.

Susan Schoenfeld of Rolling Meadows might never have met her bridegroom of 17 except for perseverance in finding her way to a party two years ago.

Susan and her sister had been invited to the party given by Robert Diebold, but it was only through a mutual friend because the girls did not know their host. They lost their way enroute, almost turned back, then eventually found the address.

From then on, cupid took over. Susan and Bob were introduced, began dating and have been going together ever since.

THEY EXCHANGED vows and rings in a four o'clock ceremony in St. Colette Church, Rolling Meadows. Afterwards there was a reception for 200 guests at Northwest Builders Hall in Chicago.

Susan is the daughter of the Walter Schoenfelds, 2707 George Court, Rolling Meadows. Bob's parents are the Michael Diebolds of Chicago.

The bride chose an ivory lace gown with stand-up ruffled collar and long flared sleeves. Over it she wore an illusion mantilla veil edged with the same lace and held by a lace cap. Her bouquet was of phalaenopsis, stephanotis and orange tea roses.

SUSAN'S THREE sisters and the groom's sister were in the bridal party: Mrs. Judy Curtin of Arlington Heights, one of her sisters, was matron of honor while Jean and Maryann Schoenfeld were bridesmaids, along with Bob's sister, Mrs. Shirley Vandik of Mount Prospect, and Betty Newman, also of Mount Prospect.

The girls came down the church aisle in apricot colored Empire gowns and carried spider mums and baby's breath, all tinted apricot.

George Bauer of Evanston, the groom's cousin, stood at the altar as his best man. Ushers were Wayne Willems, Fox River Grove; John McLean, Wheaton; Anthony Muscato, Lisle; and Tom Schoenfeld, the bride's brother from Tacoma, Wash.

The newlyweds chose a week in Hawaii for their honeymoon before settling in an apartment in Schaumburg.

Susan is a receptionist for Drs. Casciaro and Rabinowitz in Mount Prospect, and her husband works for Illinois Bell Telephone Co. in Oak Brook. She is a '67 graduate of Sacred Heart of Mary High School and attended Harper College. Bob earned a bachelor degree from Illinois Institute of Technology but will receive a master's in engineering from Northwestern University in June.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Diebold

Moving couple moves to Minnesota

Neptune World Wide Moving didn't send newlyweds Jacqueline and James Anderson to the far ends of the earth, but it did send them to Minnesota where James is in the company's Bloomington office.

Jacqueline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle C. La Point, 3904 Eagle Ln., Rolling Meadows, and James, son of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Anderson, Barrington, met when both were employed by Neptune in Elk Grove Village.

Their wedding took place Feb. 17 in Community Church of Rolling Meadows. The five o'clock service was both double ring and candlelight. Jacqueline chose a white sate peau gown fashioned with re-embroidered lace at the cuffs, on the long, full sleeves and forming a panel down the front of the bodice and the A-line skirt. The hem and chapel train were also edged in lace. Her veil was held by a pearl trimmed lace Camelot headpiece, and she carried a cascade of phalaenopsis and stephanotis.

CYNTHIA NORDLUND, Rolling Meadows, was maid of honor, and Susan Stanford, Elk Grove Village, and Jacqueline's cousin, Marge Winn, Richmond, Ill., were bridesmaids. Their gowns were made with white chiffon bodices and full sleeves with sapphire blue velvet skirts. Sapphire velvet ribbons laced through lace trimmed the cuffs, sleeves and high neckline and outlined the bodice yoke. Their headpieces were of matching ribboned lace and long sapphire veils, and they carried white pompon carnations and royal blue star flowers.

Ronald Anderson, Ann Arbor, Mich., was his brother's best man, and groomsmen were Richard Threlkeld, Evanston, and Gale Holbrook, Palatine, brother-in-law of the groom. Ushers were the bride's brother, Jeffrey, Rolling Meadows, and her cousin, Keith Winn, Richmond.

A reception for 125 guests was held at the Maitre d' Restaurant in Elk Grove. For their honeymoon the newlyweds traveled for 10 days through the southwestern United States. They are now making their home in Hopkins, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. James Anderson

Auxiliary information tea welcomes interested women

The first day of spring, March 21, is the date chosen for the third annual tea sponsored by the Northwest Community Hospital Women's Auxiliary.

Mrs. William McElray, membership chairman, and her co-chairman, Mrs. Walter Pugh, extend an invitation to all area women to attend this information tea which will be held in the entrance-way to the hospital auditorium from 2 to 4 p.m. Guests will be welcomed at the front entrance by members of the membership committee, Mrs. Warren Walkley, Mrs. Fred Jasper and Mrs. Joseph Vavra.

Mrs. William Willy, president of the auxiliary, explains that the purpose of the tea is to welcome new members and to interest prospective members. She reports that volunteer service is needed in many areas. Representatives of money raising projects such as the Pink Lady Gift Shop, Pink Box Thrift Shop, Lunch Bucket, Gift Cart, Boutique Noel and others will describe the work accomplished in their departments.

FOR GUESTS who wish to become better acquainted with the hospital, Jack Ryan, public relations director, has arranged tours through some of the newer areas of the hospital. Candy Strippers will serve as tour guides.

Membership in the auxiliary is open to all women over 19 years of age. Membership fee is $5 a year. There are three luncheons planned during the year.

Mrs. McElray feels that the auxiliary has much to offer a woman whether it be in the area of volunteer work, fund raising or social. For further information interested women may contact Mrs. McElray at 392-2101.

speaking of Beauty

by Armand Gentile

Do you have an excessive amount of hair on your body?

As you probably know, the presence or absence of body hair depends upon the body's hormonal balance. A woman's glands produce not only the female hormone estrogen but also the male hormone androgen.

The balance can be upset. In the majority of women, the estrogen hormone is dominant & the hair distribution follows the normal womanly pattern. Occasionally, however, a woman may have a little extra secretion of androgen.

This extra bit may not change a thing; but if it occurs in a woman whose hair follicles are sensitive to the male hormone, it can cause an excessive growth of hair in any of the same areas that the male has hair.

The condition is called hirsutism & there is no known cure for it. But there are ways of making it less noticeable.

Electrolysis is by far the most permanent method since it attempts to destroy the hair follicles. Bleaching, depilatories and shaving are other methods.

Home remedies may work, but... Be very careful about any remedy that includes the use of estrogen, either by external application or by injection. Additional estrogen will not suppress hair growth.

Most women tend to exaggerate, in their own minds, the amount of body hair they have. The best thing to do is to see the beautician at your salon. If she can't help you, she'll be the first to advise you to consult a reputable dermatologist.

For further beauty advice, contact me at Armand's Beauty Salon, 1010 S. Arlington Hts. Rd., Arlington Heights, 392-8220.

Brian Adam Jensen is the new resident at 639 Trace Drive, Buffalo Grove. Son of Mr. and Mrs. James Jensen, Brian was born March 3. Grandparents of the 8 pound 7 ounce baby are Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Jensen, Palatine, and Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Kellogg, Hoffman Estates.

NORTHWEST COMMUNITY

Tammy Lee Skott, fourth child in the George W. Skott family of 145 S. Morton, Hoffman Estates, was born March 6. The 10 pound 5 1/2 ounce is the sister of Gary, 13, Debbie, 10, and Dawn, 4. The George F. Skotts of Itasca and the Walter Goffs of Hoffman Estates are Tammy's grandparents.

Wayne Robert Mamola Jr., born Feb. 28 to the Wayne Mamolas of Streamwood, has grandparents in the local area. They are the Joseph Pailles of Elk Grove Village and the John Mamolas of Schaumburg. Wayne's birth weight was 6 pounds 15 ounces. He is the Mamolas' first child.

Sharon Louise Kennedy makes a trio of daughters for Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Kennedy, 633 S. Elm, Palatine. Kathy, 4, and Anne, 2, are her sisters. Sharon was born March 9 at 7 pounds 15 ounces. Her grandparents are the J. MacKenzies of Addison and Mrs. M. Kennedy of Chicago.

Michael Wilson Schmitt is the name of the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schmitt, 132 N. Olive St., Hoffman Estates. His birth date was March 5, his weight listed at 7 pounds 4 1/2 ounces. Jeffrey, 2, is his brother, and grandparents are the Rudolph Schmitts of Pittsburgh and Mrs. Hattie Cole of Dover-Foxcroft, Maine.

Karen Lynn Churchill made parents of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Churchill of Mount Prospect on March 5. The 8 pound baby is now at home at 1824 Thornwood Lane. Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Churchill of Chicago are Karen's grandparents.

MEMORIAL-DUPAGE

Alicia Lynn Turner, first child for Mr. and Mrs. Gary Turner, 642 Colonial Lane, Des Plaines, was born Feb. 28 weighing 7 pounds 11 ounces. The baby is a granddaughter for Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Mugnolo, Wood Dale, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Turner, Oak Brook.

HIGHLAND PARK HOSPITAL

Robert Allen Catton III was born Feb. 26 to Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Catton Jr., 406 S. Wolf Road, Wheeling. He is a new brother for Jill Ilene, 4, and a grandson for Mrs. George Martinek, Wheeling, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Catton, Detroit.

Christopher Michael Brosnan has joined the Lorenz J. Brosnan household at 620 Twisted Oak Lane, Buffalo Grove. He arrived Feb. 26. The Brosnans have two other children, Laura, 5, and Lorenz, 18 months. Grandparents are Mrs. Edward Borek, Ulica, N. Y., and Mrs. Lorenz Brosnan, Larchmont, N. Y.

Marissa Joy Frost is the first child for Mr. and Mrs. William J. Frost, 27 Marquette Place, Wheeling, arriving Feb. 26. She is a granddaughter for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gass, 275 Grove Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. William Frost, 1180 Second Ave., Des Plaines.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Vanity has been amply served. My lemon pie recipe has proved quite a hit and the applauding mail is appreciated. It's easy to understand the astonishment of those who couldn't believe a filling would ever thicken with only eggs, sugar and lemon. Anyway, the request now is for the pie crust I use. The amount here makes three crusts:

Using a pie blender, mix two heaping cups of flour with one teaspoonful of baking powder and a good pinch of salt. Then cut in six tablespoons of hydrogenated shortening and two tablespoons of butter (or margarine), still using the blender. Don't mix too long. Then add one beaten egg, one tablespoonful of lemon juice and two tablespoons of ice water. Go easy on the water; you may not need all of it.

Divide into three parts and wrap two for the freezer. Roll out the other on a floured cloth and use a floured cloth-covered rolling pin. Place in pie tin and pinch around the edges. Then poke all over with the tines of a fork so it won't shrink while baking. Put in a 450 degree oven for 10 to 12 minutes. Watch it — the minute it's lightly brown, pull it out. Hope you like it as well as the filling.

Dear Dorothy: Here's a tip for those who want to remove white marks from waxed, sealed brick floors — usually, the result of leaking flower pots: Try a mixture of three parts vinegar to two parts liquid detergent. If this doesn't do it, straight vinegar might. If the marks are still bad, a cloth soaked in vinegar and left on overnight might work. — Mrs. T.B. Arnold.

Dear Dorothy: One more way to use your favorite household aid: I had difficulty removing the yellow smoke stains from my curtains. I finally soaked them in a solution of baking soda and warm water and laundered the usual way. They came out as clean and bright as new. — Vivian Tompkins.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

The program will include slides of projects which have won awards and a discussion of projections for the future of Chicago beautification. It is free to the public.

Speaking of . . .

Changes in the tax rules

by KAY MARSH

While no brief article can explain in detail changes in the income tax laws, here are a few of the important new tax rules that may affect your tax bill on your 1972 return.

Greater exemptions. The exemption for yourself, your spouse and dependents has been raised to $750 a person. This also means that a person can now earn up to $750 and still qualify as a dependent. (The old limit was $675.)

Persons who are blind, or who are 65 or over, receive double exemptions of $1,500.

Higher low income allowance. The tax-free low income allowance (which replaces the old "minimum standard deduction") has been raised to $1,300 from $1,050. Thus, if you are single, you can now earn up to $2,050 tax-free; the $1,300 allowance plus your $750 exemption.

Increased standard deduction. Previously, the standard deduction for you who don't itemize deductions was 15 per cent, up to $1,500. The new increased standard deduction allows you to take a standard deduction equal to 15 per cent of adjusted gross income. Married people filing separately are limited to $1,000; single people and couples filing jointly, to $2,000.

NOTE: This higher standard deduction, the new low income allowance and larger exemptions are taken into consideration in the optional tax tables you can use if you have an income under $10,000 and if you do not itemize deductions.

Revised short form. The short 1040 form, 1040A, is back, after being dropped a couple of years ago. You can use it (a) if you take a standard deduction rather than itemize and (b) if your income comes from salary and tips with no more than $200 from interest or more than $200 from dividends.

Oil company credit cards. Finance charges on your oil company credit cards are deductible as interest.

Other credit cards. You can also deduct finance charges on your bank credit cards and on retail charge accounts. You cannot, however, deduct the fixed monthly fee that some stores impose for maintaining a customer's charge account.

Political Contributions. For the first time, you get a tax break on your political contributions. Individuals can deduct up to $50, while couples filing a joint return can deduct up to $100. As an alternative, you can take a tax credit for half your contributions, with a $25 limit on a joint return or $12.50 for an individual.

Dinners for Winners - and losers. The Treasury also now holds that the full cost you pay for a ticket to a dinner or other function may be treated as a political contribution if it is "clearly in the context of a campaign" for an announced candidate and the affair is devoted primarily to political speeches or discussion.

Campaign promises. You can also, if you like, earmark $1 of your taxes or $2 on a joint return for a new fund to help pay for the 1976 presidential election campaign. You can have your money put into a non-partisan pool that will finance all qualified parties, or you can designate the party to receive your contribution.

Use the new optional form (Number 4875), Presidential Election Campaign Fund Statement, and attach it to the back of your Form 1040 or 1040A.

Tax break for working mothers. As previously noted in an earlier column, recent tax law changes give working mothers a break on child care deductions for such items as day care, nursery school fees, and in-home expenses. New rules allow deductions up to $400 a month and raise the dependent age from children under 13 to those under 15. Moreover, you can now qualify for maximum deductions with an annual income up to $18,000, instead of just $8,000.

Tax breaks are also available for the money you spend to care for a mentally or physically disabled husband or wife, or for disabled dependents, such as elderly parents who live with you.

Use form 2441 (Expenses for Household and Dependent Care Services) to itemize these costs.

Finally, remember that the above paragraphs offer merely general guidelines, not definitive instructions. Expert help and answers to your questions are available at your local Internal Revenue Service office. Many happy returns!

Psychiatrist speaks at Saturday brunch

A Paddock Review

'Promises' most enjoyable

by GENIE CAMPBELL

With recent long runs on both Broadway and in Chicago, the musical, "Promises, Promises," needs no introduction. Nor does the suburban theater guild, Music On Stage, slight the musicals glowing reputation with its rendition currently being staged at Wheeling High School.

For those who have not yet seen the show, now's a golden opportunity. "Promises, Promises" is one of the most enjoyable major productions I have seen at a community theater group present.

Using the screenplay "The Apartment" by Billy Wilder and I. A. L. Diamond, composer Burt Bacharach and songwriter Hal David collaborated with playwright Neil Simon to create "Promises, Promises." And that says something right there.

A LIGHT-HEARTED contemporary piece, "Promises, Promises" is about a young, rather naive bachelor bent on getting ahead in the business world. Chuck is easily manipulated into allowing certain business associates to use his apartment to carry on their own out-of-the-office romantic affairs. All of this, of course, for a few good words to the boss who has his own ideas about the uses of Chuck's one-bedroom apartment.

It's a spoof on business hierarchy and a humorous tale about a "good-hearted Joe" who gets himself in deeper and deeper.

Lively and fast paced, "Promises, Promises" never lags. A good production crew quickly and smoothly ties the scenes together and other than a few lighting mistakes, there are no technical difficulties to interrupt the production.

The songs, like the dialog, are buoyant and appealing, highlighted by several that have hit stardom on their own, like "Knowing When to Leave" and "I'll Never Fall in Love Again."

THOUGH Greg Zlomek, who played the role of the young idealist, Chuck Baxter, did not alone make the play a success, he is certainly the standout of the production.

On stage the entire time, unloading his problems in confidence to the audience, and always trying to be the nice guy but mostly getting in hot water for it, Greg easily bridges that identity gap between stage and audience.

Spontaneous, natural and sincere, he is not playing acting. His performance is very real.

Though some of his numbers in the first act were overpowered by the orchestra, Greg showed he can hold his own when he managed to carry on opening night despite the accidental tripping of the school fire alarm. It's the first time on stage with Music On Stage for Greg, a student of speech and drama at Northwestern University.

Also on top of her role is Marie Peterson as the beautiful and poignant Fran Kubelik, who is all mixed up in her love life.

Her scornful comments to her married lover would warm the heart of any girl who has been jilted at least once in her lifetime, but then poor Fran (she is only human and love always rules over common sense), lets her resolution drop and becomes an innocent partner in a one-sided love affair.

ELIGIBLE, good-hearted Chuck is interested. But he doesn't seem to appeal to Fran. Such is life.

Other cast members who deserve mention are Ted Weiss, Hal Genesen, Pete Piper and Dan Kreisman who play the four executives who plague Chuck for the use of his apartment. (Reserving a hotel room is just too crude.)

Mike Wouds plays Dr. Dreyfuss, Chuck's neighbor. Only aware of the number of women going in and out of Chuck's apartment he continually yells to his wife, "He's at it again."

And Karen Mason makes a memorable impression in whatever production she joins. Here as Marge MacDougall, a girl who picks Chuck up in a bar Christmas Eve, Karen gets act 2 off with a highly amusing start.

Dancers Donna Alpers, Judy Brandt and Lauren Lubeck show off their talents at the office Christmas party to "Turkey Lurkey Time."

"Promises, Promises," will again be presented this weekend, Friday and Saturday at Wheeling High School.

Musical director of the show is Bill Cotsakis and director is Tom Ventris.

Camille Baranchik is the choreographer.

THINGS YOU MAY NOT KNOW ABOUT CONSERVING ELECTRICITY

Keep your thermostat constant.

When you set your thermostat at 70 degrees, your heating system warms your home to that point. Then it automatically turns the system off. Your insulation holds the heat inside as long as it can. When your home cools below 70 degrees, the thermostat starts the system reheating. It's easier on your heating equipment and your bill to settle on a desired temperature and leave your thermostat there. If you have a radiant heating system (baseboard or ceiling cable), usually 70 degrees is a comfortable setting.

Because of air movement, moving air systems may require settings somewhat higher. Every degree over 70 adds about three percent to your heating bill. If you're as comfortable at 72 degrees as 75 degrees, you can save almost 10 percent at the lower setting. For additional savings, you may want to lower your thermostat at night and when you're away from home for a long period of time. These principles apply essentially to all heating fuels—electricity, gas, or oil.

We have a booklet that covers heating as well as other areas where you can conserve energy. We'll send a copy of "101 Ways to Conserve Electricity at Home" to you free. Just write Commonwealth Edison, Department AV, P.O. Box 767, Chicago, Illinois 60690.

DuBrow on TV...by Rick DuBrow

Webb's new show holds its own against 'Family'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — CBS-TV's "All in the Family" series, despite being video's top-rated show, has not been able to deliver a knockout blow against its head-on NBC-TV competition, "Emergency," a weekly program about paramedics.

On the contrary, "Emergency" has turned into one of the sleeper ratings hits of the season. Not only has it hung in there against "All in the Family," it has surprisingly gained considerable ground on it in the rankings.

While the NBC-TV entry doesn't have much chance at the moment of beating out television's most popular series, the paramedic stories nonetheless are further proof of Jack Webb's ability to make contact with a video audience and keep it interested.

WEBB, OF COURSE, was an enormous hit in the old "Dragnet" series, as a police officer. And now his production company is offering weekly network shows that are attracting large numbers of viewers. One such series is NBC-TV's "Adam 12," also about police officers, and a steady ratings winner. The increasing ratings success of "Emergency" is his latest triumph in video fiercely competitive world.

Back in the area of frankly commercial network competition, an NBC-TV spokesman says: "Any place else in the schedule, 'Emergency' would be a top-10 or 15 show weekly."

And the ratings figures bear him out.

WHS jazz ensemble sets Mundelein date

The Wheeling High School Jazz Ensemble will premiere a newly composed work by jazz composer Thomas Hilliard at the Mundelein Jazz Festival Saturday.

Other local schools, including Conant, Rolling Meadows and Prospect High schools and Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove, also will appear at the festival, which will run from 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Mundelein High School.

The all-day contest will result in the selection of three bands to perform in an evening concert scheduled for 7 p.m.

The Hilliard work, titled "Word Song/Gospel/Jubilee," was commissioned especially for the Wheeling Jazz Ensemble. Hilliard has performed with bands led by Tex Beneke, Les Elgart and Skitch Henderson and has performed with many popular singers.

For example, the national rankings for the week ending Feb. 25 had "Emergency" in 31st place, a solid showing considering the block-buster appeal of "All in the Family."

The latest national ratings — for the week ending March 4 — have "Emergency" tied for 19th position, which is a formidable showing. In the 70-market rankings for the same week, "Emergency" came in 15th.

WITH ITS RATINGS increase, the Webb series also has gained ground on the NBC-TV show that competes with its last half hour each week, "Bridget Loves Bernie," a routine comedy treatment of family complications that arise from the marriage of an Irish Catholic girl to a Jewish boy. It is widely believed in the video industry that has comedy owes its ranking in good part to the fact that it follows "All in the Family" and gets a strong lead — in audience.

Despite this boost, however, it finished only two positions higher than "Emergency" in the new national ratings, coming in 17th.

There are a lot of small things to help your car's driving performance this winter. Snow tires. Rain tires. Anti-freeze. Things like that.

There are also a lot of small things to improve your driving performance this winter. Small things like being extra alert, being extra aware of driving conditions, and being aware of how best to deal with those conditions. Small things like remembering to maintain constant speed when driving across a patch of ice. Pumping the brakes evenly when you want to stop on a wet or icy road. Remembering to give yourself extra stopping distance on any slippery surface.

Rock Hudson's making it on TV-and as a bachelor

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Rock Hudson is one of the few survivors among movie stars who attempted a television series in the past year or two.

Where Glenn Ford, Anthony Quinn, Jimmy Stewart, Henry Fonda, and Jim Garner failed, Hudson, as the star of "McMillan and Wife," prospered for a second season.

Divorced almost 10 years ago, the 6-foot, 4-inch, 200-pound actor lives in an enormous, Spanish-style home on a peak in Beverly Hills.

Under his supervision the house was almost completely rebuilt, making a few spacious rooms from a multitude of smaller ones.

The place looks like a movie set. It is decorated with heavy, man-sized furniture. The decor is Spanish and Mediterranean and expertly coordinated by a professional decorator.

HUDSON'S DOMICILE reflects the man's personality. There are wall-to-wall record albums, mostly Spanish music. His library is well stocked with biography, novels and history. Various tables are laden with movie scripts sent him by hopeful producers.

A live-in housekeeper takes care of the cleaning chores and prepares all Hudson's meals. She plans the menu and he simply returns from Universal studios and sits down to dinner.

More often than not Rock has a few friends in for the evening meal, after which they head for a converted three-car garage which is now a 30-seat projection room. Two or three nights a week Rock shows movies.

Usually they are brand new films. Occasionally the fare is an old classic. Never is a Rock Hudson picture included.

"How many times would people want to see 'Paza, Son of Cochise'?" Rock asks. "I was the worst looking Indian in movies."

HUDSON IS essentially an introvert. He dislikes eating in restaurants and big parties make him self-conscious. For that reason he entertains a great deal and enjoys small dinner parties at the homes of friends.

A dog lover, Rock has a pair of mongrels named Sally and WeeWee, a Schauzer who answers to Murphy, and a couple of German Shepherds, Fritz and Nick.

A huge yard and patio give the dogs plenty of space to run. His property also allows Rock to indulge his favorite pastime, gardening. There's a greenhouse, too, where Hudson spends hours planting, watering and pampering a variety of flowers, plants and shrubs.

If Hudson looks trim it's because he works at it. Twice a day he takes a sauna bath just off his bedroom. Then, still dripping with perspiration, he plunges into his swimming pool — kept at a chilly temperature — and swims its length for 15 or 20 minutes.

This ritual takes place every morning before reporting to the studio and every evening after work.

HUDSON'S OVERRIDING passion is contract bridge. He will play the game almost any time, anywhere, with anyone. During lunch break, on his NBC series he can be found in his dressing room or a corner of the sound stage playing bridge.

When he isn't showing pictures in his home projection room he almost certainly is in the library with three friends playing bridge.

Although he is the dapper Stewart McMillan on the tube, Rock off-camera is happily sloppy in blue jeans or corduroys, canvas shoes and an open sports shirt.

Rod Taylor a happy divorcee

by VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —Rod Taylor, Australia's answer to John Wayne, is divorced and plans to stay that way, noting, "Infidelity is a constant hazard to actors."

Taylor, happily for him, enjoys working under hazardous conditions. He recently co-starred with Wayne in "The Train Robbers" and now is headed for Africa and MGM's remake of "Trader Horn."

But robbing trains and facing charging elephants isn't the sort of peril that appeals to Rod. He fancies the most dangerous game of all, Femininity Americana.

"PUT IT THIS way," said the Australian. "I don't want to get married again because I don't like to cheat on a girl I like."

"And being an actor the temptations are overwhelming. You go on location someplace in the middle of nowhere and your leading lady is beautiful, interesting and just as lonely as you are."

"Now I ask you, what red-blooded American — or Australian — man can resist the circumstances."

Clearly Taylor's resistance is low, a situation which accounts for his perpetual grin.

"Now if a man wants a family I think the perfect setup is the film company," Rod said. "It's ideal. You get together for a few weeks or months, and when it breaks up there is no alimony to pay."

TAYLOR IS A free spirit, a former amateur fighter in the land of kangaroo, who likes women, a good drink and plenty of action.

He doesn't like desert locations.

"Wayne and I spent endless weeks in the Mexican desert riding horses. On the last day of filming I turned to Duke and said, 'I'd never do another picture on the desert.'"

"I'd had it with the heat, the sand and longed for the comforts of civilization. But exactly four days later I was in the middle of the Sahara—the biggest damned desert in the world—for 10 weeks."

"They'd asked me to costar in 'Heroes' with Rod Steiger."

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have been examined by an internist and told that I have spastic colitis. I never had any constipation or diarrhea, but I do have severe gas pains, generally later in the day. I was told to eat a general diet and was given a tablet called Mylaseon to take after each meal for the gas. This tablet seems to do very little good. I would like to know if there are any foods that aggravate the condition or what I could do for relief.

Dear Reader — Spastic colon is a very common complaint. The entire digestive tube including the esophagus, stomach and intestines contains layers of muscles. These muscles squeeze and contract to propel the food along the digestive tract. In almost any location along the digestive tract these muscles can go into spasm and literally shut off the tube. When it occurs in the colon it is called irritable or spastic colitis.

As a segment of the colon clamps down, it can trap gas and cause severe pain. Some of the pain may be caused from the actual cramping. There may be areas where the colon is severely contracted and other areas where it is markedly dilated. Normal rhythmic muscular contractions of the colon are disrupted.

Many individuals also have intermittent constipation and diarrhea with small hard stools interspersed with mucus and watery stools. Often this condition follows a long-standing laxative habit for simple constipation.

The colon is significantly affected by our emotions. When an individual is under stress, the muscles in the colon may contract and cause this problem. For this reason, a number of medicines are used which tend to relax the colon and prevent the spasm.

THE INITIAL treatment for the irritated colon includes a bland diet, which eliminates roughage, hot, cold and spicy foods or drinks. Coffee (including decaffeinated products), tea, colas, soda pops, and alcohol should be avoided.

The bland diet can include fruit juices, cooked cereals, breads, soups and broths with rice (without spicy seasoning or vegetable fibers — puree all vegetables), cheese, eggs (not fried), puddings, gelatin, junket, chicken, liver, sweetbread and fish (not fried), white potatoes (boiled or baked), rice, macaroni, mashed carrots, asparagus tips, stewed or strained tomatoes, pureed green vegetables, and fruits without peels. You should avoid salads, skins, fibers of all fruits and vegetables, seasonings, whole grain cereals, tough meats, and uncooked fruits and vegetables. Cooked oatmeal and rice are fine.

THE DIET for irritable or spastic colon is somewhat different from that for simple constipation. With simple constipation one uses bulk foods, fresh fruits and vegetables to help relieve the problem. These are often irritating to the person who has colitis. After a spastic colon is under control, the doctor often encourages the patient to liberalize the diet more in keeping with preventing constipation.

The diet is just part of the program. There is also the problem of managing associated constipation. When it occurs and is an associated factor, it may require giving medicines to relieve the colon spasms. Cigarettes should be eliminated. Since many of these problems are associated with psychic stress, these aspects of the person's problem need to be explored and help given where possible.

Chemist's invention to aid diagnoses

by EDWARD V. MCCARTHY
NEW YORK (UPI) — A New Jersey chemist has come up with an invention which, according to a Massachusetts Institute of Technology professor, could be a scientific breakthrough.

The technology developed by Norman Haber, president of Haber Instruments, Inc., of Palisades Park, N.J., is known as the Haber Electro-Molecular Propulsion (EMP) process.

It is, basically, a means for separating the components of any matter — blood, oil, ink — you name it.

"Properly developed and placed into mass use," Haber said, "it can give a doctor an on-the-spot analysis of urine, blood or saliva to determine the condition of a patient — even the victim of a traffic accident at curbside or trapped inside a wrecked auto.

"IT CAN CHECK out a newborn infant for possible defect or diseases that are difficult or impossible to track down at present."

"It can be used to separate precious metals from the earth," he said.

The EMP device is not much bigger than a cigar packet.

A simple plug goes into any 110 volt circuit and it can be rigged, Haber said, so it works off a car cigarette lighter socket.

In practice, a small piece of white paper is inserted into the holder and moistened with a chemical. Then the material to be separated — a drop of blood for instance, or a line, drawn on the paper about a quarter of an inch long with a ball point pen — is placed on the paper.

HABER PLUGS in the device and presses the button to turn it on. Within seconds the material separates itself, its components spreading out in rainbow colors along the sides of the paper.

"Under the proper conditions," said Haber, "these elements, now separated, can be quickly identified. This is true even of colorless components, through the use of a different type of paper and chemical."

"When developed for use for that purpose it could even be used for an on-the-spot analysis to determine if a person is a narcotics addict, or, if in a stupor from an overdose, just what drug caused the condition so the proper medical aid can be applied," he said.

Haber said he offered the process to major companies for development.

The Almanac

Today is Wednesday, March 14, the 73rd day of 1973 with 292 to follow.

The evening star is Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Pisces.

German-American scientist Albert Einstein was born March 14, 1879.

On this day in history:

In 1743, the first town meeting in America was held in Boston.

In 1812, the U.S. government authorized the issue of the first war bonds, floated to buy military equipment for use against the British.

In 1947, military and naval bases in the Philippines were leased to the United States for 99 years.

In 1964, Jack Ruby was found guilty of killing assassin Lee Harvey Oswald, slayer of President John F. Kennedy. Ruby was sentenced to death but the conviction was overturned and he died while awaiting a new trial.

A thought for the day:
President Harry Truman said, "The responsibility of the great state is to serve and not to dominate the world."

Pocket Electronics
Ed Landwehr

The new pocket electronic calculators can do a whole of a job in figuring the best bargain among the hundreds of different sized packages and boxes on the grocery shelf. You can calculate individual prices and add your total purchases at the same time because these little instruments have memory banks. A touch of the button, and the answer appears.

Calculator prices were high at first, $200 and more, but now you can buy them for $50 or $60. Most are American produced, but Japan is entering the market which will knock the price down further as competition increases.

Electronic computing is a big part of servicing at Landwehr's Home Appliances, 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights, too. Of course, these meters are different than calculators but the principle is the same. It makes a job easier, more accurate and faster. When you need TV service, phone 255-0700. ## Euthanasia: New meanings are being constructed

Is there a right to die with dignity?

by DAVID HENDIN
First in a Series

The problem of whether we should prolong useless life (or painful dying) has come to be represented by a single word: euthanasia.

The immediate association that comes to mind upon reading or hearing this word is "mercy killing," but advocates maintain they are really referring to the word's literal meaning, "a good or happy death," "an easy and painless death."

The semantic entanglements over the implied meaning are the center of much of the controversy over the subject. The Euthanasia Society and the Euthanasia Educational Fund, groups that promote the "good death" doctrine have considered a name change — centering, perhaps, around "Death with Dignity" — because of adverse reactions to the word euthanasia.

A GOOD DEAL OF resistance to the word today is probably due to man's revulsion over the Nazi war crimes, many of which were performed by physicians misappropriating the word euthanasia as a cloak for their murders.

"It's a common misunderstanding that we advocate mercy killing, but actually mercy killing is the complete antithesis of what we seek. The question is not one of killing people. It's the question of letting them die," says Jerome Nathanson, chairman of the board of the New York Society for Ethical Culture and a proponent of euthanasia.

Hundreds of letters pour into the Euthanasia Educational Fund's cramped New York offices. They are typed by secretaries or scrawled on scraps of note paper. They are from the uneducated as well as the professional, from students and grandparents, nuns, clergymen and laymen.

The vast majority of them share the opinion expressed by Mrs. George C. Barclay, a 71-year-old volunteer in the group, who says, "We should have a reverence for life, yes. But we should have the right to die with dignity. You shouldn't drag out a good life."

Euthanasia is an ancient practice. Ge-deal of practical interest in the subject. But as the science advanced, so did the controversy.

It is only in the last few decades that man has acquired the medicine and the technology that enables him to ease pain and suffering humanely and also to increase human life span from 47 1/2 years in 1900 to 70 1/2 in 1970.

Perhaps, however, we have learned to prolong and extend lives too well. Have we begun to pay too much attention to the quantity of human life and too little to its quality? In our haste to improve life-sustaining and resuscitative technologies have we gone too far? Have we reached the point where life itself may be more terrifying than death?

"WITH SOME justification," argues Dr. Frank J. Ayd Jr., editor of the Medical-Moral Newsletter, "an increasing number of doctors have voiced objections to the 'obscenity of modern dying' — a ritual sacrifice on the altar of technology."

"Some have gone so far as to inform their own friends and relatives to carry on their person a card stating, 'I do not wish to be resuscitated. I want to die with dignity — and forever.'"

Is it possible that 20th-century man, who basks in the glory of his achievements, so far has been guilty of misusing his glorious creations?

Has he reached the point where the healers, the technologists, and the rest of us are subject to Sir Theodore Fox's famous rebuke: "We shall have to learn to refrain from doing things merely because we know how to do them?"

The classic deathbed scenes familiar to us through our art and literature are rare today. Formerly, man died at home, surrounded by relatives and friends. He was aware of approaching death and he prepared for it. Today, however, the intimate circle of family and friends seldom gathers at the home of a dying loved one to exchange final words of love, faith and wisdom.

The deaths of Washington and Lincoln, great men of the country's past, stand in contrast with the deaths of Eisenhower and Truman, who were not permitted to die so easily.

TODAY MOST DEATHS occur in the hospital. Death is no longer a peaceful, though grievous occasion, enveloped by the warmth of familial feelings. Now when man dies his mind is fogged by drugs, he is alone, surrounded and sustained only by the hum of machines.

Family members often resent being deprived of the chance to share life's waning moments with their loved ones; and the dying surely must wonder why after years of shared sorrows and joys they cannot be allowed to face the greatest of all crises with their families.

Certainly, if a terminally ill person longs for the relief only death can offer he should be permitted to have, at the very least, assurances that his life will not be needlessly prolonged.

THE REV. Joseph Fletcher warns "the white coat of medical care takes on a darker, more threatening hue, an uglier symbolism. We are discovering that saving life is not always saving people. And that death may not always be an enemy to be fought off, but sometimes a friend to be helped and invited."

The serious question that now arises, however, is who should make such decisions of life and death. Many have warned of the implications inherent in leaving this kind of decision to any single person, especially the physician. One reason given is simply that it is a doctor's job to save, not take lives.

There is no question that it would be a difficult task for the conscientious and thoughtful physician to determine at what state of an illness a patient would qualify for euthanasia. What criteria could be drawn? Would a 70-year-old qualify for euthanasia at the same stage of disease as a 20-year-old, or a baby born with serious congenital birth defects? Would a genius be allowed to die at the same point as a moron?

These questions, and many more, will have to be thoroughly discussed before any formal steps are taken in the direction of "the good death."

DEATH AS A FACT OF LIFE

ographer Strabo, in the first century B.C. wrote that the elderly people on the Greek isle of Cos, having outlived their usefulness to society, would gather at an annual banquet to drink a lethal poison.

IN MASSILIA, now modern Marseilles, one of the oldest Greek colonies, a death potion was made available in a public repository for the use of any citizen who could justify before the Senate his motive — usually illness, sorrow or disgrace — which led him to desire death.

With the rise in Christianity in the first three centuries A.D., the approach to euthanasia and suicide underwent a complete change. From the beginning the Apostle Paul argued against any form of self-destruction, and he was followed by St. Augustine and other fathers of the church.

Although the opinion of the church remained clear, medical opinion on the subject was never fully crystallized during ancient times. Of course, medicine was not then sufficiently advanced in its life-prolonging powers to warrant a great

The moment of victory for Sam Young. Election night in the Northwest suburbs placed Sam Young in Washington, D.C.

Sam Young: rookie congressman learns his way around

by GREG KINCZEWSKI
Special to the Herald

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sam Young spent his first months in the Capitol coping with hassles that haunt all freshman congressmen — finding a home, relocating his family, hiring staff and cramming for new responsibilities.

Now the 10th District Republican can look forward to enjoying a set of circumstances denied most congressional novices.

He's been assigned to the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, a job for which he's qualified and one he dearly desired. It should give him an opportunity to express the views and look out for the interests of his predominantly affluent constituents — tasks on which he places top priority.

And the "fiscal responsibility" he has so long advocated is no longer just a conservative's dream. President Nixon's sudden determination to bury the big government and big spending of the New Deal-Great Society has made it the hottest issue in town.

"WHAT I HAVEN'T enjoyed about moving to Washington are the problems of settling my business, finding a place for my family and organizing my office," Young said. "I'm glad that's behind me."

After a strenuous 10-month campaign ended with his election in November, Young had no time for a vacation. The day after the election he plunged into winding up business in his private Glenview law firm.

Then he began searching for a home, finally deciding to rent a townhouse in Washington's fashionable, expensive Georgetown section.

Most of Young's family — his wife, Bonnie, and daughters Elizabeth, 20, and Ellen, 15 — have moved with him. His son, Sam Jr., 18, remained in the district to finish his senior year at Glenbrook High School.

"ELIZABETH LIKED moving and had no trouble transferring from Ohio Wesleyan to Georgetown University. Ellen, who just started high school, wasn't happy at first but we think she'll enjoy a girls' school out here," Young said.

"My wife had to give up her interior decorating firm she shared with my sister in Glenview, but she's been kept busy by the orientation meetings of the Congressional Wives," he added.

Bill Kling, Young's administrative assistant, thinks his boss has a bright future in the House of Representatives.

"I think the congressman is well on his way to becoming a damn good representative — he's got all the proper instincts," Kling says.

"This might be his first elective post, but he knows his way around government," he said. Young was an assistant secretary of state in Illinois and later served with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

"But most important, he's very aware of the need for a good constituent service. He puts that on the same level as his legislative work," Kling said.

YOUNG HIMSELF makes it clear he is going to take great pains to express in Washington what he thinks is the consensus of the highly affluent, educated people of the 10th District — Northfield, Maine, New Trier, Niles and Evanston townships.

To stay in touch with his constituents, who elected him over liberal Abner Mikva by a narrow margin, Young plans to travel back to the district every weekend.

With the help of his staff, Young has been familiarizing himself with pending legislation and parliamentary procedure. This has occasionally kept him in his office until early morning.

"My boss asked me to tell Young to take it easy, that his hours are making the rest of the members look bad in comparison," joked Steve Berg, administrative assistant to Rep. Robert H. Steele, R-Conn.

Berg is a former press aide to Rep. Harold Collier, R-Ill. Collier's son is in charge of Young's offices in the district.

YOUNG'S TIME the next few months will be dominated by Commerce and Finance Commission hearings in three areas he already has some expertise in.

"We'll examine no-fault auto insurance, warranty requirements by the Federal Trade Commission and a series of housekeeping amendments to the Federal Securities laws," Young said.

"These are very complicated issues and I'll keep an open mind during the hearings," said the man who drafted securities and motor vehicle laws while in state government and taught economics at the University of Illinois and business finance at Northwestern University.

Young is also going to be extremely interested in Congress' reaction to President Nixon's budget message, which attempts to reverse a tide in government that has flowed from Washington for 40 years.

For the first time since Franklin D. Roosevelt came to power during the Depression, the federal government is rejecting responsibility for determining and solving the nation's social problems.

INSTEAD, NIXON'S budget places top priority on avoiding tax increases and holding down inflation — problems

Young feels "are the most critical things confronting Congress."

Nixon's plan is to make drastic cuts in existing federal programs and agencies and to refuse to spend money already appropriated by Congress.

More than 100 federal grant programs designed to aid the unemployed, stu-approval at the budget. They argue that helping provide jobs, housing, medical care and education is just as important as keeping taxes and inflation down.

Young is not one of them. Indeed, last spring when Nixon was trying a deficit budget to stimulate the economy, Young made it perfectly clear in his primary developed, where if a state increases its income tax a certain per cent, the federal government would correspondingly lower its rate," he suggested.

A big part of the pending battle over the budget is the question of whether the President has the Constitutional authority to refuse to spend funds appropriated by Congress.

The administration says he can impound such funds because the President's job is to solve the nation's economic problems.

Many congressmen contend that this interpretation ends their control of the nation's purse strings — a power clearly enunciated in the Constitution.

"PERSONALLY, I think Congress should determine spending policies and the President should carry out those policies," Young said.

"But Congress, by spending too much money so foolishly, has forced the President to intervene in spending policies for the economic good of the country," Young argued.

"Thus, I support the President's actions because Congress defaulted its responsibilities. If anyone is to be blamed for this problem, it should be Congress, not President Nixon," he concluded.

Young suspects a lot of the criticism leveled by his colleagues at the President is caused by embarrassment more than anything else.

"I feel most congressmen are glad to see the big spending end, but they're embarrassed that the President was the one who had to do it. This highlighted their own inability," Young said.

"I hope this embarrassment will prompt Congress to start putting its own house into order, to start reasserting the fiscal authority it has lost," he continued.

"For example, the Appropriations and Ways and Means Committees are already setting up their own computer systems to help them cope with fiscal matters," Young noted.

ALTHOUGH ONLY A freshman in the House of Representatives — where seniority is the key to influence — Young has outlined an impressive list of goals for his first term.

"I obviously want to help Congress re-assume fiscal responsibility and to remedy a number of tax deficiencies. I plan to suggest to Gov. Walker that Illinois' income tax be collected by the federal government. This would eliminate the state's complicated forms and make people less likely to cheat on their returns," Young explained.

"I also want to work to eliminate some of the red tape in the more technical areas of law and business and to improve health care programs," said Young, a former vice president of the American Hospital Supply Corporation.

Young realizes these initial goals are bound to result in disappointments and frustrations, but he still relishes the prospect of two years in Congress.

"Whether or not I achieve all my goals, I'm confident I can perform a good many services for my constituents. That will be a very satisfying experience in itself," he said.

New face on the Hill.

dents, farmers, veterans, small businessmen, the mentally ill and federal housing tenants will be slashed or abolished.

Most of these specific grants will be replaced with $6.9 billion of special revenue sharing funds given to state and local governments for four broad purposes — law enforcement, education, urban community development and manpower training.

Estimated savings, according to the President's experts, will be $17 billion in fiscal 1974 and $22 billion in fiscal 1975. Total federal civilian employment is supposed to drop by 46,000.

This won't keep federal spending from rising due to population increases and some inflation. But the federal deficit is supposed to fall from $24.8 billion in fiscal 1973 to $12.7 billion next year.

MANY SENATORS AND representatives have expressed shock and dis-campaign that he favored a balanced budget.

"I welcome the President's new budget ideas because the ridiculous overspending by government in recent years has had a devastating effect on everyone's income, including those it was supposed to help," Young said.

"I am particularly pleased by the President's plan to return the flow of government back to state and local levels, where money and programs can be administered most effectively," he continued.

YOUNG ESTIMATES that under the present system his district gets only $1 back in services for every $10 it sends to the federal government. His staff is currently working to get the exact figures.

"I would like to see the federal government lower its taxation and the local and state governments raise theirs," Young said.

"Maybe a matching program could be

"I'll try to keep an open mind."

Elk Grove falters, 69-49; Elgin handles St. Patrick

The home team won. With their points going under the home team's score, Niles West ousted the Elk Grove Grenadiers from their own sectional by a convincing 69-49 margin last night.

The winning Indians of coach Billy Schurr will face either Maine South or Wheeling at 7:30 p.m. Friday for the right to play next Tuesday afternoon in Northwestern University's super-sectional.

Maine South and Wheeling meet on Elk Grove's court at 7:30 this evening.

The Grens, who had 12-point performances from Bob Prince and Ken Politz, trailed 18-8 after one quarter but surged to a 29-29 halftime score.

After going up 36-35 midway through the third quarter, the roof fell in on the Grenadiers. Niles West's Joe Steiner hit a bucket at 4:14 to put the Indians out front, 37-36.

They wouldn't trail again, reeling off 13 straight points through opening moments of the last period for a 48-37 lead. Steiner had nine third quarter points and finished with 19, one behind Dan Welter, Niles' leading scorer with 20.

All told, the Grenadiers went nearly seven minutes overlapping the third and fourth quarters without scoring a point.

Elk Grove finished the game with three starters on the bench. Mike Millner sustained an elbow injury midway through the third period and played only sparingly afterwards. Politz and Prince fouled out.

The difference was definitely the third quarter when Niles opened up a 15-7 margin and 44-36 lead at period's end. Elk Grove took just six shots, hitting two, field goals by Jeff Stewart and Politz.

The winning Indians hit nine of their first dozen shots while moving to leads of 6-0, 10-2 and 14-4 before the stunned crowd.

Elk Grove, a 25-point regional winner over Mid-Suburban champion Prospect, couldn't rebound against the Indians. The Grenadiers finished their season 15-8. Niles West moved to 19-5.

ELGIN SURVIVES SCORE

Small but gutsy St. Patrick threw a huge scare into stateranked, 25-1 Elgin in the opener of the Fremd Sectional Tuesday night. But the heavily-favored Maroons and their big height advantage finally prevailed in overtime, 67-61, on the work of 7-foot center Jeff Wilkins.

The entire game was a see-saw affair with neither team ever leading by more than six until the overtime. St. Patrick bowed out with a 16-10 record.

St. Patrick fought back from a 53-48 deficit with four minutes left to take the lead 1:10 later on sophomore Emmet McGovern's basket. Elgin again went ahead on a layup by Terry Drake with 1:27 left.

The Maroons stole the ball with 45 seconds left, but a one-and-one free throw was missed with 28 seconds left and the Shamrocks grabbed the rebound.

They held the ball for a last shot until McGovern drove into the lane and drew a foul from Wilkins with three seconds left. McGovern missed his first try but made the second to force it into overtime.

McGovern twice tied the score in the early stages of the extra session, but then huge Wilkins took over with four straight baskets from close in.

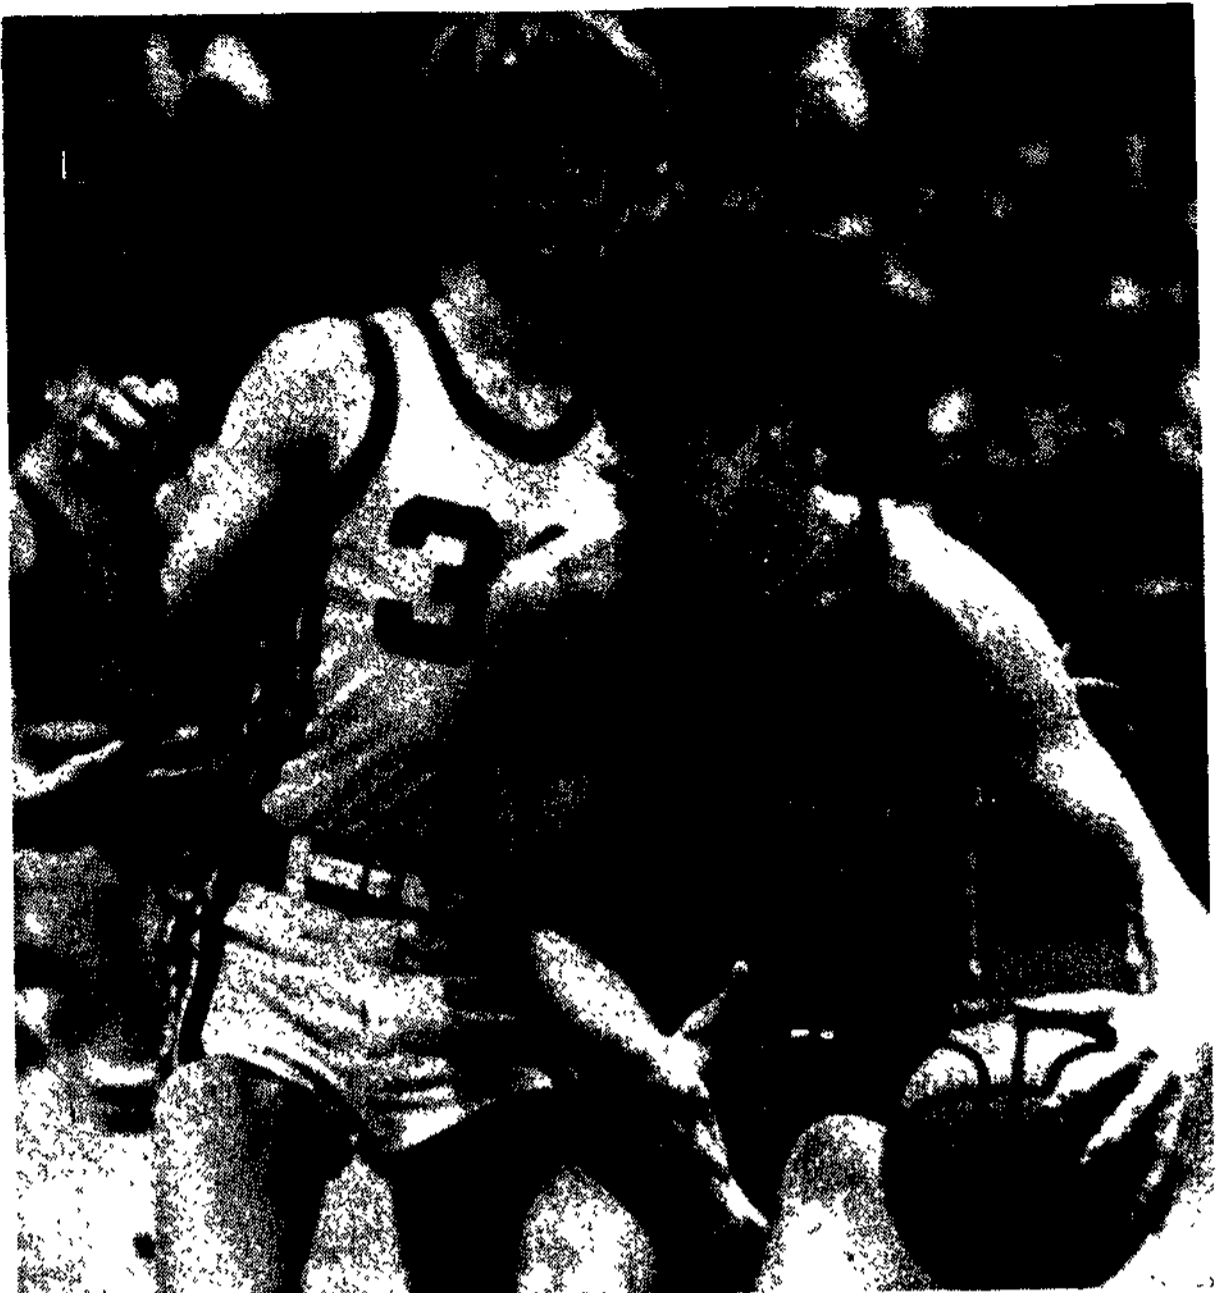

Wilkins easily led all scorers with 29 points, almost all from underneath as the Shamrocks, with no player taller than 6-foot-3, could not stop him. Pete Zimmerman scored 18 and McGovern 17 for St. Pat.

Elgin led early by four points, but St. Patrick came back for a 14-14 tie after a quarter with each starter scoring.

St. Patrick then forced several turnovers and gained its biggest lead, 20-14. Wilkins led Elgin back, but the Shamrocks led 30-27 at the half. The second half was nip-and-tuck until the final hectic moments.

Two more Wheeling, Palatine hope to stay alive in tourney

SERIOUS CARD. Arlington's Bob Bunn is a serious young man as he drives on Wheeling's Bill Kenney in first half Friday of the Wheeling Regional championship. Bunn had the hot hand in the first half with five long-range baskets, and Kenney delivered the two pressure free throws in the closing seconds that gave Wheeling a 55-54 victory and spot in the Elk Grove Sectional.

You can expect plenty of shooting and scoring and not much hesitation in tonight's two Herald area sectional basketball struggles if past track records mean anything.

The word "track" might even be taken literally, since there figures to be a lot of running — entertaining Indiana basketball, the way the fans like it. This should especially be true at Fremd, where Palatine meets favored St. Charles, and perhaps also at Elk Grove, where Wheeling is the underdog against Maine South.

Palatine, St. Charles and Maine South all have shown a tendency to fast-break and can explode for a lot of points in a hurry. And Wheeling, while more deliberate, also will run when it has the chance and also has a potent offense.

Both games begin at 7:30 and fans would be well-advised to leave early and use car pools. Both the gyms and parking lots at Fremd and Elk Grove figure to be packed.

The winners will meet Tuesday night's victors (see details elsewhere in this section) in Friday night's title games at 7:30 with supersectional berths at stake.

Wheeling and Maine South met once before in a sectional, in 1969. That was at Arlington and it was the first time Wheeling had made it that far. Tonight will be the third. Maine South, of course, is an old hand at sectional tournaments.

In that meeting four years ago, South had a big size advantage on the Wildcats, but Maine won by just 66-56. The Hawks again are taller this time, but not by as much.

St. Charles has the edge in experience in pressure playoffs, since the Saints are making their third straight sectional appearance (the last two were at East Aurora) and Palatine has made it this far for the first time since the Ron Kozlicki days of 1963.

But St. Charles must know how Palatine feels since the old Fox River town also was a sectional stranger for many years until 1971.

Here are capsule summaries of each team appearing in tonight's big battles.

WHEELING

COACH: Ted Ecker.
ENROLLMENT: 2780.
CURRENT RECORD: 18-6.
LAST YEAR'S RECORD: 15-9.
REGIONAL RESULTS (at Wheeling):

Beat St. Viator 40-39; beat Arlington 56-55.

TOP STARS: Pat Smith, 6-foot-4 forward, is an aggressive leader who can take charge of a game. He's averaging about 12.5 points a game and also rebounds. George Kaage is leading board man and carries an 11-point average. Bill Pickler is another jumping jack.

STRENGTHS: Great balance — as Ecker says, "Not just for five guys, but about eight. Each player is unique and we can go to different ones for different situations." This depth could be quite a help.

An abstract strength of the 'Cats is their response to pressure. They've pulled out some close ones and haven't been badly beaten yet.

WEAKNESSES: "We're not big," admits Ecker, "and that's something we can't do anything about. We'll be giving up size in the front line."

MAINE SOUTH

COACH: Bernie Brady.
ENROLLMENT: 3500.
CURRENT RECORD: 19-4.
LAST YEAR'S RECORD: 23-2.
REGIONAL RESULTS (at Maine West): Beat Maine West 81-60; beat Notre Dame 71-46.

TOP STARS: Jerry Jones was fourth in Central Suburban League in scoring with 18.8 average, but as Ecker says, others can hurt you too. Bill Harbeck and Bob Westman averaged over 13 per league game.

STRENGTHS: Great overall team speed and quickness with a press and break that can demoralize a team. Also fine rebounding and balanced scoring.

WEAKNESSES: As Brady frankly says, "Nothing in particular. In two of our losses the kids were not mentally ready to play and in the other two, we were just beaten by great performances."

COACH'S OUTLOOK: "We need a good game in all aspects. We'll just try to coordinate everything and play a sound all-around game."

PALATINE

COACH: Ron Finrock.

ENROLLMENT: 1800.
CURRENT RECORD: 9-13.
LAST YEAR'S RECORD: 9-12.
REGIONAL RESULTS (at Palatine): Beat Conant 54-53; beat Fremd 66-62.

TOP STARS: Jim Sander is only 6-foot-3 at center, but plays like a 6-8 boy the way he jumps. He averages 18 points and 15 rebounds a game and leads the team in both respects. Guards Andy Knotek and Rick McCormick have three years of varsity experience behind them.

STRENGTHS: A very quick, pressure defense that forced a flock of turnovers in the regional; good speed and outside shooters.

WEAKNESSES: Inconsistency on offense, a defense that at times has given up a lot of points, and a lack of size.

COACH'S OUTLOOK: "The name of the game is stop Vitali," said Finrock of St. Charles' 6-foot-5 all-around superstar. "We've got to keep the ball away from him and check him off the boards. Whether we can do it or not I don't know, but it's the only way to approach the ballgame. We can try to hold Vitali below his average but there's no way you can shut him off completely. He's that fine a player."

"We've been successful when we push it and press, and we'll stick to the kind of basketball that has worked for us."

ST. CHARLES

COACH: Ron Johnson.
ENROLLMENT: 1270.
CURRENT RECORD: 20-7.
LAST YEAR'S RECORD: 17-11.
REGIONAL RESULTS (at DeKalb): Beat Geneva 66-53; beat DeKalb 83-74.

TOP STARS: Need any more be said about Vitali? He does everything on the court, including averaging a dazzling 27.5 points and 13 rebounds per game. Guards Jeff Howard (6-foot-2) and Gary Ayala (5-8) are fine playmakers who keep things moving.

STRENGTHS: A fast break that has averaged more than 70 points for 27 games, many off steals, and the all-around brilliance and leadership of Vitali.

WEAKNESSES: None really stand out, although the Saints do not have great balance or size and sometimes give up a lot of points because of their fast style.

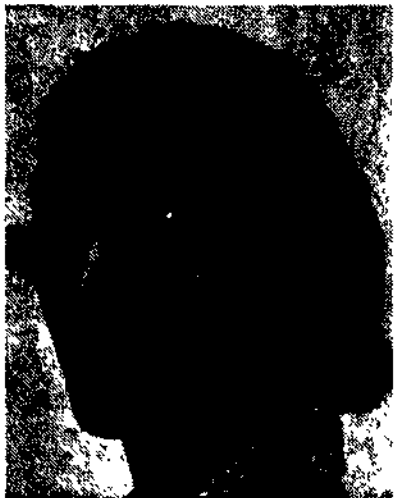

COACH'S OUTLOOK: "Palatine's press has been successful, but if we can break it and not turn over the ball too often, we can win," says Johnson.

Maine West-105

This tall, slender senior compiled a 25-4 season record and placed sixth in state for the Warriors. He was a Ridgewood district and Evanston sectional champion before winning two and losing three at Champaign. Coaches selected Gano to the All-Central Suburban League team. He was undefeated in conference meets, losing his only regular season match to Jerry Foster of Waukegan.

JIM SYLVERNE
Maine East-112

He had the unfortunate luck of drawing defending state champion Mel Commisso in opening round action at Champaign, losing 2-1. But Sylverne stormed through four wrestleback matches, eventually beating Grant's Pat Welter 7-1 for third place. He was a Ridgewood district Champ and Evanston sectional runner-up. Sylverne finished 33-3-1 and was selected to the All Central Suburban League team.

CRAIG MANN
Elk Grove-113

A conference, district and sectional champ, this senior matman also won the Lake Park tourney. His one defeat all year was in the opening round of the state meet. He pinned nine opponents and had only 25 match points scored on him over his 24-bout season. Won 46 of 50 matches over the past two seasons.

JOHN BECK
Conant-126

Out of 20 opponents this season, Beck pinned 11 and shut out six more while compiling nearly 250 match points. The Cougar junior compiled a 23-5-1 season mark. He won the Mid-Suburban League title at 126 and treezed to a Lake Park district crown by pinning two foes and romping 15-0 in the finals. Beck was eliminated from further competition at the Evanston sectional.

RANDY McALISTER
Palatine-132

A junior, he didn't catch fire until after the Mid-Suburban conference meet, then won seven straight bouts through district and sectional competition to earn a berth in the state meet. McAlister's subsequent losses in the sectional finals and opening round of state competition were to Bruce Zimmer of Niles North and Clyde Ruffin of Dixon. They went on to place second and first in state respectively. McAlister compiled a 24-12 season record.

KENT LEWIS
Wheeling-138

Blanked an astounding total of 18 foes and yielded only 45 points while gaining his second trip downstate this year. He was Mid-Suburban champion, district champ, sectional runner-up and placed fifth in state while losing only one of five bouts in the Champaign tournament. Last year, Lewis finished third in state. The senior Wildcat compiled a 36-5 record.

STEVE MCGUINN
Fremd-145

He pinned two of three opponents in the opening rounds enroute to a district title after placing third in the conference meet. McGuinn then finished third in sectionals. He was also a runner-up in the Palatine Holiday tourney, losing a 1-0 decision to Doug Chirico of Naperville, eventual state champion. He pinned 10 foes and scored nearly 200 match points during his 30 bouts this season. McGuinn compiled a 25-4-1 record.

STEVE DOLPHIN
Forest View-155

This senior grappler was a conference runner-up and district titlist, second at Evanston's sectional and captured his first bout in the state finals. Then hard luck struck. Dolphin was forced to default out of competition with cartilage damage to his right knee. Dolphin compiled a 27-4-2 record for the Falcons. Over half his victories this season were by pin or shutout.

KEN SMITH
Wheeling-167

He dropped down one weight class at tournament time to capture both Mid-Suburban League and Lake Forest district titles. Very surprisingly, Smith was then eliminated from Evanston sectional competition by losing his first match to Scott Vaughan of Maine East. Smith also won the Glenbrook South Holiday Tournament crown at 155 pounds enroute to a 29-2 junior season.

MARC GRANT
Maine East-185

This powerfully built Blue Demon wrestler was a heavy favorite to take state honors at 187 pounds before being sidelined, 3-1, by Gale Selover of Sterling, the eventual state champion. Grant then won three wrestleback matches before losing to Joliet West's Dwayne McCallum in a third place bout. Grant finished the season 36-2. He was a Central Suburban, Ridgewood district and Evanston sectional champion in addition to winning the Glenbrook South tournament.

KEVIN PANCRAZ
Hersey-Heavyweight

Big Kevin went all the way to the championship bout of state finals before absorbing his first defeat in 34 matches. The setback was to New Trier East's Ken Stewart who also lost just once during the year — to Pancratz in sectional competition. Fifth in state last year, Pancratz two-year record was 615. He won the Glenbrook South Holiday Tournament plus conference, district and sectional titles and pinned 18 foes enroute to a runner-up finish in the Champaign meet.

All-star mat team shows 346-44-7 mark

The first annual Paddock Publications All-Area Wrestling Team... it's a real killer

There's one Illinois state champion — honorary captain Jack Horowitz of Maine North — five other state meet placers and nine Champaign qualifiers in all.

Combined, the dozen selectees recorded 346 wins, 44 losses and seven ties. Five exceeded 30-win seasons.

Ten schools are represented on the Paddock team, selected by Wrestling Editor Keith Reinhard and Mike Klein.

ing's Kent Lewis and Ken Smith.

The team's three lightweight wrestlers all come from Central Suburban schools — Maine North's state champ Horowitz, Maine West's Fred Gano and Maine East's Sylverne. All other choices were pulled from within the Mid-Suburban League excepting Grant at 185 pounds.

Perhaps the best part of this team is three wrestlers will return next year — Conant's John Beck, Palatine's Randy McAlister and Wheeling's Ken Smith.

Taken together, it's a team that could make any coach look magical. It's a team we're proud to announce.

FAN FARE

Are changes necessary?

Final look at state meet

by KEITH REINHARD
Wrestling Editor

When it's all over, there are two ways of analyzing the state wrestling tournament.

One method — the common one — is by looking at the statistics.

The other is by peering at a road map.

The 1972-73 Illinois prep mat season has been safely tucked into the record books so it's about that time again.

The figures tell the same old story. The power is located along the perimeter of Chicago, from Franklin Park around to Evanston.

A surprising show of strength emerged from the Quad Cities area. And Chicago came up with a bit of muscle too, for a change.

There were several other slight shifts in the overall picture as well, but wrestling is still pretty much at its best in the western and northern suburbs as it has been for a good many years now.

From Russia to a title

State wrestling champion—Jack Horowitz of Maine North

by MIKE KLEIN

The Champion is a foreigner. A transplanted Russian Jew. A quiet, unassuming and friendly young man who lives a life of sacrifice.

He's among the most deserving in Illinois prep sports' Brotherhood of the Mat. One of just a dozen who've proven all the rest are something less.

The Champion's from a land few Americans will ever see and fewer yet understand. Rather, he's lived in five countries on three continents. Quite a lot for any young man.

He's been around the world from Leningrad to Niles. With a stop at Israel along the way. But since his fourth birthday, The Champion has called America home. Had a chance to visit his birthland and promptly turned it down.

"We didn't like it there," The Champion remembers now. "I guess anyone would get out if they could."

He was born in Leningrad, Russia, on June 21, 1955. The Champion is Jack Horowitz. A leader in his chosen sport.

A quiet 90-pounder who'd really rather eat than starve, the latter a price he pays to maintain so little weight.

"My pants are all too small now," said Jack, milkshake in his hand, ample food supply quickly disappearing from the nearby plate.

Shakes and other delicacies have filled out all of Jack. Since winning at the IHSA championship meet two weeks ago, he's added nearly 20 pounds.

"My mom's never been to a wrestling meet. She's always anxious for it to end so that I can eat," said Jack who's piled his trade through six years, 127 wins, 19 losses and one tie.

"And with my mom it's really tough not to eat. Typical Jewish mother," Jack said. "Here I am, maybe 10 pounds overweight and mom's throwing all the food in front of me."

This is Jack Horowitz. He wrestles not for headlines. Or to earn school assemblies, such as sports neophyte Maine North bestowed upon him.

The glory doesn't matter. It's personal accomplishment that counts. And he has some candid ideas that might sound awfully surprising.

"During wrestling season, I just wish I could find things to do," said Horowitz who generally dropped into 12 hours of lullaby time after undergoing a Dan Blum practice.

"When you can't eat, you've just got to put your mind on something else. Time just crawls by. Count the seconds."

"I'm not kidding. I don't see how anyone can stand it," The Champion said. "I mean, I know kids who like to wrestle. Really like it. How can you like to wrestle? Losing weight... can't eat... or drink..."

And the injuries; he's got one. A bad right knee, inhabited by pulled and strained ligaments plus bleeding between the joints.

Yet, Jack ignores the food and pays the daily practice bill, often against kids three or four weight classes heavier.

And like any true champion, he seeks yet another challenge. This weekend, it'll be the Mayor Daley Youth Foundation meet at Navy Pier.

Then on Sunday, March 25, he'll be at California State College in California, Penn., for a duel between the Illinois-Pennsylvania state champions.

In late April, he'll submit to another big test — the senior national AAU freestyle championships, April 26-28, at Waukegan High School.

All the big names will be there. Right along with the big man, Chris Taylor. You've heard of him before?

Jack's saga — the life of a champion — began with just under two years in Leningrad, a spacious early 18th Century city built by Peter the Great on Gulf of Finland shores. It is the northernmost major city in western Russia — "a window looking on Europe."

Before Jack's second birthday, the Traveling Troupe Horowitz had migrated to Poland where it nestled down for nine months.

Nearly two years in Israel followed. Then a brief stop in France. Finally, New York City on Jack's fourth birthday. "I didn't even have a party," The Champion remembered.

His family settled in Chicago. It's moved three times since 1959, ending up in northwestern Niles after a stint in Skokie.

Jack first contacted wrestling fever after watching older brother Eli perform briefly for Niles East.

"Eli and his friends used to have contests to see who could pin me the fastest," Jack said. Time came when Eli, now a Northwestern University senior, and his friends had their troubles with Jack.

"That's why I went out for wrestling in seventh grade," The Champion said. "I thought I was good."

Nineteen wins, three losses and third place in state proved his suspicions correct. As an eighth grader at East Maine junior high (now called Gemini), Jack went 19-2 and placed second in Illinois.

But Jack started his amateur career slowly and admits, "I thought I was going to quit. My first match, I was wrestling a kid that was supposed to be pretty good. He beat me, 1-0."

"The second match, I got a kid from Jefferson junior high in Waukegan," Horowitz said. "I was beating him, 4-2, and was on top with around 15 seconds to go in the third period. So I sort of let up and we both went running off the mat."

"So I come walking back on the mat all smiles, looking up at the crowd all proud of myself. All of a sudden, he jumps me from behind for a takedown and wins, 5-4."

"What got me," Horowitz said, "is we were both out-of-bounds. I thought we'd be starting over in the center."

But Jack stuck it out, beating some pretty good kids along the way. One was Mickey Rossetti, now of New Trier West, who's been downstate twice.

"I thought we'd tied that match," The Champion said. "I didn't know until the day after that I'd beat him. I thought it was 4-4. It was 6-2."

Another he met and conquered was Fred Gano, sixth place state finisher this year at 105 pounds for Maine West.

"He laughed at me before the match because he was five inches taller," Jack said, a smile spreading across his 17-year-old face. "Talk to him about that match sometime. Took him right down to his back," Jack won, 6-0.

"I was always a pretty good tumbler," Horowitz said. "Besides, I was too light for 98. I thought I'd get killed."

But he stuck with wrestling over tumbling, met George Jurinek and began the route toward perfecting his octopus-like leg routine.

"He's the one that started me using the legs," Jack said of Jurinek, current Maine East head coach and former top man at the University of Illinois.

"The other kids were so big that if I wrestled their upper bodies, they were always a lot stronger," Horowitz said. "I couldn't ride 'em, so I just had to cling on somehow."

It's a style that has advantages for Horowitz, no longer a 90-pound weakling. "I hate wrestling kids that use their legs," he said. "It hurts. You get aches and pains from it the next day."

He spent just one year at Maine East, finishing 5-2 in freshman competition and dropping his only two varsity matches.

"I don't think he was so outstanding we thought he'd be a state champion," Jurinek said, remembering his single year tutoring Horowitz.

"But he's worked hard at his particular style and it's really paid off. He counters the other guy's moves and comes up with the legs."

There's been virtually no stopping Jack since he first pulled on a Maine North uniform. He's been 63-0 overall, finishing with a 34-2 senior campaign.

Along the way, Jack's accumulated All-Conference status twice, two district titles, two Prospect Tournament championships, one sectional runner-up berth, nine of 10 possible school records, selection as his team's Most Valuable Wrestler and nomination to the scholastic All-American wrestling team.

And, oh yes, his Illinois state title. The damaged knee... restricted diet... hours of sweaty labor... mental sacrifice... it's all been worthwhile for Horowitz who's already looking forward to a collegiate career at Northwestern, Purdue, Ohio State or Michigan.

"I can't see quitting when you're good," he says. Jack Horowitz is The Champion.

Prospect thinclads win

Prospect and Forest View staged an evenly-matched indoor track meet in the Knights' fieldhouse although both were handily defeated by Glenbard North in the double dual. The Knights topped the Falcons, 53-46.

The meet included three double winners — Prospect's Mike Skelton and Ray Nee and Forest View's Jim Wise.

Nee, one of the area's best long jumpers last spring, won that event with 19-8 1/4 and also the 50-yard dash in :5.9. Skelton, who appears to be one of the better hurdlers around, took the 60-yard high in :8.8 and the low in :8.1.

Wise was the best distance man, winning the two-mile run in 10:16.7 and the mile in 4:47.9. Wise was the second-best cross country runner in the Mid-Suburban League last fall.

Forest View had four other individual winners — Rich Novak with 49-3/4 in shot put, Don Rohde with :58.0 in the 440, Rich Nilsson with 2:06.7 in the 880 and Jim Kistein with 10-0 in the pole vault.

Prospect's other first-placers were Rich Vandenbussche with 5-8 in the high jump and the mile relay team with 3:52.8.

Forest View won the frosh-soph meet easily, 73-36.

Are changes necessary for state mat tourney?

In all fairness to the grapplers from these areas, there probably should be some adjustments made in the tournament setup changes that might strive toward getting the best 16 kids at each weight level down to the state finals every year. "Too many good wrestlers are left behind," is the legitimate complaint of many suburban coaches, who often are storing all their gear away before the sectionals even commence.

For these mentors the hurdles leading toward the big showdown in Champaign are almost insurmountable. "If I can get a wrestler qualified for the state meet, I breathe a sigh of relief," moaned one local helmsman. "He'll invariably do well once he's down there but getting him to that point is about 90 per cent of the battle."

"It doesn't seem fair that a wrestler from around here has to work so doggone hard to qualify for state when someone else of maybe equal or lesser ability from another region is coasting all the way," cried another coach. "From the time the tournaments start you have to be just about letter perfect to cut it... one little mistake... one small letup and you're dead around here."

A good example of this "meatgrinder" situation is Fremd's John Lynch. He had three wins over kids who eventually made it downstate and took a 22-12 state into the sectional, let up just once against a wrestler he had already beaten twice, and sat out the state meet in street clothes. Chuck Meade of Forest View, another good competitor, lost a tough district opener and never did have an opportunity to wrestle back into contention.

Van Wintz of Elk Grove, the 185 pounder who beat Meade, himself dropped a disputed overtime decision in the sectional that cost him a state finals berth. Schaumburg's Gary Evans' long list of victims during the season included state 98-pound champ Jack Horowitz, but the Evanston competitor at 105 was so grueling he failed to even make it out of the wrestlebacks.

The statistics emerging from this year's gathering at the University of Illinois echo a similar restraint. Of the 24 youngsters making the trek from Evanston to Champaign, all but four scored points in the finals.

Seventeen out of 24 from West Leyden won at least one match down state.

Eliminate the kids from these two sectionals and 15 of the 24 wrestlers in the championship finals are taken away. Couple in the East Moline sectional representatives who made it to the title bout and all but three of the 24 finalists are accounted for.

What this boils down to, is having 21 state champs and runnersup (including all dozen winners) representing 72 entires and three second place finishers representing the other 120 matmen.

Similar patterns emerge every year. Over the past four seasons, at least, the sectionals representing the western and northern suburbs have ranked no worse than third in total points scored at the state meet. Central Illinois sectional representatives have not fared better than seventh on this list over the same span. Chicago's downstate entries have not during this time been higher than sixth.

It would appear that some shifts in the power structure are strongly warranted. And then you drag out the road map.

One look at the district and sectional setup in Illinois indicates that there are already logistical problems downstate. Grapplers from this area who hop on a bus for a 10-minute ride to their district meet and moan about the 20 miles they have to drive to get to their sectional would probably be astounded at what southern Illinois kids endure.

Grapplers from Lawrenceville, near the Wabash River outside of Vincennes, Ind., journey 150 miles to Murphysboro near the Missouri border just for district competition. If they advance, the next step involves nearly a 200-mile voyage to the sectional north of St. Louis.

This past season five of the eight sectionals were conducted within an hour's drive of Chicago. That allows for only three more arenas over the remaining 90 per cent of the state. Peoria and Pekin sit adjacent to one another on the Illinois River yet they go to sectionals over 100 miles apart.

The tourney at East Alton last month encompassed an area of roughly half the state.

Needless to say, a further concentration of the tournament action in the suburbs would only tend to increase transportation problems in the other corners of the state. And that in turn would likely prompt an opposite reaction to the hopes of Illinois wrestling coaches in general... which is to see the sport expanded and become more popular all over the state.

But there are some potential revisions of a practical nature.

One, of course, is the breaking up of the Chicago sectional. The Illinois High School Association, which determines wrestling tournament policy and procedure, is probably extremely wary of the complaints from Public League coaches that such a move would prompt however.

Nevertheless, a temporary elimination of this sectional would be a genuine improvement. It would quite likely prompt the Chicago teams to move out of their domain more often in search of competition, in an effort to regain parity with their neighbors.

Other possible changes in the system might be to seed strong teams from one area into weaker districts from another area, stray away from the concept of making all district tournaments seven- and eight-team meets, revamp the tournament structure on a year-to-year basis to favor the stronger areas, or increase the number of sectionals and subsequently increase the number of championship meet entries.

The possibility of a two-class wrestling setup, similar to the one employed for the state basketball playoffs, is another idea already being encouraged by a number of mat buffs.

And how about the idea of throwing the whole current system away and coming up with a new one... one which brings the team concept back into consideration?

Granted, wrestling is by-and-large an individual endeavor. But it's practiced at a team level right up into district combat every spring. Then, only lip service is usually acknowledged.

Team standings are calculated at the sectional and state tourneys, but do they accurately reflect the true composite ability of the schools involved?

Niles North, for instance, probably didn't win more than a couple of dual meets all season yet finished 26th in state. Glenbard North lost every one of their conference bouts but finished on top of 10 Mid-Suburban League schools in the state rankings.

Fenton was a team winner at Champaign without fielding one individual winner and with only three representatives in action. How do the Bisons size up against other strong dual meet teams such as the Leydens, Maine East, Naperville, Granite City, the Joliet schools, Carmel and Libertyville?

The solution might be to advance a whole team as well as the two dozen individuals from each of the district and sectional meets conducted every February.

By the time the tournament reached the state level then, there would be, theoretically, the best eight clubs in the state to vie with one another for a genuine state title. This would be much the same as the setups employed for cross country and golf where individuals are allowed to excel but not at the expense of the total team effort.

To accommodate a larger gathering for the state finals, the tournament could be conducted on two separate weekends or an additional session could be added on Friday or Saturday morning.

With 30 representatives from each sectional going to the finals, the meet could also eliminate first round wrestlebacks completely. It might also be worthwhile considering the idea of advancing four from each weight class per sectional and completely eliminating the wrestlebacks but allowing twice as many deserving youngsters the opportunity to at least savor the excitement and sense of accomplishment derived from competing at Champaign.

DRIVING UNDER against Fremd's Terry Whiteley, with Larry Coughlin backing him up on defense, is Palatine center Jim Sander. He was successful enough times to lead all scorers with 20 points as the Pirates won their own regional and a berth in the Fremd sectional with a 66-62 victory. ## Just Dogs

by Dave Terrill

International K.C.—
The entry for the 33rd annual International Kennel Club show closes today, March 14. There are a number of people interested in what the total entry will be, some are predicting over the 1972 entry of 3,875.

This spring show, which will be held on March 31 and April 1, attracts not only a large entry but also a lot of spectators. Last year's show had more than 40,000 people attending.

The site of the show, the International Amphitheatre, lends itself ideally for holding a major dog show of this size. From the standpoint of the general public, there is something for everyone. Sled dog racing, Whippet, Afghan and Saluki racing, indoor field trials and obedience trials, plus the regular dog show classes make up the two-day format.

Even the younger exhibitors are also in the spotlight with junior showmanship and junior dog judging supervised by professional show judges.

For information regarding the show, you may call the International K.C. office, at 927-3500, and ask for Mrs. Helen Shaughnessy.

Miniature Schnauzer Specialty—
The day before the International show Friday, March 30, the Chicago Miniature Schnauzer Club, Inc., will hold its Spring Miniature Show at the International Amphitheatre.

Sweepstakes judging will begin at 1 p.m., followed by the regular classes. Judge for the Sweepstakes will be Dan Kiedrowski, editor of "Schnauzer Shorts." The regular classes will be judged by Mrs. Olive Moore from Trenton, N.J.

This will be the 17th spring specialty show to be held by the Chicago club and one of the largest in the nation for the breed. Admission is free and will give spectators a good chance to see this pretty little dog, which is now the fifth most popular breed in the country.

Conformation & Obedience Funmatch—
The Chicagoland Weimaraner Club is holding a conformation match, open to all sporting group breeds, and an obedience fun match, open to all A.K.C. recognized breeds, on Sunday, March 25.

The location is Glenview Naval Air Station, Drill Hall, Bldg. 10, Admiral Ewing Drive, Glenview. You may enter the main gate off of West Lake Street. Judging will start at 10 a.m.

The conformation classes will be for puppy dog and puppy bitch divided 6 to 9 and 9 to 12 months. The Open dog and bitch class will be for over 12 months. The obedience classes will be sub-novice (a dog can not be entered in sub-novice and novice and neither handler nor dog having been exhibited at any licensed trial), Novice, Graduate Novice for dogs without a leg toward CDX, Open (dog can be entered in both Graduate Novice and Open) and Utility.

Mail entry fee is $3.00 and gate entry is $4.00. Make your check payable to the Chicagoland Weimaraner Club, Inc., and mail to the Match Secretary, Dorothy Hill, 3445 Willow Rd., Northbrook, Ill. 60062. Regulation entry form must be used, and in addition the tear-off on the reverse side must be signed and attached to entry.

You may contact Mrs. Hill at 490-3046 for entry form information.

Barks & Bays—
Friends of the editor have a dog named "Bandit." At least they did not do what another dog named "Bandit" accomplished. This one escaped a shipping crate inside an airliner and flew 30,000 miles across the United States twice to Honolulu and Tokyo before discovery.

Iron Horsemen set seven state marks

Dick Donalies of Hoffman Estates and six other Iron Horsemen (a club which Dick and friends formed just two years ago) recently set seven state records at the Central AAU Junior State Power Meet in Macomb.

The new records are: 123 pound class — 165 pound bench press by Jack Daulton of Buffalo Grove, 165 pound class — 340 pound bench press and 1210 total by Bob Fisher of Skokie, 220 pound class — 380 pound bench press and 500 pound dead lift by John Kruse of Carol Stream, and 520 pound squat and 1360 pound total by Donalies.

The team also won both best lifter trophies, Bob Fisher in the light division and Donalies in the heavy division. In addition, the team trophy was awarded to the Iron Horsemen.

Donalies said that the club now has 76 powerlifting awards and has earned the reputation of being one of the best lifting clubs in the state. He also said that an Iron Horsemen team has been training hard for the upcoming Senior State Power Meet, which the club will be hosting.

The once-a-year State Powerlifting Championship Meet and Mr. Illinois Physique Contest will be held on Sunday, April 29 at the Aurora YMCA. Advance tickets, at a reduced cost, are available. For more information call 885-1555.

STATE RECORD. Dick Donalies of Hoffman Estates is on his way to a new state record of 520 pounds at the Central AAU Junior State Power Meet in Macomb, Ill. Donalies was also awarded the best lifter trophy for the heavy division.

Striking Lanes bowlers regain lead in Classic

by GENE KIRKHAM

Striking Lanes and L - Tran Engineering met head on at Barrington's Ten Pin Bowl Saturday.

Both teams have been in and out of first place in the second half of the Paddock Women's Classic Traveling League.

Striking emerged a five point winner to take a three point lead as they rolled 880, 958, and 898 for a 2736 series. Tran rolled 880, 902, and 825 for 2607.

All five of the Striking Lanes bowlers reached the 500 mark as Lu Schoenberger had 217 and 508, Sue Wentworth rolled 202, 208, and 181 for 596, Alice Schroder had 539 with a 207 game, Eunice Whitmore had 518 and Judy Croston rolled a 507.

Lorrie Koch did her usual fine bowling for L - Tran with a 601 series on games of 176, 194, and 231. Isobel Kost had 545 with a 219 game. Vi Douglas rolled 530, and Toohi Inahara had a 516 series.

Doyle's - Des Plaines Lanes won five of seven points over Thunderbird Country Club.

Winning the first game by three pins 878 to 875, Doyle's - Des Plaines went on to win the third game 930 to 885 and the series point 2657 to 2631. Thunderbird Country Club won the second game 871 to 849.

Mary Yurs of Thunderbird led the league with some beautiful bowling. Her games of 210, 205, and 218 totaled to a 633 series. Marge Carlson of Thunderbird rolled 598 with 210, 177, and 209.

For Doyle's - Des Plaines Lanes DeLores Harris fired a 615 with a final game of 246. Winnie Lohse rolled 548, and Ann Neumann had a 545 series.

Hoffman Lanes was a five point winner over Arlington Park Towers as Peggy Harris led the scoring in this match with 582 on consistent games of 190, 194, and 198. Pat Smith had 536 and Joan Christensen added 520 with a 215 game to complete the scoring over 500 for Hoffman.

For Arlington Park Towers Dona Jean Sanders rolled 529 and Pam Cwik had 517.

Morton Pontiac moved up another notch in the standings by winning five of seven points from Franklin - Weber Pontiac. Morton won the first and third games with 896 and 960 while Franklin - Weber won the second game with an 871. The series point went to Morton 2702 to 2566.

For Morton, Betty Parkhurst was high with 552, including a 204 game, Emily Dragon had 548, Lou Lass had a 211 game and a 539 series, Jan Broderick had 539, and Ruth Baurhyte rolled a 524.

For Franklin - Weber Pontiac, Marge Lindenberg rolled 529 and Betty Peterman added a 518 total.

The league goes to Beverly Lanes on March 17 with the following match games scheduled: Arlington Park Towers vs. Franklin - Weber Pontiac, Striking Lanes vs. Thunderbird Country Club, Hoffman Lanes vs. Morton Pontiac, Doyle's - Des Plaines Lanes vs. L-Tran Engineering.

Sportsman's Notebook

by Bob Holiday

THERE ARE TWO sportsmen's clubs in the northern Illinois/southern Wisconsin area holding meetings this month that are worth the attention of anglers and hunters.

On March 19 the elder of the two, the Lake County Sportsman's Club, will host its annual "open house" meeting, providing an opportunity for prospective members to attend a typical get-together.

The Lake County club is one of the oldest, if not the oldest, in the area, currently celebrating its 30th year of consecutive monthly meetings.

At each meeting of the club, members enjoy a guest speaker, films and great food and drink. This week's films include one of Great Bear Lake, one on coho salmon and four guest "authorities."

The word "authorities" is in quotes here to try to bring the title down to a reasonable level, since this typist is among the four guests.

My three fellows on the speaker panel are Joe Kirby, an Irishman of great capacity and charm, and host of his own radio show: Russ Wayne, an avid hunter who also owns the Outdoor Sportsman, a gun buff's delight in Waukegan; and Tom Gockel, one of the charter members of the growing group of charter boat captains, and a true authority on Lake Michigan salmon.

The meeting is next Monday night at 8:00. Meeting place is the Lithuanian Club on 9th and Lincoln streets in Waukegan.

THE NEWER, BUT none less active club is Walleyes Unlimited. Founded primarily by a group of avid walleye fishermen, WU has grown suspiciously in the past two years. The membership of the club includes anglers from Wisconsin and Illinois. To accommodate this wide range of members, the club holds two during the year. On April 7th and 8th, area and the other in Northern Illinois.

This month, on the 28th of March, Walleyes Unlimited will meet at the Antioch Country Club, route 59 just south of Antioch. Many members have dinner prior to the 8:00 p.m. meeting, but this is strictly optional.

Don Dabla, who handles publicity and information for Salmon Unlimited will be the guest speaker. His subject will also be Lake Michigan fishing.

Walleyes Unlimited also offers members a heavy schedule of fishing outings during the year. On April 7th and 8th, the members will journey to Lake Shelbyville in central Illinois. On May 12 through 20, they will be at Bobby Schmidt's Long Lake Lodge in Wisconsin. Among the advantages of club membership are tackle discounts and preferred prices at club outings. (Example: At Bobby Schmidt's, members will pay $13.50 per day, which will include room and meals.)

At both clubs, members share current fishing information and tips, trade equipment and fishing secrets and generally enjoy talking fishing for a few hours. In both cases, membership dues are a pittance.

Local bass experts should sharpen their hooks and begin practicing for the 1973 Midwest Open. This four-man team tournament is held annually on the Illinois Chain of Lakes. This year's dates are May 6 and 7. A cash prize of $1,000 is guaranteed to the first place team, with an entry fee of $100 per four-man team.

Although it's usually wiser to put together your own team for such competitions, there are often non-team individuals who can be put together into a competing team.

Sponsored by Sport Fishing Unlimited, another active angler's club, the Midwest Open can be entered by anyone with the skill and the nerve to challenge the "experts."

For information call Bob Johnson, 815-385-8277.

WITH THE ICE opening up, panfishing has gotten off to an early start in Illinois and Wisconsin.

And the rivers are already beginning to show signs of life. Walleyes and northern are being taken right now in the Wolf and Fox Rivers. At the Wilnot dam, at the Wisconsin-Illinois state line, both walleyes and northern pike have been biting minnows.

Further north, in Wisconsin, spawning walleyes are already active and the big runs may hit as much as a month or six weeks earlier than usual.

Snow is almost a thing of the past, at least as far as snowmobilers and skiers are concerned, except in the far, far north. Telemark, which always comes early and stays late, is still reporting a 20 inch base and new snow. Skiing and festivities are scheduled to continue at Mount Telemark through the middle of April. For information, call Cable, Wisconsin 715-798-3311.

Burt Atkinson reports from Lake Michigan that his Waukegan Harbor boat house will open about the middle of April. Charters will begin at about that date too, said Atkinson.

"They're starting to catch fish in the south end of the lake now," he said, "and they've been taking quite a few steelhead all winter at the Commonwealth Edison bridge north of the harbor."

Atkinson says the coho salmon are just beginning to get active, but with weather conditions ranging from 65 degrees all the way to sub-freezing, it is still too early to expect any kind of dependability.

Meanwhile, lake fishermen can keep up with early reports by telephoning Atkinson at 682-9632, or the Waukegan Charter Boat Captains' hot-line dial B-I-G-F-I-S-H.

Paddock Classic race tightens up

Gaare Oil sweeps seven in men's

by GENE KIRKHAM

Gaare Oil Company rolled 2064 with games of 997, 997, and 1000 to defeat Hoffman Lanes by seven points in the Paddock Men's Classic.

Bowling at Rolling Meadows Bowl, Gaare had the only sweep as the Classic second half race again tightened up.

Hoffman Lanes, led by Ray Lofthouse with games of 212, 222, and 186 for a 620 series, stayed in every game as they rolled 975, 952, and 923 for a 2850 series.

Gaare was led by Gene Folkes, who fired 609 with games of 214, 224, and 171. Gene Kirkham added 601 with a 225 first game.

The win places Gaare in second, four points back of first place Des Plaines Ace Hardware.

Bank of Rolling Meadows came out on top of a close match with Des Plaines Ace Hardware as they won two games for a 4-3 margin.

Des Plaines won the first game 950 to 933 while Bank of Rolling Meadows won the second game 981 to 977. The Bank five won the last game by two pins, 914 to 912 as Ace Hardware held their ground to win the series point 2839 to 2828.

Mike Golden of Bank of Rolling Meadows and Barry Stjernberg of Des Plaines Ace Hardware led the scoring in this match with 644 each. Golden rolled 237, 192 and 215, while Stjernberg fired 192, 248, and 206.

Uncle Andy's Cow Palace gained a 4-3 margin over Don-Lor.

Uncle Andy's won the first two games with 962, and 922 while Don-Lor fired a big 1029 final game to win that game and the series point.

Volleyball event at Forest View

A special volleyball attraction will be held Wednesday evening at Forest View High School.

The Forest View faculty and lettermen will play the powerful Chicago Rebels, National AAU girls champion, in a three-game exhibition, starting at 7:30 p.m. in the Falcon gymnasium.

The girls will also give a demonstration of power volleyball.

Tickets are $1.00 for everyone.

Joe Simonis

Joe Simonis led the scoring for the eight team loop with a 650 total. Starting with 257 the first game he stayed steady with 198 and 195 to complete his leading total. Don Sawicki of Don-Lor rolled 641 for his team with games of 242, 169, and 230.

Kula's Five fired 931, 1029, and 926 to gain a five point win over Morton Pontiac.

Morton won the last game with 945 to stay in third place five points out of first while Kula's is in fourth six points out.

John Giovannelli Jr. of Kula's led the scoring in this match with 615 on games of 201, 190, and 224 while teammate Bud Ewert added 181, 214, and 212, for a 607 series.

March 17 scheduling calls for a trip to Beverly Lanes where the following match games can be seen: Morton Pontiac vs. Hoffman Lanes; Kula's Five vs. Des Plaines Ace Hardware; Gaare Oil vs. Don-Lor; and Bank of Rolling Meadows vs. Uncle Andy's Cow Palace.

Await completion of independent study

Action on Lake County fire protection deferred 4 weeks

The Buffalo Grove Village Board Monday night deferred discussion for at least four weeks about who should provide fire protection to Lake County Buffalo Grove residents.

The board is awaiting the completion of the second half of an independent fire protection study that began almost a year and a half ago.

"I don't think we can make any decision on this matter until we have all the facts," said Village Pres. Gary Armstrong.

Lake County residents are served by the Long Grove Rural Fire Protection District, while the rest of the village is served by the Wheeling Rural Fire Protection District.

HENRY HARMS, spokesman for a group of Lake County residents, discussed the possibility of either creating a municipal fire department or annexing into the Wheeling district. Although Harms is not dissatisfied with present fire protection supplied by the Long Grove district, he said all service should be provided by Buffalo Grove.

"We're looking to the time when a municipal department will be created," Harms added.

The first part of the study, completed last summer, said both departments were doing an adequate job. The report said although a municipal department was not an immediate need, it probably would be necessary eventually.

"I think everybody here will agree that a municipal department will eventually be a necessity," said trustee James Shirley. "It's just a matter of when."

SOME VILLAGE officials have said it would not be feasible to shift to a municipal fire department due to high costs. Currently, the Buffalo Grove Fire Department has an annual budget of almost $36,000.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson yesterday estimated the cost of a municipal department at $184,000. He said such a department could be implemented by June of 1974. This would be possible by supplementing the current property taxes that go to the fire departments with $30,000 or $40,000 from the village fund.

Until 1970, a section of about 60 homes in Lake County was served by the Wheeling district. However, in a referendum that year, homeowners voted to annex the section into the Long Grove district. With the exception of those homes, the rest of Lake County Buffalo Grove has always been in the Long Grove district.

Following the referendum the boundary line between the two districts was set at Checker Road. Some residents have said the Long Grove department is inferior to the Wheeling district, while others have defended it. Some have also charged that because of the Long Grove department all residents of Buffalo Grove are penalized by having to pay a higher premium for fire insurance.

Village OKs annexation for two Levitt projects

The Buffalo Grove Village Board approved annexation Monday night for construction of two developments by Levitt and Sons Inc. to be located north of Ill. Rte. 83.

Trustee Randall Rathjen, who cast the only dissenting vote, said he objected to the development because it did not have enough single-family homes. He said the board's decision conflicted with the village master plan which calls for primarily single-family homes in the area.

Trustee Edward Fabish, who was absent, earlier voiced opposition to the projects for the same reason.

RATHJEN SAID he also objected to the developments because too much of the land was located in the flood plain. The developer, however, has agreed to do the work to prevent flooding in the area.

Long Grove officials earlier expressed some concern because they feared construction traffic could damage a section of Arlington Heights Road north of Rte. 83. The developer, however, has donated $10,000 to cover road damages. In addition, the township requires the developer to post a bond in case additional repairs are needed.

The first project, to be constructed on the 61-acre Wagner parcel, which is south of Aptakisic Road and east of Arlington Heights Road, will contain 75 single-family homes, 225 apartment condominiums and 82 townhouse condominiums.

The second project will be located on the nearby 50-acre Koelper-Demuth parcel and will contain 224 townhouse condominiums.

THE DEVELOPER has provided 21 acres on the Wagner parcel for a school and park. Although only four to five acres of the land is usable due to poor drainage, the developer has said it will be improved to make it suitable for recreation.

The annexation agreement gives School Dist. 96 the option of accepting the school site, a cash donation, a combination of the land and cash or land somewhere else.

High school discipline to be probed

The High School Dist. 214 Board decided Monday it wants to look into the problem of discipline in its schools, perhaps by calling a meeting where building administrators can express their opinions on the situation.

The board reached agreement on that issue after board member Jack Costello, newly announced candidate for reelection, expressed concern over the amount of insubordination reported in the suspension reports received by the board.

Bicycle owners required by law to register

Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry J. Walsh Jr. reminded bike owners Tuesday that they are required by law to register their bicycles with the police department.

He said registering the bikes makes it considerably easier for police to trace them if stolen. "With bikes becoming so expensive, it's a good way of protecting your investment," Walsh said.

Walsh said police are conducting bike registrations at Buffalo Grove schools. "We can get the bulk of them there, but it should be emphasized that adults are also required to register their bikes," he said.

Walsh added that registration is free and can be done at the Buffalo Grove Police Station. A registration sticker will then be issued to the bike owner which should be affixed to the frame of the bike, he said.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

The convicted triggerman in the Joseph "Jock" Yablonski murders has testified two former United Mine Workers officials told him ex-union president "Tony" Boyle ordered the killings "for the welfare of the UMW."

Three hundred government agents, using armored personnel carriers have tightened the circle around militant Indians entrenched at Wounded Knee, S.D.

The government will recommend Amtrak be given two more years to prove it can save the passenger train... but that four money-losing routes be dropped now.

Urging a one-year delay in enforcing clean air standards, Ford Motor Co. warned that allowing unreliable pollution control devices would be like throwing "a catastrophe into hands of the public."

Railroad labor and management negotiators announced tentative agreement on new contracts for 14 unions representing 500,000 rail workers. An official for the machinists' union said he may reject the proposal.

The state

The Illinois House passed, 115-42, and sent to the Senate a bill that would forbid the Environmental Protection Agency from banning open burning of leaves.

A suit filed in Juvenile Court charges that two children from Illinois were beaten, isolated, and kept in handcuffs in a room in a Texas institution for neglected children.

Bills to provide emergency loans to financially troubled mass transit systems in the state, including up to $18.9 million for the CTA, moved to the passage stage in the Senate.

The world

Operation Homecoming's reception center, idle for five days, will receive 142 released American prisoners by the end of the week, 106 of them today.

Six persons have been detained for questioning in Bermuda and all handguns have been ordered turned in for ballistics tests in the search for assassins of Gov. Sir Richard Sharples.

In the latest Northern Ireland violence a British patrol shot and killed an armed man in Belfast, and a soldier died in a land mine ambush.

The war

American jet fighters today bombarded Communist positions along Cambodia's southern Highway 2, where Cambodian command reported a relentless all-night attack against troops in the village of Prasat Neang Khmau. In Saigon, it was announced that South Korea, whose troops piled up a 10-1 kill ratio against the Communists, officially cease operations today.

Friendship School contractor may be fired by board

Albert Berg, general contractor for Friendship Junior High School in Des Plaines, may be fired from the job by Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59.

The school board took the first step towards possible removal of Berg at a special board meeting Monday night, when a resolution was adopted giving Berg and his bonding company notice that he may be removed.

The resolution also directs the district's architect, Berger, Kelley & Associates, to evaluate the situation on the job site and possibly prepare the necessary certification to remove Berg.

Under the terms of the construction contract, the architect must certify that the contractor is not fulfilling the contract and should be removed.

THE ARCHITECT is to have the review and the possible certification prepared by March 26. If the architect agrees that Berg should be removed, notice of removal could be given by the school board anytime after that date.

When notice is given, Berg will have seven days to clear the job site, taking all tools and equipment with him. After seven days, the school district takes control of the site and any equipment left by the contractor.

The district will then be free to hire another contractor or make arrangements to have the work done on a piece-meal basis.

James Erviti, district superintendent, said the architects informed the administration that the progress promised by Berg has not been made. The board's attorney was then directed to draw up the resolution notifying Berg that he may be taken off the job site.

MONDAY'S RESOLUTION does not commit the board to any action, but is designed to serve as a legal warning to Berg that his work is not satisfactory to the board.

Completion of the school has been repeatedly postponed by construction delays. Grant Terrell, project representative for the architectural firm, has appeared before the board during the past few months to report on the progress at the school.

Terrell has blamed many of the delays on mismanagement by Berg.

Originally, the school was to have opened in January. The opening date was pushed back to mid-March then mid-May, then June 1 and the latest date given was July 15.

The board had hoped to have the school opened for summer school this year so there could be a trial period before the full classes start in September. Now there is a possibility the building will not be ready in September.

BERG ALSO has appeared before the school board in past months to justify the delays and promise that his firm could make up for lost time.

Search of river for lost youth discontinued

The 10-day search of the Des Plaines River for the body of a Chicago youth believed drowned in a March 3 canoeing mishap has been discontinued, according to Cook County Sheriff's police.

Periodic boat patrols will continue to cruise the river searching for John Pienta, 18, of 3434 N. Neva Ave., who was lost while canoeing with friends near Devon Avenue.

Early rescue attempts were hampered by high water and mud conditions along the river's banks. Cook County Forest Rangers and Rosemont fire fighters made unsuccessful attempts then to find the youth by dragging the river with hooks.

Since then however, operations had been stepped up to include Sheriff's police, Chicago and Metroland Park fire department rescue workers and Illinois Underwater Recovery team divers. The divers covered a four-mile area of the river from underwater Dam No. 4, where the youth was lost, to North Avenue.

The American Red Cross also joined in the search with the Illinois Air National Guard, which supplied a helicopter and the Metropolitan Sanitary District, which contributed a boat to the search efforts.

Sheriff's police, who coordinated the search, said at one point a total of 80 rescue workers were dragging the river as far south as Lockport, some 30 miles from Chicago.

Inner city kids breaking old barriers

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Crossing the threshold from the inner city school to the suburban high school is a difficult experience for most teenagers at Maryville Academy, a home for dependent children in Des Plaines.

The inner city student entering a competitive suburban high school often finds he can't keep up with his classmates, a realization that compounds his already difficult adjustment problems. He cuts class, lags further behind in his assignments and can end up wandering through the halls most of the day.

The Threshold program at Maine

North High School in Des Plaines helps inner city teenagers adjust to life in a suburban school. Special classes with individual instruction are designed to improve such basic skills as English and math to help students become a part of the regular academic program at Maine North.

THE THRESHOLD students come from poor or ghetto schools, often have long truancy records or don't attend school at all, said Linda Selway, social worker at Maine North. Most of those entering high school on the ninth grade have reached only the third or fourth grade level academically.

But the inner city students have the same potential for learning as their suburban classmates, according to Sherman Roth, director of guidance at Maine North. The problem is to improve their skills in subjects like English and math to a level where they can participate in classroom work and to help them adjust socially so they can get along with other students and teachers he said.

The state-funded Threshold program starts in a classroom at Maryville where new students are tested to determine their academic achievement level. Richard Mateyko, Maine North teacher in the Maryville classroom, then tutors each one individually.

Social behavior is "an equally big part" of the adjustment, Mateyko said. Students have to learn the importance of good classroom behavior, getting to school on time and keeping up with assignments. Entering students are given a "social awareness test" to find out how they would react in everyday situations.

Once the student is socially and academically ready for high school he is placed in a special classroom at Maine

This Morning In Brief

The nation

The convicted triggerman in the Joseph "Jack" Yablonski murders has testified two former United Mine Workers officials told him ex-union president "Tony" Boyle ordered the killings "for the welfare of the UMW."

Three hundred government agents, using armored personnel carriers have tightened the circle around militant Indians entrenched at Wounded Knee, S.D.

The government will recommend Amtrak be given two more years to prove it can save the passenger train... but that four money-losing routes be dropped now.

Urging a one-year delay in enforcing clean air standards, Ford Motor Co. warned that allowing unreliable pollution control devices would be like throwing "a catastrophe into hands of the public."

Railroad labor and management negotiators announced tentative agreement on new contracts for 14 unions representing 600,000 rail workers. An official for the machinists' union said he may reject the proposal.

The state

The Illinois House passed, 115-42, and sent to the Senate a bill that would forbid the Environmental Protection Agency from banning open burning of leaves.

A suit filed in Juvenile Court charges that two children from Illinois were beaten, isolated, and kept in handcuffs in a room in a Texas institution for neglected children.

Bills to provide emergency loans to financially troubled mass transit systems in the state, including up to $18.9 million for the CTA, moved to the passage stage in the Senate.

The world

Operation Homecoming's reception center, idle for five days, will receive 142 released American prisoners by the end of the week, 108 of them today.

Six persons have been detained for questioning in Bermuda and all handguns have been ordered turned in for ballistics tests in the search for assassins of Gov. Sir Richard Sharples.

In the latest Northern Ireland violence a British patrol shot and killed an armed man in Belfast, and a soldier died in a land mine ambush.

The war

American jet fighters today bombed Communist positions along Cambodia's southern Highway 2, where Cambodian command reported a relentless all-night attack against troops in the village of Prasat Neang Khmaru... In Saigon, it was announced that South Korea, whose troops piled up a 10-1 kill ratio against the Communists, officially cease operations today.

The local scene

DES PLAINES

On education task force

Kathleen Arns, assistant dean of instruction for vocational programs at Oakton Community College, has been named to a subcommittee of the task force on the education of teachers established by the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

Mrs. Arns will serve on the external sub-committee on development of a statewide master plan for teacher preparation in occupational education.

Mrs. Arns joined the Oakton administration in the spring of 1971. She is a consultant to the Division of Vocational-Technical Education of the State of Illinois and was a participant in the Governor's Symposium of Vocational Education which was held in Chicago in the spring of 1972. Mrs. Arns is now serving as chairman of a five-college consortium of vocational-technical administrators in community colleges located in Northern Illinois.

Program on drugs set

A program on youth and drugs will be co-sponsored by St. Mary's Men's Club and St. Mary's Parent Teacher Council on Tuesday, March 20, at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium, Center and Prairie streets, Des Plaines.

Eldon Burke, assistant principal of Maine Township High School West, will discuss the extent of drug use within the local school system; a Des Plaines police youth officer will explain drug abuse as seen from a law enforcement viewpoint; and Leonard Williamson, Illinois Drug Abuse Program, will speak on rehabilitation of the drug user.

The program is open to the public.

Absentee ballots for park vote

Absentee ballots will be available to Des Plaines Park District residents until March 30 for the April 3 park board election at the park district office, 748 Pearson St. Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Incumbent Ferdinand Arndt is running unopposed for a fifth six-year term as commissioner. He is also park board president.

The polls will be open April 3 from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. with the only polling place at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 760 Pearson St.

Junior high Playday

The Maine West High School Girls' Recreation Association will host its annual Junior High School Playday Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon in the school's C-wing gymnasium. All eighth grade girls in the area are invited.

The Playday, called "GRA's Rainbow of Fun," will feature activities such as volleyball and crab soccer. Demonstrations in fencing, self-defense and gymnastics also will be given by GRA members. Refreshments will be served.

Distributive ed conference

Six members of the Maine West High School chapter of the Distributive Education Clubs of Illinois, a business education group, attended the 28th annual State Distributive Education Leadership Conference recently in Springfield. The students were John Scherer, Jeff Lehmann, Sandy Kosinski, Karin Soderlund, Diane McKenna, and Gail Blaski.

The conference, entitled DECI - Unity Among Communities, was attended by 750 students representing 100 schools throughout the state.

Chess tourney winners

The Des Plaines Park District hosted its annual chess tournament March 10 at West Park. Each of three divisions ran a single-elimination tournament with a consolation bracket. Winners were:

Novice division - first - Paul Mundt; second - Steve Madej; third - Charles Czarnecki; fourth - Bob Florio. Consolation Bracket: first - Mark Florio; second - Rick Bennett.

Junior High and below division - first - Tom Burns; second - Hin Tsang; third - Steve Arrigo; fourth - Dale Hurst. Consolation Bracket: first - Tim Powell; second - John Majerczak.

Midweek Lenten service

Three soloists from Maine West High School will be guests at the next Midweek Lenten Service at Trinity Lutheran Church, 675 Algonquin Rd., Des Plaines, on Wednesday, March 21, at 7:45 p.m.

They are Ginger Reinhardt, Gayle Mayday, and Debbie Wright. The public is invited. Leading the worship will be the Rev. Mark G. Bergman and the Rev. Philip A. Gombicki. A fellowship hour will follow the service.

On Wednesday, March 28, Trinity Church will be host for the Muhlenberg College Choir of 80 voices from Allentown, Pa. A concert at the Midweek Lenten Service that evening will begin at 7:45 p.m.

Hinges on regional transit plan approval

City may drop plan to buy bus company: Behrel

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Des Plaines may scuttle plans to purchase United Motor Coach Co. if the Illinois General Assembly approves a regional mass transit plan this session, Mayor Herbert Behrel said yesterday.

"It would be my hope that we'll get out of this legislative session, by June 30, a meaningful mass transit bill," Behrel said. "If there's a likelihood that United will be taken over in a regional system, we may not move."

The mayor did not rule out the purchase by the Des Plaines Mass Transit District. "If we see the legislature is not going to do anything, we've got to make a move," he said at his weekly press conference.

Regional takeover "might take a year or 18 months," Behrel said. "They would have to name trustees and take care of other business. But, maybe we'd be better off to keep nominally funding to keep the company alive until the region can take over."

The city council Feb. 5 transferred $12,071 to the mass transit district to subsidize the financially-ailing bus firm.

THREE PROPOSALS to combine transit in metropolitan Chicago have been introduced in Springfield. A fourth bill is planned by House Speaker W. Robert Blair, R-Park Forest.

The key issue has killed efforts to unify mass transportation in the past has been power. All proposal sponsors again are Republicans battling Chicago Democrats over the issue of control of any regional system.

The three Springfield proposals are:

• The Chicago Metropolitan Area Transportation Systems Act (CMATS), mainly written by six railroads serving Chicago. The proposal would place all mass transit under a three-man board of experts. The board would receive advice from a 25-member group designed to give equal representation to the six-counties serviced by the district. No financing provision is included.

• A similar CMATS bill introduced by Rep. Donald Deuster, R-Mundelein, a former U.S. Department of Transportation official. The bill proposes financing from federal revenue sharing funds and surplus from the Illinois toll roads.

• The Metropolitan Transit Authority (MTA), reintroduced by Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights.

The proposal includes a seven-member board to run a six-county transit authority built around the CTA. The governor would name four members and Chicago's mayor would appoint three. A half-cent gasoline tax could be levied to finance operation.

BLAIR'S PROPOSAL may follow recommendations of former Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's transportation task force. The report proposed formation of a nine-member board to oversee CTA, suburban bus company and railroad operations.

Reintroduction of a Suburban Area Transportation System (SATS) bill to form a system without the CTA is not expected.

"We prefer not to finance the bus company with taxpayers' money if we can avoid it," Behrel said yesterday. Purchase would be a "last resort."

The mayor said the "theory that new buses can increase riders is completely false. People don't ride buses because they're new."

"What bus companies need is state or federal funding for a percentage of operating costs. But, it's a very dangerous thing. Once they get their fingers on the money tree, they might get careless with operating expenses."

BEHREL ALSO was leery of proposals for minibuses in Des Plaines. "Aurora has a very sad experience in minibuses because of maintenance. They're not made for heavy duty over country roads."

If the mass transit district purchases the firm, takeover would include recently started school minibuses, the mayor said.

"The bus company is lucky that it has a city with the affluence to help them," he said.

Twenty-five per cent of purchase funding would come from the district, the mayor said. The funds would come via a referendum which could cost up to $40,000. "In the final analysis, it might be better for the district to tell the city to take over the company. We would put it in the budget with 'X' number of dollars for operating expenses like Aurora and Joliet."

The bus firm is expected to complete its 1972 annual report by next week. City officials will then prepare an updated financial report for the transit district. Behrel said the council may schedule another committee of the whole meeting to discuss possible purchase or subsidies.

Oakton may stay put, buy temporary quarters: Means

Oakton Community College will probably decide to stay put and buy its temporary quarters for a permanent campus, John Means, a member of the college citizens' site advisory committee, reported Monday night to Maine Township High School Dist. 207 Board members.

"I feel pretty sure the site development committee will settle on the temporary campus, 7900 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove, as the site for the permanent campus," he said.

Means stressed that his statements were his opinion and that the citizen's committee has not officially recommended a site to the college board of trustees. Means, former Dist. 207 Board member, was appointed to the committee last fall to represent the high school district.

The citizens' committee has been studying the temporary campus and two sites in the northwest corner of the college district as possible permanent campuses. The temporary campus, about 11 acres, is leased by the college. The site committee also is looking at 14 to 18 acres of property adjacent to the temporary campus.

IN OTHER ACTION, the board approved a driver education program for students of Notre Dame High School for Boys in Niles that will be supervised by Dist. 207.

Classrooms and equipment will be located at Notre Dame but Dist. 207 will administer the program and hire instructors. The driver education program will be reimbursed by the state office of public instruction and any additional expenses will be billed to the public high school district in which the Notre Dame student resides.

The local public school district is responsible by law for providing driver education instruction. The program at Notre Dame was evaluated and judged inadequate by safety specialists from the state office of public instruction. The evaluators recommended that Notre Dame ask Dist. 207 to include Notre Dame driver education into the public school program. The program will serve about 300 Notre Dame students next year.

The board approved preliminary budget requests not to exceed $430,000 for buildings-and-grounds maintenance next year. About $117,550 will be spent at Maine East, $128,145 at Maine North, $97,544 at Maine South, and $32,000 at Maine West. Funds will be used for general maintenance purposes.

The board also authorized a decrease in the district's contingency fund for buildings to release $7,500 for equipment and maintenance at Maine North and Maine West this year.

Barriers down at Maryville

North and taught by Mark Recker and Betty Goerss.

IN THE Threshold classroom students sit at tables, not desks. There's a typewriter, record player and, along one wall, a stand of paperback books. Students get individual lessons in English, math, history, general science or business. When they're finished, they play chess, listen to records or go to the library. The break between assignments, Mrs. Goerss said, relieves the pressure of keeping up class period after class period.

The program, started a year ago, gets $60,000 annually under the state's orphanage act. Some 45 students are enrolled in different stages of Threshold during the school year.

Its success, Mrs. Goerss feels, is based on individual instruction. Student start at their own academic level, regardless of their age. If one of them is to make progress, she said, "the important thing is to give him something he can do. That first good grade can be a turning point, sometimes reversing years of failure."

As they improve, the Threshold kids are gradually introduced to the regular program at Maine North, which at each step is made to seem "as desirable as possible," said Mrs. Goerss. When they learn to meet the competition of regular classes, Threshold students are transferred to the full high school program. The sequence usually takes about a year.

ONE SUCCESS story in the Threshold program is a 15-year-old boy who completed classes at Maryville in six weeks. He realized he would be better off at Maine North, said Mrs. Goerss, but had trouble adjusting to his new environment. He was hostile and uncooperative. Gradually, through Threshold classes at Maine North, he adjusted and became successful in some of the regular classes at the school. He made friends with other students and plans to try out for the school football team next fall.

The program isn't designed for every inner city student at Maryville, said Mrs. Goerss. Some students over 17 have no plans to graduate from high school and are placed in a special class at Maryville taught by Matejko. They learn basic skills in the morning and work in the afternoon, said Matejko. Other Maryville students have higher achievement levels than those in the Threshold program and are able to enter the regular program at Maine North immediately.

Behrel may issue platform today

Mayor Herbert Behrel is expected to release a campaign platform today including proposals for a youth "friendship" center and Des Plaines application for All-American city status.

The platform announcement may follow a 7:30 a.m. Jaycee-sponsored Mayor's Prayer Breakfast at the Sheraton-O'Hare Inn in Rosemont. Dr. Preston Bradley, a nationally-known religious leader, will be guest speaker.

Behrel hinted at the contents of his platform during a noon appearance yesterday before the Des Plaines Kiwanis Club.

"Something our city is going to need to do... is show our youth and their parents that we're interested in something for our kids," the mayor said.

"Des Plaines is one of the top cities in the United States. We're in line for an All-American city award," he said.

BEHREL CALLED his speech - "Des Plaines Past, Present and Future" non-political. I don't know why I have to campaign for this job. I've worked at it for a long time. You know my record. But, I see in two weeks that you have a gentleman scheduled who's a candidate for mayor (David Wolf). I'm a candidate, too."

The mayor's youth center proposal was spurred by closing of Place For People Feb. 7. "It folded because of lack of finances. The city was advised by its attorney that it couldn't participate. It does not mean the city is not interested in our youth," he said.

"If Palatine Township can use tax money to support The Bridge, if Mount Prospect can finance The Pump House, we can support something like a friendship house," Behrel said.

The center will be geared toward persons 18 to 22 years old - returning military veterans and college students. "These are kids who may have lost ties with friends. It won't include junior high school age because they already have activities," the official said.

The All-American city award "means getting someone to put a brochure together," the mayor said.

The city's application would follow completion of proposed senior citizen housing, city hall, redevelopment and parking plans.

MOUNT PROSPECT failed in its application for the award last year. About 10 cities are named annually, based on community projects and service, by the Saturday Evening Post and the National Municipal League. Recent Illinois winners have been Wheaton, Springfield and Niles.

The two new platform proposals are expected to head a list of nine reelection "goals" listed in a Behrel campaign flyer. The list includes "vigorous support" for redevelopment; completion of city hall, police and senior citizens projects; solution to flooding problems; balanced city budgeting; use of federal revenue sharing for "emergency projects affecting the health and safety of residents;" updating of the city plan; improved traffic control in congested areas; and aiding financially-plagued United Motor Coach Co.

The pamphlet lists as "accomplishments 1969-1973" Weller Creek improvement; completion of fire station number one; formation of a historical society and recycling center; and launching of a bicycle safety program.

Outlines math guidelines

William Dredzon, associate professor of mathematics at Oakton Community College, outlined guidelines for the standardization of mathematics courses in community colleges at a recent conference on the teaching of mathematics at the Chicago Circle Campus of the University of Illinois.

Dredzon solicited critiques of the report which was compiled on behalf of the Illinois Junior College Board from the participants of the conference. In addition to representatives from the department of mathematics and division of school and college relations, University of Illinois at Chicago Circle, conference participants included counselors and mathematics faculty from Chicago area community colleges.

Conference participants felt that if such a program of guidelines was implemented, the problem of course transferability would be greatly simplified, ac-

Gourmet class planned

Elaine Sherman, gourmet food teacher, will conduct a special five-week gourmet advanced cooking program, "Dining in Elegance," at Maine East High School, 2601 W. Dempster St., Park Ridge, beginning March 22.

The class, sponsored by the Maine-Oakton-Niles Adult and Continuing Education Program, will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. on five successive Thursday evenings. Tuition is $25 and does not include the cost of the food used.

At each session students will prepare and cook at least one course from a pre-planned gourmet menu. At the completion of the five sessions, students will have prepared the full dinner for a group. For further information, call MONACEP at 696-3600.

PTA Book Fair planned

The High Ridge Knolls PTA will sponsor a Book Fair at the school, 588 Dara James today and tomorrow during school hours. All books will be sold to the children at a 20 per cent discount.

Parents are encouraged to help their children participate in this event by coming to the school to view the books offered. Books will range in price from 29 cents to $4.95.

Theater guild elects officers

The Oakton Theater Guild recently elected new officers for the spring term at Oakton Community College.

The new officers are: Dan Isaac, Skokie, president; Gay Johnson, Des Plaines, vice president; Liz Neidert, Skokie, secretary; Dave Coch, Skokie, treasurer/business manager; and Sandy Wiken, Skokie, publicity chairman.

The Oakton Theater Guild will present its next production, Jean Anouilh's play "Becket," on two successive weekends in late April and in early May. Performances will be given on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, April 27, 28, and 29, and May 4, 5 and 6, at 8 p.m.

Dinner concert set

Maine North's music department will present a candlelight dinner concert, "It's A Swingin' Spring," on Thursday, March 22 at 5 p.m.

Under the direction of Jack Olander, choral director, Maine North's concert choir, swing choir, and girls' chorus will perform over 30 musical selections. Tickets for "It's A Swingin' Spring" may be purchased from choir members or by calling Olander at 298-5500, ext. 261. No dinner tickets will be sold at the door.

Table tennis tourney

The Des Plaines Park District's 16th annual table tennis tournament will be held at 9 a.m. Saturday at Rand Park gymnasium, 2025 Miner St. No advance registration is required. Matches and playing times will be assigned Saturday.

Players may bring their own paddles if they desire. Awards will be given to the first, second, third and fourth place winners in each of 12 events that will include matches for boys, girls, men and women.

Seamanship course set

An eight-week course in the art of seamanship, sponsored jointly by the Maine-Oakton-Niles Adult and Continuing Education Program and the U. S. Coast Guard Auxiliary will be given at Maine South High School, 111 S. Dee Rd., Park Ridge, beginning March 22, at 7:30 p.m.

The course will stress practical knowledge in power boating and is designed for both new and experienced boat operators. It will be taught by Gene McCaffery and William Comstock of the staff of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary, Station No. 3-2.

Tuition is $8 and includes all materials. Certificates will be awarded on completion of the course. For further information, call 696-3600.

Code and judiciary committee probes license, zoning restrictions

'Compromise' day-care ordinance in works

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

A "compromise" day-care ordinance — allowing small centers in residential areas under special-use zoning — may be forthcoming from the Des Plaines City Council's code and judiciary committee.

The council, meeting as a committee of the whole Monday night, examined Des Plaines' porous day care licensing and zoning restrictions. Council opinions ran the gamut from total opposition to complete support of nurseries in residential neighborhoods.

"I'm surprised there wasn't a unanimous 'no,'" Ald. Alan Abrams (8th), committee chairman, said after pushing 12 aldermen for opinions on a special use classification. The proposal could require all applicants for residential day care locations to appear before the city's zoning board of appeals where residents protests could be offered.

"The real issue ... is whether or not the city council, recognizing the need, would allow day care centers to operate in residential areas," Abrams told an audience of about 20 persons, including Mayor Herbert Behrel, City Atty. Robert D'Leonardi and aldermanic candidates Richard Ward (8th) and Anne Evans (3rd).

ABRAMS' COMMITTEE members, Ald. Robert Michaels (8th) and Ald. Thomas Koplos (1st) split.

"I am not opposed to less than five children in a home," Michaels said. "There's an intense need for this sort of thing ... particularly under the age of three years old."

Koplos said, "The response I've had, and it's just a few, is that those in single family areas are definitely opposed ... 100 per cent."

Comments from other council members were as varied:

Ald. Lois Czubakowski (5th): "I would favor homes with up to five children in residential areas. Are we going to have inspectors?"

Ald. Arthur Erbach (5th): "I would be open to considering special use for day care homes, limited to certain small numbers. A full-blown operation, I'd definitely say no."

Ald. Joseph Szabo (1st): "I'm opposed unalterably to residential-type operation. Homes are built of much lower fire resistant material and meet minimum standards."

Ald. Daniel Bonaguidi (7th): I might look more favorably on a special use where neighbors have the right to voice a protest ... I'm not in favor of it in a residential area."

Ald. Ewald Swanson (6th): "I have mixed emotions. I'm concerned about this type of enterprise, the traffic generated, in a residential area. The unanswered question is, 'who takes care of the babies in a fire?' I do recognize the need."

AFTER THE MEETING, Abrams said the council was "opening a Pandora's box" when it authorized, without investigation, a zoning suit to close Angel Town Nursery School, 2329 Birch St. "The irony is that we may have moved against the best one around," he said after audience members claimed 14 nurseries operate in city residential areas without licenses.

By licensing centers, the city would be certifying standards and safety, council members argued. "What about city liability?" Swanson asked.

If Des Plaines allows day care operation in residential neighborhoods "will there be a mushrooming" here? Abrams asked.

"People move close to work. They also want their children taken care of close to work," said Ruth Gershon, of 2129 Ash St. "Children are not merchandise. They need residential areas."

Referendum for junior highs remodeling to be sought

Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 will seek a bond issue referendum to finance the remodeling of Grove and Dempster junior high schools.

The school board adopted a resolution calling for the referendum by a 6 to 1 vote at a special meeting Monday Night. A date for the referendum and the amount of bonding power sought will be decided after more information is obtained from the district's architect.

Erwin Poklacki cast the opposing vote. He said he was in full support of the remodeling, but he disagreed with the way the referendum would be presented to the voters.

The referendum will be a single bond issue to be used for the replacement of heating and ventilating systems, improvements to the learning centers, relocation and remodeling of classroom areas and certain small additions to the schools.

EXCLUDED FROM the referendum is the construction of a small auditorium at each school and the installation of air conditioning.

Poklacki wanted a two-part referendum. The first part would be for the replacement of the heating and ventilating systems and improvements to the learning centers at each school. The second part of the referendum would include the first part plus the remodeling and relocating of classrooms.

Poklacki advocated the two-part issue as a means of giving the voters a greater voice in deciding on the remodeling. He said that although he personally favored the complete remodeling project, he wanted to offer voters a choice on the amount of money to be spent on the remodeling.

Poklacki also said he felt it was gambling to put the entire remodeling project as a single bond issue. He felt the replacement of the heating and ventilating systems and improvements to the learning centers were the most important parts of the referendum. If the issues were split into two parts, there would be a better chance of at least the first part passing, he said.

AFTER LENGTHY discussion, the other board members agreed that the referendum should be a single issue so the two schools could be brought up to the comparable standards of Holmes and Lively junior high schools.

Board members felt that if the voters only approved part of the referendum, the board would not be able to fulfill its charge to bring the two schools up to the standards of Holmes and Lively.

Dempster, in Mount Prospect, and Grove, in Elk Grove Village, are the oldest junior high schools in the district. The schools were built in 1960, but several major additions have been made to each since they were first opened.

Poklacki initially moved to have the referendum as a two-part issue, but the motion died for lack of a second.

Sharrille Hildebrandt then made the single-issue referendum motion. Poklacki attempted to amend the motion to a two-part referendum, but the amendment was defeated. The board then passed the referendum motion.

SCOTT KELLEY, architect for the remodeling, was directed to report back to the board with revised plans and cost estimates reflecting the exclusion of auditoriums in their remodeling.

Kelley did not give an exact date for his return to the board, but indicated that he would need at least two weeks to obtain the information the board requested.

Kelley declined to make even a guess at the cost of the remodeling with the auditoriums excluded.

At an earlier board meeting, Kelly had estimated the cost of remodeling for the two schools, including the auditoriums and air conditioning, at $1.9 million.

High school board officials to study discipline problems

The High School Dist. 214 Board decided Monday it wants to look into the problem of discipline in its schools, perhaps by calling a meeting where building administrators can express their opinions on the situation.

The board reached agreement on that issue after board member Jack Costello, newly announced candidate for reelection, expressed concern over the amount of insubordination reported in the suspension reports received by the board each month.

"I have become more and more concerned about the number of times insubordination and bad language is reported," Costello said. "I think we should deal very harshly with that. I wouldn't tolerate that kind of language and I don't think we should ask our people to tolerate it either."

SUPT. EDWARD GILBERT said the only actions the school could take would be to increase the length of suspensions required for insubordination or "if the violation is flagrant, we could go for expulsion."

Suspensions for up to 10 days may be made by school administrators. Expulsion, which could be for a full semester, must be acted on by the board.

Board member Richard Bachhuber said he does not like the idea of using expulsion as a discipline tool. "I think we ought to find some other way to control things instead of throwing a kid out," he said.

Board member Gene Artemenko suggested the board meet specifically to discuss approaches to discipline problems and added that Gilbert and other administrators could also find out whether any other school districts are using other methods to control students.

IN OTHER ACTION, the board authorized $57,015 for seven school buses which will be used during the day next year to bus students to outside locations connected with their classes.

Among the locations students will be bused to next year are automobile dealerships where they will work as part of the auto mechanics program and elementary and nursery schools where students in child care and social science classes will work.

Assistant Supt. Rod McLennan said last year the district spent $23,000 on busing for class purposes and added that expanding the programs may eventually allow the schools to save space.

Money for the buses will come from the district's transportation fund, not the fund which provides for educational programs.

Resident charged with damaging property

A Des Plaines man was charged with damage to property late Tuesday when he smashed three bar stools inside the Oakton Tap and Grill, 901 E. Oakton St., said Des Plaines police.

Dennis Nielsen, 32, of 145 Dover Dr., was arrested after police said he smashed the stools and disturbed some patrons.

Nielsen was released on $1,000 bond and is scheduled to appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court April 12.

Costello to seek new high school board term

High School Dist. 214 Board member Jack Costello announced Monday he will be a candidate for reelection in the April 14 school board election.

Costello, of Mount Prospect, said, "These four years have been very challenging and rewarding and I appreciate the opportunity to serve. I would like to serve another three years if I'm elected."

Costello has been on the board since 1969. He is vice president and general manager of Revere Aluminum Building Products Inc.

The other two incumbents whose terms expire this year have announced they will not seek reelection. Ray Erickson and Richard Greenfield will leave the board in April.

Two candidates have filed nominating petitions for the board. They are Warren Schabinger of Mount Prospect and Donald Hoeck of Arlington Heights.

Auditor candidate charges nepotism, deals

Rettberg, township officials exchange blasts

by FRED GACA

Charges of nepotism and self-serving business transactions on the part of Elk Grove Township officials have been issued by Paul Rettberg, independent candidate for township auditor.

Township officials said Rettberg's charges are a "smear attack" based on "falsehoods and innuendo."

Among Rettberg's charges, he contends township insurance premiums are paid to Terrance Frakes, an employee of the George L. Busse & Co. insurance agency and real estate firm. George R. Busse, incumbent candidate for township clerk, is the son of George L. Busse.

Rettberg says that Frakes is not listed in the telephone directory as an insurance agent. He contends that having Frakes collect the premiums is a "subterfuge" to channel the money to the Busse company.

GEORGE R. BUSSE denied that any township insurance premiums are paid to his company. He said Frakes is an employee, but township insurance business is done by Frakes as a private sideline.

Busse said that any township insurance money collected by Frakes is separate from the Busse company funds.

Frakes is a licensed insurance agent for the Official Risk Agency Inc., based in Bloomington. He is the local representative for Official Risk.

Busse said his company was an agent for Official Risk until he was appointed township clerk in 1966. After his appointment, Busse said the company withdrew any connection with Official Risk, to avoid a conflict of interest.

FRAKES SAID HIS insurance license lists his home address as his place of business for his work as an Official Risk agent. He said all premiums are sent to his home address.

Frakes said all income from his work as an Official Risk agent was listed on his personal income tax forms. He offered to open his records for inspection.

Busse said the township seeks bids for its insurance every few years. The last time bids were sought, according to Frakes, was within the last two years.

Richard Hall, Republican candidate for supervisor and an incumbent auditor, said the insurance business was given to Frakes, after competitive bidding, because the premiums he offered were "far and away lower than anything else we could purchase."

Busse said Frakes could offer the lower rates because Official Risk specializes in insuring township and municipal governments. He said most major insurance companies will not even bid on township insurance contracts because certain risks cannot be easily defined for coverage.

BUSSE SAID the last time insurance was bid by the township, every broker in the township was contacted and informed of the opportunity to bid. He estimated that five or six bids were received.

Rettberg also charged that having the township do its banking at the Mount Prospect State Bank is a conflict of interest since both George L. and George R. Busse are on the board of directors at the bank.

George L. Busse is not and never has been on the board of directors and George R. Busse has been on the board since 1964, George Busse said.

Busse said the township had been banking at the Mount Prospect State Bank for at least 20 years and may have had an account there when the bank opened in 1911.

He said it was only natural to have the township do business with Mount Prospect State Bank because, at one time, it was the only bank in the township.

ABOUT TWO YEARS ago, tax collecting powers were taken away from the township by the state. The township found itself without any source of funds and was forced to obtain tax anticipation warrants (TAWs).

According to Busse, the Mount Prospect State Bank was the only one in the area that would buy the TAWs. He said other banks in the area were contacted, but all refused to purchase any TAWs.

He said the only account the township has at the bank is a checking account.

"We could write a check tomorrow morning and draw all the money out," said Busse.

Any money the township has for investment is put into treasury bills, according to Busse. The bank has no township funds that may be used for its own investments.

Busse called Rettberg's charges "falsehoods." He said he was very upset over the charge that the Busse company made money on township insurance business, a charge he called "an outright lie."

"SOMEONE SHOULD have done their homework before making the charges," said Busse.

Hall said the charges are "nothing but a cheap smear attack."

"Our opponents are running on nothing but a negative platform. They are out to destroy township government. They totally lack qualifications for the offices they seek, so, to try to manufacture some issue, they resort to a personal smear campaign."

Hall said he saw no impropriety in having the township do business with firms that provide the best services and the lowest prices.

Eleanor Rohrbach

City clerk backs Behrel for mayor

City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach yesterday endorsed Mayor Herbert Behrel for reelection.

Mrs. Rohrbach is running unopposed for her third term. Running unopposed four-years ago, she received the largest vote total in the city, although she did not endorse the mayor.

Her endorsement, sought by both Behrel and one of his opponents, David Wolf, was revealed in publicity for Behrel's "spring-off luncheon" March 21. The noon buffet will be at Casa Royale.

Mrs. Rohrbach's name appears on a letter mailed Monday to Des Plaines women. She is listed as a Women for Behrel campaign member on a committee headed by Mrs. Frank Batka, 2146 Spruce St. Other committee members are Ald. Lois Czubakowski (5th) Mrs. Irving Rateike, wife of Des Plaines treasurer. Mrs. Edythe Behrel is honorary committee chairman.

Mrs. Rohrbach, according to one city hall source, was leaning toward Wolf but decided to endorse Behrel when she was disappointed by a lack of new proposals in Wolf's platform.

Mrs. Rohrbach told the Herald she is supporting Behrel because projects on "the brink of reality" — downtown redevelopment, city hall, the senior citizens housing project — "might be stalled in the transition if he's not elected."

"Mayor Behrel is by far the most qualified of the three candidates. He has the experience," she said.

"As far as accountability, I think he'll do better in the next four years than in his past terms simply because he'll want to see these things completed."

Grove, Dempster

Referendum to be sought for junior highs upgrading

Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 will seek a bond issue referendum to finance the remodeling of Grove and Dempster junior high schools.

The school board adopted a resolution calling for the referendum by a 6 to 1 vote at a special meeting Monday Night. A date for the referendum and the amount of bonding power sought will be decided after more information is obtained from the district's architect.

Erwin Poklaski cast the opposing vote. He said he was in full support of the remodeling, but he disagreed with the way the referendum would be presented to the voters.

The referendum will be a single bond issue to be used for the replacement of heating and ventilating systems, improvements to the learning centers, relocation and remodeling of classroom areas and certain small additions to the schools.

EXCLUDED FROM the referendum is the construction of a small auditorium at each school and the installation of air conditioning.

Poklaski wanted a two-part referendum. The first part would be for the replacement of the heating and ventilating systems and improvements to the learning centers at each school. The second part of the referendum would include the first part plus the remodeling and relocating of classrooms.

Poklaski advocated the two-part issue as a means of giving the voters a greater voice in deciding on the remodeling. He said that although he personally favored the complete remodeling work, he wanted to offer voters a choice on the amount of money to be spent on the remodeling.

Poklaski also said he felt it was gambling to put the entire remodeling project as a single bond issue. He felt the replacement of the heating and ventilating systems and improvements to the learning centers were the most important parts of the referendum. If the issues were split into two parts, there would be a better chance of at least the first part passing, he said.

AFTER LENGTHY discussion, the other board members agreed that the referendum should be a single issue so the two schools could be brought up to the comparable standards of Holmes and Lively junior high schools.

Poklaski initially moved to have the referendum as a two-part issue, but the motion died for lack of a second.

Sharrle Hildebrandt then made the single-issue referendum motion. Poklaski attempted to amend the motion to a two-part referendum, but the amendment was defeated. The board then passed the referendum motion.

SCOTT KELLEY, architect for the remodeling, was directed to report back to the board with revised plans and cost estimates reflecting the exclusion of auditoriums in their remodeling.

Kelley did not give an exact date for his return to the board, but indicated that he would need at least two weeks to obtain the information the board requested.

Kelley declined to make even a guess at the cost of the remodeling with the auditoriums excluded.

At an earlier board meeting, Kelly had estimated the cost of remodeling for the two schools, including the auditoriums and air conditioning, at $1.9 million.

No matter what it's called, lake 'needs common name'

by CAROL RHYNE

"That which we call a rose, by any other name would smell as sweet." — from Romeo and Juliet

Cosman Lake — the Big Lake — Lake, — Lake by the townhouses — Village Lake. These are all names Elk Grove Village residents use to refer to the body of water by Leicester Road and Wellington Avenue. Officially, the lake has no name.

Although a name will never make the water level rise for boating in the summer or make the ice freeze harder for skating in the winter, village officials say a name could make the critical difference in saving a life in an accident by the lake.

"We need a definite, clear name for the lake so that everybody, especially those who live nearby, know the name in case of emergency," Village Fire Chief Allen Hulett said this week.

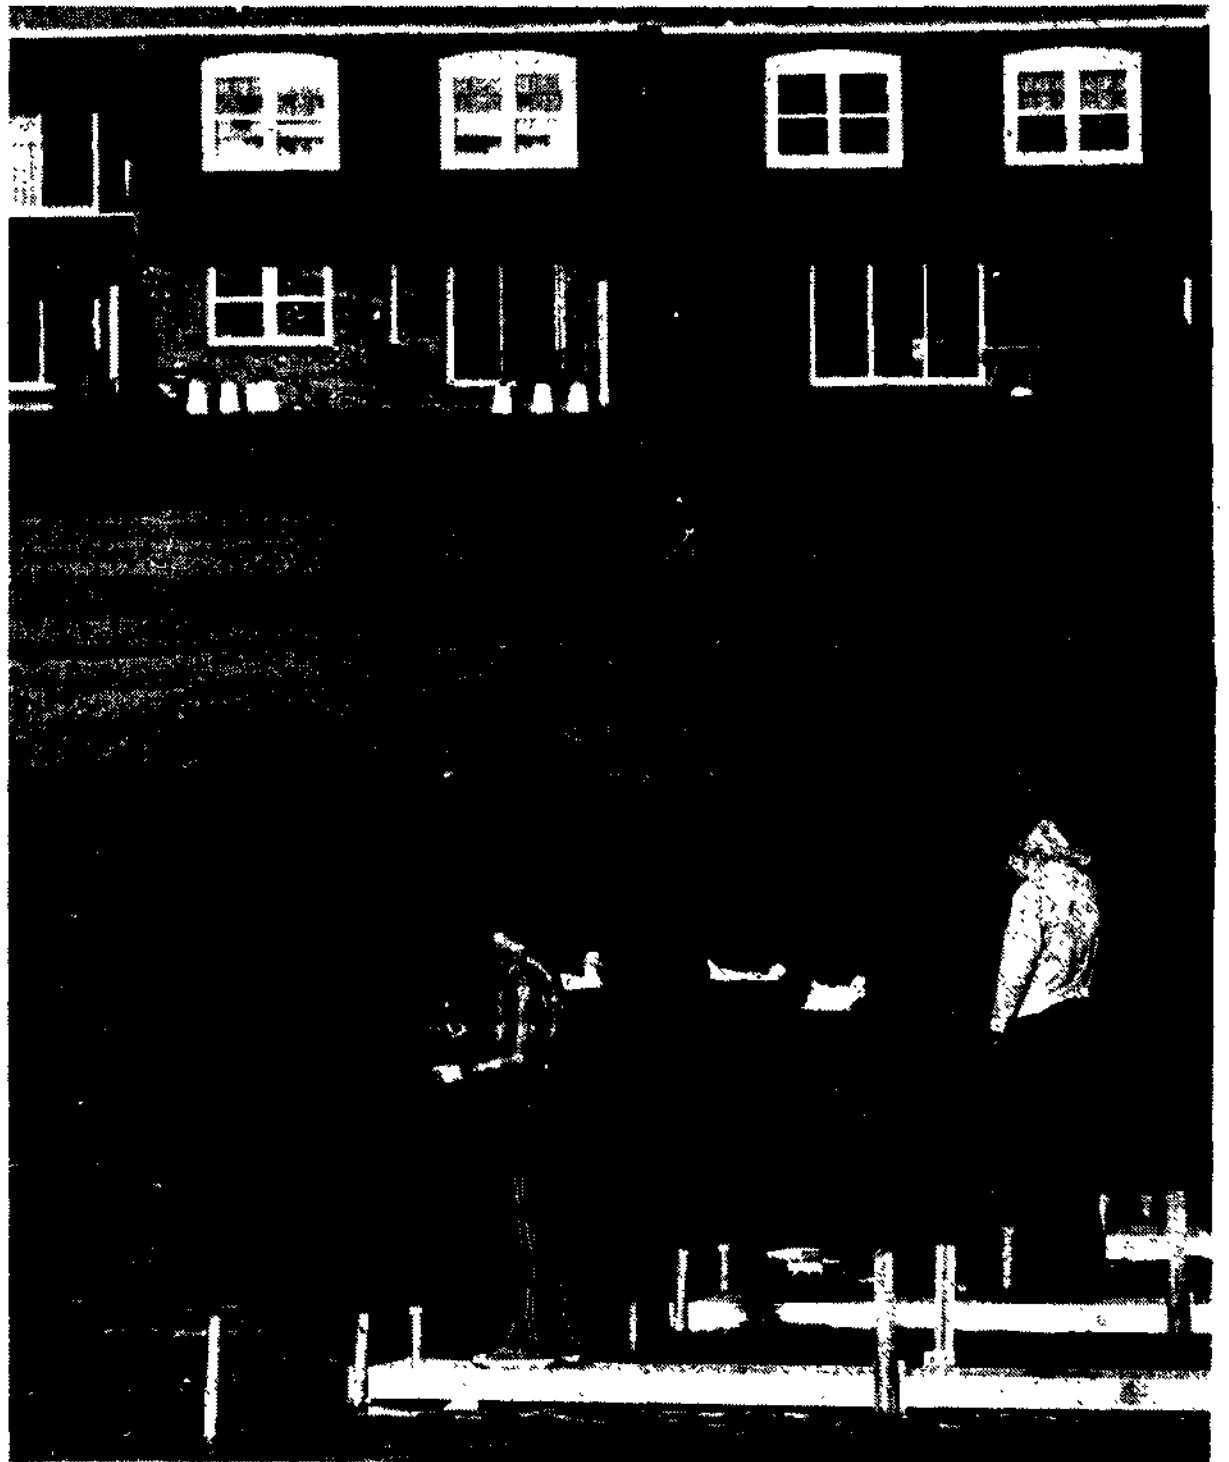

The name is important because of time, he said. If someone is in trouble by the lake and needs the police or fire department, time is wasted when the alarm operator at the fire station has to guess which lake is the scene of the accident, he said.

VILLAGE MGR. Charles Willis said that as more lakes and water retention ponds are built in and around the village, it will become more important for each body of water to have a name. He has asked the village plan commission to recommend an official name for the lake.

Hulett said Cynthia Marcia, 13, of 705 Bordeaux Ct., was rescued by firemen Feb. 23 after she fell through the ice while skating on the lake by the townhouses. He said there was some confusion among the citizens reporting the accident. Residents called the pond by names such as the Lake, Elk Grove State Lake, the Big Lake and Cosman Lake.

"Luckily we guessed correctly where the girl fell in but time is important and there should be no confusion over names," Hulett said.

MILD WEATHER has attracted some early-bird fishermen to the lake off Leicester Road in Elk Grove Village. The lake is officially nameless, and the village plan commission is considering an appropriate title.

Steiback is scheduled to appear in Elk Grove Village circuit court April 11. He is currently being held in the Cook County House of Corrections on $87,000 bond.

Jack Costello

Costello to seek new school term

High School Dist. 214 Board member Jack Costello announced Monday he will be a candidate for reelection in the April 14 school board election.

Costello, of Mount Prospect, said, "These four years have been very challenging and rewarding and I appreciate the opportunity to serve. I would like to serve another three years if I'm elected."

Costello has been on the board since 1969. He is vice president and general manager of Revere Aluminum Building Products Inc.

The other two incumbents whose terms expire this year have announced they will not seek reelection. Ray Erickson and Richard Greenfield will leave the board in April.

Two candidates have filed nominating petitions for the board. They are Warren Schabinger of Mount Prospect and Donald Hoeck of Arlington Heights.

Friendship contractor may be fired

Albert Berg, general contractor for Friendship Junior High School in Des Plaines, may be fired from the job by Elk Grove Township School Dist. 58.

The school board took the first step towards possible removal of Berg at a special board meeting Monday night, when a resolution was adopted giving Berg and his bonding company notice that he may be removed.

The resolution also directs the district's architect, Berger, Kelley & Associates, to evaluate the situation on the job site and possibly prepare the necessary certification to remove Berg.

Under the terms of the construction contract, the architect must certify that the contractor is not fulfilling the contract and should be removed.

THE ARCHITECT is to have the review and the possible certification prepared by March 26. If the architect agrees that Berg should be removed, notice of removal could be given by the school board anytime after that date.

When notice is given, Berg will have seven days to clear the job site, taking all tools and equipment with him. After seven days, the school district takes control of the site and any equipment left by the contractor.

The district will then be free to hire another contractor or make arrangements to have the work done on a piecemeal basis.

James Ertiv, district superintendent, said the architects informed the administration that the progress promised by Berg has not been made. The board's attorney was then directed to draw up the resolution notifying Berg that he may be taken off the job site.

MONDAY'S RESOLUTION does not commit the board to any action, but is designed to serve as a legal warning to Berg that his work is not satisfactory to the board.

Completion of the school has been repeatedly postponed by construction delays. Grant Terrell, project representative for the architectural firm, has appeared before the board during the past few months to report on the progress at the school.

Terrell has blamed many of the delays on mismanagement by Berg.

Originally, the school was to have opened in January. The opening date was pushed back to mid-March then mid-May, then June 1 and the latest date given was July 15.

The board had hoped to have the school opened for summer school this year so there could be a trial period before the full classes start in September. Now there is a possibility the building will not be ready in September.

BERG ALSO has appeared before the school board in past months to justify the delays and promise that his firm could make up for lost time.

At the meeting Monday, Scott Kelley, architect, presented the sixth revision Berg has drawn up for the time-table. According to Berg's schedule, several projects are to be either completed or under construction by mid-March. Kelley said none of the projects have been started.

Kelley said the building could still be ready for classes in September, but not at the present rate of progress shown by Berg.

"To say it (the construction work) can't be done is wrong," said Kelley. "I say it can be done in time, but not with the present work force of the contractor."

Kelley said several other contractors also working on the site are unable to finish their work because of the lack of progress shown by Berg.

Zettek takes Devon-53 to the people

No date yet for Devon-53 hearing

No date has yet been set for the public hearing on the Devon-53 housing project, but Elk Grove Village plan commissioners are expected to schedule the hearing in late April or May.

Developers of the 267-acre multi-family and single-family development have asked the village to annex the land and rezone it for planned unit development that is expected to attract 13,000 people when completed.

Technically the owners will be asking for a text amendment to the zoning ordinance that would create a new zoning classification for planned unit developments. The present maximum density for such a development is 20 dwelling units per acre, and the new category would allow a higher density which has not been specified.

The plan commission has hired Allen Kracower, of Allen Kracower & Associates Inc., of Evanston, as a planning consultant to prepare the commissioners for the hearing. He currently is working on a soil impact study to determine what the land will support. He also will draw up a sample list of questions for the commissioners to ask the developers at the hearing.

The commission also plans to take an opinion survey to find out how the village residents would like to see the rest of the village developed.

The plan commission is in the process of hiring an attorney to advise the members in the legal aspects of the annexation and zoning.

fight against rezoning the remaining 100 acres," Zettek said.

Zettek said if the project were built in unincorporated Cook County, the development would still be a neighbor and the village would incur the problem of additional people without any control over the area.

IF THE DEVELOPMENT comes into Elk Grove Village, the village can require a 10 per cent land dedication for public use, a $500 donation per acre for traffic lights, a two million-gallon water reservoir and well and an adequate sewage system, Zettek said. He said if the land were developed in the county, the owners could build on the 10 per cent of land that the village would have received, and school and park districts would have to condemn and purchase the land they need.

Zettek said if Devon-53 is built in the village, the rate the units are built could be controlled so as not to create additional sewage problems. If in the village, buildings and streets would be constructed according to village standards, which are higher than those of the county, he said.

School discipline to be studied

The High School Dist. 214 Board decided Monday it wants to look into the problem of discipline in its schools, perhaps by calling a meeting where building administrators can express their opinions on the situation.

The board reached agreement on that issue after board member Jack Costello, newly announced candidate for reelection, expressed concern over the amount of insubordination reported in the suspension reports received by the board each month.

"I have become more and more concerned about the number of times insubordination and bad language is reported," Costello said. "I think we should deal very harshly with that. I wouldn't tolerate that kind of language and I don't think we should ask our people to tolerate it either."

SUPT. EDWARD GILBERT said the only actions the school could take would be to increase the length of suspensions required for insubordination or "If the violation is flagrant, we could go for expulsion."

Suspensions for up to 10 days may be made by school administrators. Expulsion, which could be for a full semester, must be acted on by the board.

Board member Richard Bachhuber said he does not like the idea of using expulsion as a discipline tool. "I think we ought to find some other way to control things instead of throwing a kid out," he said.

Board member Gene Artemenko suggested the board meet specifically to discuss approaches to discipline problems and added that Gilbert and other administrators could also find out whether any other school districts are using other methods to control students.

IN OTHER ACTION, the board authorized $37,015 for seven school buses which will be used during the day next year to bus students to outside locations connected with their classes.

Among the locations students will be bused to next year are automobile dealerships where they will work as part of the auto mechanics program and elementary and nursery schools where students in child care and social science classes will work.

Assistant Supt. Rod McLennan said last year the district spent $23,000 on busing for class purposes and added that expanding the programs may eventually allow the schools to save space.

Money for the buses will come from the district's transportation fund, not the fund which provides for educational programs.

State making Salt Creek water tests

Rolling Meadows Sanitarian Donald Schindler confirmed yesterday that the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency has taken two samples of water from Salt Creek to test for pollution. Schindler said he has received results of the first test but declined to reveal findings until further samples are examined.

EPA officials took the first sampling several weeks ago, Schindler said. A second sampling was made yesterday.

"One sampling does not constitute a confirmation of pollution," Schindler said. "A number of samples over a space of time have to be taken. A one-time shot as far as sampling does not mean the creek can be considered polluted."

Three samplings of the water must be taken to confirm on-going pollution in the water, according to EPA standards, Schindler said. Because of this, it will be several weeks before the city will have conclusive evidence on the pollution level of the creek, he said.

SCHINDLER SAID he has been investigating the pollution level of the creek for some time with the cooperation of the EPA. Two years ago samplings tested by the Illinois Public Health Laboratory of water from a section of Salt Creek in Rolling Meadows were declared "unsatisfactory indicating pollution."

Those tests were taken at the urging of the Illinois Wildlife Federation which stated the creek was polluted and signs to that effect should be posted along the creek warning of contamination.

An investigation of the Arlington Park Race Track as the suspected polluter was begun at the time, but official action against the track was never taken.

Schindler emphasized yesterday that officials have not made a determination as to the source of the suspected pollution. "Where it comes from and what will be done has to be determined at a later time," he said. If a pollution violator is found, however, Schindler said the violator would be called before the EPA board.

"I HAD A BRIEF discussion with the man from EPA when the first samples were taken," Schindler said. "We want corrective action and we'll do something about it." Until a third water sample is taken, however, he said the creek cannot be declared polluted.

The samples have been taken from the creek area in the northern part of the city near Euclid Avenue. Schindler said as yet other communities are not involved in the investigation because the problem does not seem to be occurring in the southern portion of the creek.

"We try to knock down all the little areas of pollution in the creek," he said. He called the current area of study "part of the over-all problem" of pollution in Salt Creek. "Correcting this will help eliminate all of the creek pollution," he said.

Schindler said results of yesterday's sampling will not be ready for several weeks. A third sampling will probably be taken in the next few weeks, he added.

Salt Creek bisects the length of Rolling Meadows from the city's northern end near Euclid Avenue to the southern end at Golf Road. It intersects Palatine, Schaumburg, and Elk Grove townships and empties into the Des Plaines River.

CHESS MASTER Jude Acers has been meeting with area high school chess clubs this week while in town for a chess exhibition at Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg. Acers will take on 20 challengers at 3 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. today and tomorrow at the shopping center. All comers are invited to bring their favorite board and challenge the master. Acers says he is the only chess master in the country currently making a living from the game, which he learned in a Southern orphanage. Someday, he believes, he will play and beat World Chess Champion Bobby Fischer.

Money is name of the game for chess ace Acers

Move over, Bobby, here comes Jude

by KURT BAER

Jude Acers says someday he will beat World Chess Champion Bobby Fischer. And when he does it will be for a whole lot of money.

Money is the reason Acers plays chess. He admits it without qualm and says he is only sorry more chess masters can't make a living at the sport.

The 29-year-old chess master is in town, a guest at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel, to give a chess playing exhibition at Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg. He will take on 20 challengers at a time today and tomorrow at 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. in the shopping center's central court.

In some respects the Woodfield exhibition is just a warm-up for Acers who will engage 120 chess challengers on ABC's Wide World of Sports April 21.

"I'M THE ONLY chess master in the country making a living out of playing chess," he says, adding he fully expects to be a millionaire long before he stops playing.

But money hasn't always been a part of Jude Acers' game.

A child of Southern orphanages, he became a chess master at 17, youngest ever at that time in the South. His early career was filled with playing chess for $15 and $20 a night in San Francisco bars and coffee houses.

"My first year on a national tour, my manager lost $10,000 on me," he says. "Today I'd want $5,000 to even walk into a tournament. And I'd want a million dollars, in the bank, to play Fischer."

Acers blames the fact that most U.S. chess masters "still have to play for crumbs" on the powerful U.S. Chess Federation, an association which he says has blacklisted him from major tournaments and refused to promote him to Grand Master standing.

The fortunes of war for Jude Acers began to turn when the eyes of the world, if not the television cameras, focused on Fischer's match with Russian Grand Master Boris Spassky.

THE MATCH, with all the antics and intrigue that accompanied it, shattered the popular image of chess as a stuffy game played by old men who sit around in winged-back leather chairs, and millions of Americans began to learn the Danish Gambit and to study the games of the masters.

Acers is not among those who criticize Fischer for his eccentric behavior during his match with Spassky, although he says he respects Bobby as "the most dangerous player in chess."

The next-world championship match should be held in about two years Acers says, "if Fischer will play."

"Bobby is dangerous because he'll only quit while he's ahead. The farther ahead he gets in a match, the more ruthless, the more precise his playing becomes. It's exactly the opposite of what you would expect."

ACERS TALKS about Fischer, his habits, game strategy and personal eccentricities, the way top professional boxers study and work to out-psyche their opponents.

But far beyond the limelight of world championship matches, Acers is just as fanatical about chess in places like Woodfield and Grand Rapids, Mich., where he recently finished an exhibition.

"I love playing with children," he says, adding that "at times you have to carry them along so they learn from the game."

He will tutor a child in chess, from the ground up, for $300. It is a game that can and must be learned.

"There have probably only been two or three natural chess geniuses," he says.

It's all part of his game plan to promote chess and, not incidentally, himself. He has even authored his own motto. "All he is is everything."

Bobby Fischer, it's your move.

Search of river for lost youth discontinued

The 10-day search of the Des Plaines River for the body of a Chicago youth believed drowned in a March 3 canoeing mishap has been discontinued, according to Cook County Sheriff's police.

Periodic boat patrols will continue to cruise the river searching for John Plenta, 18, of 3434 N. Neva Ave., who was lost while canoeing with friends near Devon Avenue.

Early rescue attempts were hampered by high water and mud conditions along the river's banks. Cook County Forest Rangers and Rosemont fire fighters made unsuccessful attempts then to find the youth by dragging the river with hooks.

Since then however, operations had been stepped up to include Sheriff's police, Chicago and Melrose Park fire department rescue workers and Illinois Underwater Recovery team divers. The divers covered a four-mile area of the river from underwater Dam No. 4, where the youth was lost, to North Avenue.

The American Red Cross also joined in the search with the Illinois Air National Guard, which supplied a helicopter and the Metropolitan Sanitary District, which contributed a boat to the search efforts.

Sheriff's police, who coordinated the search, said at one point a total of 60 rescue workers were dragging the river as far south as Lockport, some 30 miles from Chicago.

Giant fair scheduled at Arlington Park

A giant fair, said to be comparable in size to a state fair and expected to draw as many as 400,000 persons, is scheduled at Arlington Park Race Track Aug. 24 through Sept. 3.

Future of America Fair Inc., which has been planning the event for nearly a year, set the dates 10 days ago, according to Vernon G. Wendland, executive vice president of the corporation. But final clearance for the dates must come from the village of Arlington Heights.

The fair will be "dedicated to offering the public its first experience in future agricultural, industrial, educational, social and commercial advancements," according to its planners.

According to the new Future of America Fair brochure, gates will open at 10:30 a.m. and close at 10:30 p.m. daily during the 11-day event. Gate admission will be $3 for adults and $1 for children. Children under six will be admitted free. Advance adult admissions will cost $2.25 and parking will be $1.

Each day of the fair will feature a theme. Among the themes are "Kid's Day, U.S.A.," "Sportsmen of America Day," "Young America Day," "American Heritage Day" and "Family Day, The American Way."

IN LATE NOVEMBER, the village board gave tentative approval to the fair plans, pending final plans and dates. Darryl Kenning, assistant village manager, said a permit for the fair has not been issued.

According to Tom Rivera, Arlington Park, spokesman, no date has been set for the fair. He said the dates, recently published in a four-color brochure available at the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce, are tentative.

"We are in the midst of settling the racing schedule and are sitting tight on the fair dates," said Rivera.

Currently the racing schedule is from April 14 through July 14.

Rivera says no date has been set to go before the village board for final approval of the fair and its dates. Kenning, however, said the village expects to hear from fair officials in about a month.

THE FUTURE of America Fair, the first of its kind anywhere, will include grandstand shows, an amusement center, fashion shows, arts and crafts demonstrations, ethnic activities, livestock exhibits, bands and musical groups and futurama exhibits.

"Each floor of the exhibit hall will have a different theme," said Wendland. "The first floor will be 'Creative Corners,' for crafts, the second floor will be 'Adventures in better living for industry and utilities,' the third floor will be 'Home Sweet Home' for room displays, the fourth floor will be 'International Village' for ethnic participation and the fifth floor will be 'Children's Hour' for toys and other things for children. There will also be an art gallery."

Exhibit space will be sold for $2 to $3 per square foot for inside displays depending on location and 25 cents to $1 per square foot for outdoor displays depending on the size of the display. Exhibits which include the sale of goods will cost 50 per cent more, said Wendland, former director of the Wisconsin State Fair.

Commerce Dept. official to speak

William D. Lee, deputy assistant secretary for business development in the U. S. Commerce Department, will speak to members of the Elk Grove Village Association of Industry and Commerce at noon March 27 at the Navarone Restaurant, 1905 E. Higgins Rd.

Tickets may be purchased for $3 for members and $5 for guests at the association office, 1010 Grove Mall.

Lee was named executive director of the National Business Council for Consumer Affairs in 1971, and he has served as deputy assistant secretary and director of the Bureau of Domestic Commerce in the Commerce Department.

Prior to his Washington appointments, Lee was employed by General Electric Co. for 28 years.

Named to dean's list

Michael J. Halladay, 615 Ipswitch Ct., Elk Grove Village, has been named to the dean's list for high academic achievement at Illinois State University.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Halladay, he is a 1970 graduate of Elk Grove High School. He is majoring in French and will study this summer at Grenoble University in France. Halladay, 19, is a junior.

Group seeks to 'sell' unit school plan, raise funds

Reiterating that its aim is to study the feasibility of starting a unit school district for Schaumburg Township, a citizens committee decided Friday to "sell itself" to those involved in the study area and make a plea for funds.

Chairman William Jackson said the group's immediate concern is hiring a professional consulting firm and living down rumors.

Interviews with representatives of three consulting firms were held last weekend. The members met with Dr. Ralph Betnap, of Northern Illinois University, Midwest Education Consultants and Illinois School Consultants.

On Friday the committee agreed more than the $5,105 in the committee's treasury might be needed to fund a study.

Preliminary estimates show a study could cost from $5,000 to $20,000.

Vice chairman James Blankenship and advisor Jim Guidotti suggested going to High School Dist. 211, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, major industries and even PTAs for funds.

REPRESENTATIVES of the study group asked advisor Robert Seger, High School Dist. 211 board member, to poll his board about a possible contribution to the study.

They also plan to ask for money when they attend an 8 p.m. Wednesday meeting of Dist. 54's reactivated unit study committee scheduled in the Dist. 54 administrative offices, 804 W. Bode Rd., Schaumburg.

Blankenship said school districts can receive state funds for unit district studies.

The committee will seek both school districts' cooperation in the study and presently working on a public relations package.

"We must work to live down first rumors of our alleged political beginnings," said Jackson. He stressed the members were pledged to an unbiased course of action in finding advantages or disadvantages to the whole area and not just the village of Schaumburg, if a unit district were formed.

HE SAID ONE alternative of the study would be the impact of formation of a unit district for the Village of Schaumburg, but said other alternatives would also be sought.

Blankenship and Jackson, reported on a meeting with a representative of Richard Martwick's Cook County school superintendent's offices.

Jackson said the committee agreed with the county's suggestion the study should seek educational rather than financial advantages.

Seger, who attended the meeting, said the county representative gave procedural information, remained neutral and offered further help.

Due to the resignation of Joseph Wolfe, secretary of the study group, the committee did not receive a formalized statement on purposes, aims and guidelines Wolfe was preparing.

MEMBERS USING some of the materials Wolfe prepared before his resignation and Martwick's representative's suggestions, came up with some committee aims.

They plan to ask consultants interviewed to consider the following points in their study:

- enrollment projections, facilities, transportation, and educational programs.

- state and legal aspects, finances and the recommendation of a tax rate if a unit district were deemed feasible.

The study group will discuss the interviews with consulting firms at next week's meeting.

The meeting will be at 8 p.m. Friday in the conference room of Schaumburg's Great Hall on Civic Drive.

Low bid $80,000 over estimate

Birchwood Park work cost still over estimate

Constructing the Birchwood Park swimming pool and gymnasium would still cost approximately $80,000 more than originally estimated, even after proposed cuts by the Palatine Park District's architect.

By eliminating the basement, mansard roof, some outside lighting and other construction details from the project at Illinois and Bennett avenues, architect Joe L. Bennett told park officials that the project would cost $880,000. Although that figure is down from the $1,030,000, low bid turned in Friday, it is still 10 per cent higher than Bennett estimated when he drew up the original plans.

Bennett will be negotiating with the low bidders to try and lower the $880,000 figure, but he admitted "I can't negotiate $80,000." That was the budget set by park officials last fall. The present costs could be lowered by another $10,000 to $15,000. Any further cuts would have to come by reducing the size of the building or pool, Bennett told the commissioners.

Park officials are considering doing their own general contracting to save money on the project. Although no cost estimates were known, commissioners heard conflicting opinions about possible savings by hiring their own construction supervisor.

"I'VE ALWAYS advised against that," Bennett told the board as he described problems of coordinating subcontracts and insurance.

Jim Bennett, Palatine village director of public works, countered that in several instances, the village had saved up to 50 per cent by contracting their own work. More information is being collected by park district director Fred P. Hall.

During quizzing by park commissioners, who asked why the bids were so much higher than his estimates, Joe Bennett said additions to the plans raised the cost after his first estimate. With his proposed cuts, the architect told commissioners that he had brought the cost within 5 per cent of the park district's budget.

"We're not within that 5 per cent," Hall countered. The original of $800,000 did not include the basement. Now, bids are at $880,000 for the same construction.

"The frills are out," Hall said of Bennett's revisions.

The total of 23 contractors bid on several phases of the pool and gymnasium construction. Meyer Ross, Inc., of Northbrook returned the low bid for general contracting work.

Village refusal to rezone plot results in suit

Suit has been filed against the Village of Palatine's refusal to rezone a small piece of property on Northwest Highway for an office building.

Dick Richards, a Barrington engineer, filed suit in Cook County Circuit Court seeking B-1 zoning for his 4,300-square foot parcel at the northwest corner of Northwest Highway and Warren Avenue.

Richards' rezoning request was turned down last summer by the Palatine Village Board, mainly because of the building's size. 16 feet 9 inches by 95 feet.

Richards' attorney, Julian R. Hansen of Chicago, said yesterday the suit is based on two factors — that Northwest Highway is a business-commercial street ("any decent planner would say you just can't put a house there") and that the village has set a precedent by making several zoning changes in the immediate vicinity of the Richards property.

"I don't think we should be treated differently than the businesses along the Northwest Highway," Hansen said.

In a letter written just after village trustees turned down the rezoning request Aug. 14, Hansen maintained objection to the building's size "is not a question of zoning, but of the building code."

HE SAID THE property constitutes "a duly platted plot, however irregular in size, and the owner should be entitled to utilize the land for its highest and best use." The village's denial of the rezoning request "is unconstitutional," according to Hansen.

The Richards property is bounded on three sides by business zoned property. The fourth side is adjacent to the Arlington Crest subdivision. Several subdivision residents questioned Richards at a public hearing before the plan commission last summer, but did not lodge a formal objection to his rezoning request.

The plan commission, which recommended denial of the request, suggested Richards attempt to include the adjoining Commonwealth Edison Co. right-of-way in developing his property, but Richards indicated the utility company was not willing to sell its land.

Richards' property currently is zoned for single-family residential use, but Richards has maintained it is too small for a house. He proposed building a one-story office building for his civil engineering practice.

Village officials have been given 30 days to respond to the lawsuit. They're expected to defend their denial of the rezoning petition.

The case has been assigned to Judge Nathan M. Cohen.

Drive-in theatre cash stolen from parked car

Weekend cash receipts from the 53 Drive-In totalling $2,000 to $3,000 were stolen yesterday from a parked car at the Old Madrid apartment complex, 730 N. Hicks Rd., Palatine.

The manager of the drive-in movie at Rand Road and Rte. 53, Roger Rosenbaum, told police the money was taken between 5 p.m. Monday and 8:20 a.m. yesterday.

Cut marks in the car's rubber door molding indicated that someone had broken into the vehicle. The cash box hidden under the seat contained proceeds from the movie showings Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights.

Cash from fireman's memorial fund reported stolen

Cash from collection boxes for a firemen's memorial fund was stolen earlier this week at the Palatine American Legion Hall.

An undetermined amount of money was in the cardboard containers early Monday when the theft occurred. The cash register and a vending attachment to the pool table were also emptied.

Approximately $75 to $100 was taken in the theft at 122 W. Palatine Rd. Police suspect the thief had a key to the building, since no signs of forcible entry were found.

The American Legion started the fund drive after three Palatine firemen were killed in the Ben Franklin store fire Feb. 23.

The collection boxes were emptied Friday night, so there was apparently not a large amount of money in the fund boxes.

"If we got some tips during the evening, we'd throw them in there, but there couldn't have been too much money in them," a Legion bar tender said yesterday.

As of last week, the Legion had raised $2,300 for the firemen.

Sewer service rejected for 14-acre store site

Palatine village trustees this week flatly turned down a request to provide village sewer service to property for which annexation to Rolling Meadows is sought.

The 14-acre site is south of Northwest Highway and the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks, and west of Rohlwing Road.

The land is owned by DeCoster Co. Rentors of St. Paul, Minn., under option to Midway-Platt Co., also of St. Paul.

The firm is planning to build a materials retail store on the site.

The property now lies in unincorporated

Palatine Township, but Midway-Platt has petitioned the City of Rolling Meadows for annexation. A public hearing is to be held March 28.

Meanwhile, DeCoster asked the Village of Palatine for a storm sewer connection.

The village in the past has not permitted sewer or water hookups to property outside the Palatine village limits, and the trustees did not yield to this latest request.

Trustee Clayton W. Brown said, "If they want to use our sewers, why don't they annex to Palatine? I can't see us providing services to people who aren't residents."

The motion denying the request was passed unanimously.

Church, village OK road pact

The Village of Palatine and the First Baptist Church of Palatine have struck a deal which paves the way for the widening of Palatine Road near the Winston Park subdivision.

The church agreed to dedicate to the village its right-of-way on the south side of Palatine Road, which is needed by the state highway division for the Palatine Road improvements.

In return, the village agreed to vacate the west half of Minafred Drive, between Glencoe and Palatine roads. Minafred is a dedicated but unimproved street.

The arrangement between the village and the church gives the state the last piece of right-of-way needed for the Palatine Road widening. Earlier, the state had purchased six homes which were in the path of the Palatine frontage roads.

The state is planning to call for bids next month for the Palatine Road improvements, and to begin construction during the summer.

The project involves widening Palatine Road from two to four lanes between Winston and Williams drives. Left-turn lanes will be provided at both intersections, and the present frontage roads will be retained, with some modifications.

Village paper drive Saturday

Newspapers will be collected for recycling Saturday by the Very Interested Parents (VIP) Club of Palatine High School.

A trailer will be available to receive the papers at the school between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. Papers left at curbside before 9 a.m. in the area north of the Chicago and North Western Railway tracks in Palatine will be picked up.

Arrangements for paper pick-ups in other areas may be made in advance by calling Bob Murphy, 358-9540.

Proceeds from the drive will be divided between the freshman class and the VIP club.

Correction

A Herald article that appeared Monday identified all of the Village Independent Party candidates in the Palatine village election, with the exception of one trustee candidate, as registered Republicans.

The VIP candidate for village clerk, Marilyn J. Bogen, is an Independent.

Last minute calls boost blood donations

A last minute barrage of calls yesterday has enabled the Palatine Health Department to meet its quota of blood donors for today's drawing.

Richard A. Dawson, environmental health director, said late yesterday afternoon some 32 persons called the health department yesterday to volunteer to give a pint of blood each in the village-wide drive.

Yesterday's volunteers bring the village to within six pints of meeting its goal of 292 pints of blood. The drawing is to take place between 4 and 5:30 and 7 and 9 p.m. today at the Presbyterian Church of Palatine, Palatine and Rohlwing roads.

Dawson said the health department will continue to accept appointments for today's drawing, and also will sign up residents for the next drawing, June 8.

He credited a Herald article which appeared yesterday with helping to attract donors and expressed satisfaction that the goal has practically been met. "The people of Palatine have once again responded to our pleas for donors for the blood assurance program," he said.

The village must obtain a total of 1,200 pints of blood during its five scheduled drawings in order for all Palatine residents to receive an unlimited supply of blood for one year.

This form is only for residents who live within the corporate limits of the Village of Palatine.

Girl Scouts, leader honored

Medals for outstanding service in Catholic Girl Scouting were awarded to a Palatine leader and 11 cadet scouts during recent ceremonies at Holy Name Cathedral in Chicago.

Betty Hildebrandt, a scout leader with St. Theresa Catholic Church, received the St. Anne Award, highest award in Catholic girls' scouting.

Girls from the St. Theresa troop receiving the Marian Medal for work during the past 1½ years are: Sharon Bouchonville, Dorothea Connolly, Kathy Fitzpatrick, Rosemary Hoppens, Carolyn Iwans, Julia Mannix, Sue Masbaum, Therese Stefonek, Ellen Strutman, Diane Waeghe and Sharon Wagner. The Palatine group, all 7th to 9th graders, were included with 300 Chicago-area girl scouts getting the medals.

John Cardinal Cody, head of the Chicago Archdiocese, presided at the afternoon ceremonies. The annual awards presentation ceremony is organized by the Archdiocesan Office of Youth Activities. Winners of the St. Anne award were chosen by balloting of a selection committee formed by Girl Scout leaders and advisors.

Before the award ceremonies yesterday, the St. Theresa Council of Catholic Women hosted a breakfast honoring the award recipients. Susie Curtis, who previously received the Marian Medal, represented the Northwest suburbs at the afternoon cathedral program.

CHESS MASTER Jude Acers has been meeting with area high school chess clubs this week while in town for a chess exhibition at Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg. Acers will take on 20 challengers at 3 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. today and tomorrow at the shopping center. All comers are invited to bring their favorite board and challenge the master. Acers says he is the only chess master in the country currently making a living from the game, which he learned in a Southern orphanage. Someday, he believes, he will play and beat World Chess Champion Bobby Fischer.

Move over, Bobby, here comes Jude

by KURT BAER

Jude Acers says someday he will beat World Chess Champion Bobby Fischer. And when he does it will be for a whole castleful of money.

Money is the reason Acers plays chess. He admits it without qualm and says he is only sorry more chess masters can't make a living at the sport.

The 29-year-old chess master is in town, a guest at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel, to give a chess playing exhibition at Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg. He will take on 20 challengers at a time today and tomorrow at 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. in the shopping center's central court.

In some respects the Woodfield exhibition is just a warm-up for Acers who will engage 120 chess challengers on ABC's Wide World of Sports April 21.

"I'm THE ONLY chess master in the country making a living out of playing chess," he says, adding he fully expects to be a millionaire long before he stops playing.

But money hasn't always been a part of Jude Acers' game. A child of Southern orphanages, he became a chess master at 17, youngest ever at that time in the South. His early career was filled with playing chess for $35 and $20 a night in San Francisco bars and coffee houses.

"My first year on a national tour, my manager lost $10,000 on me," he says. "Today I'd want $5,000 to even walk into a tournament. And I'd want a million dollars, in the bank, to play Fischer."

Acers blames the fact that most U.S. chess masters "still have to play for crumbs" on the powerful U.S. Chess Federation, an association which he says has blacklisted him from major tournaments and refused to promote him to Grand Master standing.

The fortunes of war for Jude Acers began to turn when the eyes of the world, if not the television cameras, focused on Fischer's match with Russian Grand Master Boris Spassky.

THE MATCH, with all the antics and intrigue that accompanied it, shattered the popular image of chess as a stuffy game played by old men who sit around in winged-back leather chairs, and millions of Americans began to learn the Danish Gambit and to study the games of the masters.

Acers is not among those who criticize Fischer for his eccentric behavior during his match with Spassky, although he says he respects Bobby as "the most dangerous player in chess."

"Fischer is worth the price because you need showmen," Acers says. "But he never should have barred the television cameras. That could have killed chess in America."

The next-world championship match should be held in about two years Acers says, "if Fischer will play."

"Bobby is dangerous because he'll only quit while he's ahead. The farther ahead he gets in a match, the more ruthless, the more precise his playing becomes. It's exactly the opposite of what you would expect."

ACERS TALKS about Fischer, his habits, game strategy and personal eccentricities, the way top professional boxers study and work to out-psyche their opponents.

But far beyond the limelight of world championship matches, Acers is just as fanatical about chess in places like Woodfield and Grand Rapids, Mich., where he recently finished an exhibition.

"I love playing with children," he says, adding that "at times you have to carry them along so they learn from the game."

Aldermen argue proposal

Attempt to change standing committees' titles blocked

An attempt to change the names of two standing committees of the Rolling Meadows City Council ended last night in the midst of a charge by Ald. Kenneth Retzke (5th) that the city's finance committee has been stripped of its powers.

The charge came when a debate resulted on Ald. John Rock's (3rd) motion to change the name of the finance and purchasing committee to the administration and financing committee. Rock, chairman of the ordinance and judiciary committee, had also asked that the name of the streets, alleys and utilities (SAU) committee be changed to the public works committee.

When an argument broke out on why the word "administration" was being used, Retzke, a member of the finance committee, said the committee no longer knows what its duties are nor what it should be called.

"We find now that we are not to review the budget," he charged, referring to a decision to submit the budget to the entire council for preliminary review rather than to the finance committee, as has been the practice for 18 years.

"I THINK we are looking for someone to define just what the duties of this committee should be," Retzke said. "We're a purchasing committee that doesn't purchase and a finance committee that doesn't have any review power over a budget."

Retzke's remarks came after Ald. Daniel Weber (4th) questioned why the word "administration" had been chosen. Finance committee chairman Ald. Fred Jacobson (5th) said since the committee does no "purchasing," as its present title implies, and instead oversees some of the clerical and personnel matters of the city, committee members thought the word accurately described some of the committee's functions.

Weber disagreed with Jacobson's explanation that the committee also regulates salary for city employees as other committees do for the departments they represent. Weber said his SAU committee, has no control over salaries and that pay raises are determined by the city manager.

Delay arraignment in Edfors' murder

The arraignment of Mrs. Elaine Edfors, charged with the double murder of her daughters in their Rolling Meadows home Feb. 26, will take place at 9 a.m. Friday in Arlington Heights Circuit Court.

The arraignment was originally scheduled for yesterday.

Mrs. Edfors is being held in connection with the bludgeoning deaths of her 8 and 9-year-old daughters, Pamela and Debbie. She allegedly beat the girls to death with a hammer.

EPA taking test samples of Salt Creek's water

Rolling Meadows Sanitarian Donald Schindler confirmed yesterday that the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency has taken two samples of water from Salt Creek to test for pollution. Schindler said he has received results of the first test but declined to reveal findings until further samples are examined.

EPA officials took the first sampling several weeks ago, Schindler said. A second sampling was made yesterday.

"One sampling does not constitute a confirmation of pollution," Schindler said. "A number of samples over a space of time have to be taken. A one-time shot as far as sampling does not mean the creek can be considered polluted."

Three samplings of the water must be taken to confirm on-going pollution in the water, according to EPA standards, Schindler said. Because of this, it will be several weeks before the city will have conclusive evidence on the pollution level of the creek, he said.

SCHINDLER SAID he has been investigating the pollution level of the creek for some time with the cooperation of the EPA. Two years ago samplings tested by the Illinois Public Health Laboratory of water from a section of Salt Creek in Rolling Meadows were declared "unsatisfactory indicating pollution."

Those tests were taken at the urging of the Illinois Wildlife Federation which stated the creek was polluted and signs to that effect should be posted along the creek warning of contamination.

An investigation of the Arlington Park Race Track as the suspected polluter was begun at the time, but official action against the track was never taken.

Schindler emphasized yesterday that officials have not made a determination as to the source of the suspected pollution. "Where it comes from and what will be done has to be determined at a later time," he said. If a pollution violator is found, however, Schindler said the violator would be called before the EPA board.

"I HAD A BRIEF discussion with the man from EPA when the first samples were taken," Schindler said. "We want corrective action and we'll do something about it." Until a third water sample is taken, however, he said the creek cannot be declared polluted.

"We try to knock down all the little areas of pollution in the creek," he said. He called the current area of study "part of the over-all problem" of pollution in Salt Creek. "Correcting this will help eliminate all of the creek pollution," he said.

Salt Creek bisects the length of Rolling Meadows from the city's northern end at Golf Road. It intersects Palatine, Schaumburg, and Elk Grove townships near Euclid Avenue to the southern end and empties into the Des Plaines River.

The samples have been taken from the creek area in the northern part of the city near Euclid Avenue. Schindler said as yet other communities are not involved in the investigation because the problem does not seem to be occurring in the southern portion of the creek.

Schindler said results of yesterday's sampling will not be ready for several weeks. A third sampling will probably be taken in the next few weeks, he added.

Mayor Meyer to endorse in 5 aldermanic races

Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer said yesterday he intends to make endorsements in all five aldermanic contests within the next few weeks.

Meyer said he has not had an opportunity to speak to candidates yet but will do so soon to determine whom he will support. "I have not had a chance to sit down with the candidates and discuss matters with them," he said. "I will be getting together with the candidates who are running to get their views and ideas on what they would like to see for the city in the next four years."

Meyer said his endorsements would be based on the discussions he has with candidates.

In off-year elections four years ago, Meyer endorsed the five incumbent candidates running, including James Watson (1st), Thomas Waldron (2nd), Stephen Eberhard (3rd), Daniel Weber (4th), and Rudolf Balek (5th). All but Balek were reelected. Fred Jacobson, current incumbent in the 5th Ward, defeated Balek.

Jacobson, Waldron, Eberhard, Weber and Merrill Wuersch (1st) are seeking reelection April 17. Challengers in the ward races are Deane Wandersee in the 1st Ward, Richard Nolan in the 3rd Ward, George Corral in the 4th Ward, and Bernard Macklin in the 5th Ward.

Waldron is running unopposed.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

The convicted triggerman in the Joseph "Jock" Yablonski murders has testified two former United Mine Workers officials told him ex-union president "Tony" Boyle ordered the killings "for the welfare of the UMW."

Three hundred government agents, using armored personnel carriers have tightened the circle around militant Indians entrenched at Wounded Knee, S.D.

The government will recommend Amtrak be given two more years to prove it can save the passenger train . . . but that four money-losing routes be dropped now.

Urging a one-year delay in enforcing clean air standards, Ford Motor Co. warned that allowing unreliable pollution control devices would be like throwing "a catastrophe into hands of the public."

Railroad labor and management negotiators announced tentative agreement on new contracts for 14 unions representing 500,000 rail workers. An official for the machinists' union said he may reject the proposal.

The state

The Illinois House passed, 115-42, and sent to the Senate a bill that would forbid the Environmental Protection Agency from banning open burning of leaves.

A suit filed in Juvenile Court charges that two children from Illinois were beaten, isolated, and kept in handcuffs in a room in a Texas institution for neglected children.

Bills to provide emergency loans to financially troubled mass transit systems in the state, including up to $18.9 million for the CTA, moved to the passage stage in the Senate.

The world

Operation Homecoming's reception center, idle for five days, will receive 142 released American prisoners by the end of the week, 108 of them today.

Six persons have been detained for questioning in Bermuda and all handguns have been ordered turned in for ballistics tests in the search for assassins of Gov. Sir Richard Sharples.

In the latest Northern Ireland violence a British patrol shot and killed an armed man in Belfast, and a soldier died in a land mine ambush.

The war

American jet fighters today bombarded Communist positions along Cambodia's southern Highway 2, where Cambodian command reported a relentless all-night attack against troops in the village of Prasat Neang Khmau . . . In Saigon, it was announced that South Korea, whose troops piled up a 10-1 kill ratio against the Communists, officially cease operations today.

Discipline problems cause concern among school officials

The High School Dist. 214 Board decided Monday it wants to look into the problem of discipline in its schools, perhaps by calling a meeting where building administrators can express their opinions on the situation.

The board reached agreement on that issue after board member Jack Costello, newly announced candidate for reelection, expressed concern over the amount of insubordination reported in the suspension reports received by the board each month.

"I have become more and more concerned about the number of times insubordination and bad language is reported," Costello said. "I think we should deal very harshly with that. I wouldn't tolerate that kind of language and I don't think we should ask our people to tolerate it either."

SUPT. EDWARD GILBERT said the only actions the school could take would be to increase the length of suspensions required for insubordination or "if the violation is flagrant, we could go for expulsion."

Suspensions for up to 10 days may be made by school administrators. Expulsion, which could be for a full semester, must be acted on by the board.

Board member Richard Bachhuber said he does not like the idea of using expulsion as a discipline tool. "I think we ought to find some other way to control things instead of throwing a kid out," he said.

Board member Gene Artemenko suggested the board meet specifically to discuss approaches to discipline problems and added that Gilbert and other administrators could also find out whether any other school districts are using other methods to control students.

IN OTHER ACTION, the board authorized $57,015 for seven school buses which will be used during the day next year to bus students to outside locations connected with their classes.

Among the locations students will be bused to next year are automobile dealerships where they will work as part of the auto mechanics program and elementary and nursery schools where students in child care and social science classes will work.

Assistant Supt. Rod McLennan said last year the district spent $23,000 on busing for class purposes and added that expanding the programs may eventually allow the schools to save space.

Money for the buses will come from the district's transportation fund, not the fund which provides for educational programs.

Sewer service rejected for 14-acre store site

Palatine village trustees this week flatly turned down a request to provide village sewer service to property for which annexation to Rolling Meadows is sought.

The 14-acre site is south of Northwest Highway and the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks, and west of Rohwing Road.

The land is owned by DeCoster Co. Realtors of St. Paul, Minn., under option to Midway-Platt Co., also of St. Paul.

The firm is planning to build a materials retail store on the site.

The property now lies in unincorporated Palatine Township, but Midway-Platt has petitioned the City of Rolling Meadows for annexation. A public hearing is to be held March 28.

Meanwhile, DeCoster asked the Village of Palatine for a storm sewer connection.

The village in the past has not permitted sewer or water hookups to property outside the Palatine village limits, and the trustees did not yield to this latest request.

Trustee Clayton W. Brown said, "If they want to use our sewers, why don't they annex to Palatine? I can't see us providing services to people who aren't residents."

The motion denying the request was passed unanimously.

Cash from fund reported stolen

Cash from collection boxes for a firemen's memorial fund was stolen earlier this week at the Palatine American Legion Hall.

An undetermined amount of money was in the cardboard containers early Monday when the theft occurred. The cash register and a vending attachment to the pool table were also emptied.

Approximately $75 to $100 was taken in the theft at 122 W. Palatine Rd. Police suspect the thief had a key to the building, since no signs of forcible entry were found.

The American Legion started the fund drive after three Palatine firemen were killed in the Ben Franklin store fire Feb. 23.

The collection boxes were emptied Friday night, so there was apparently not a large amount of money in the fund boxes.

"If we got some tips during the evening, we'd throw them in there, but there couldn't have been too much money in them," a Legion bar tender said yesterday.

As of last week, the Legion had raised $2,300 for the firemen.

Costello to seek new school term

High School Dist. 214 Board member Jack Costello announced Monday he will be a candidate for reelection in the April 14 school board election.

Costello, of Mount Prospect, said, "These four years have been very challenging and rewarding and I appreciate the opportunity to serve. I would like to serve another three years if I'm elected."

Costello has been on the board since 1969. He is vice president and general manager of Revere Aluminum Building Products Inc.

The other two incumbents whose terms expire this year have announced they will not seek reelection. Ray Erickson and Richard Greenfield will leave the board in April.

Two candidates have filed nominating petitions for the board. They are Warren Schabinger of Mount Prospect and Donald Hoeck of Arlington Heights.

This form is only for residents who live within the corporate limits of the Village of Palatine.

Howie-in-Hills settlement won't be stalled: Hofert

A settlement of lawsuits involving Hoffman Estates with the Howie-in-the-Hills property and City Savings Association of Chicago will not be delayed by a decision Monday by U. S. Chief District Judge Edwin A. Robson concerning association depositors, according to the village attorney.

Robson ruled the state will have to reimburse depositors to the institution for $20 million or more in savings lost when the association went bankrupt.

The federal receivership, later assigned, is now negotiating with the village, persons who bought bonds on the subdivision and the Teamsters Union Pension Fund over proceeds from sale of the subdivision to Meridian Housing Corp.

The negotiations stem from lawsuits charging the village with fraudulently obtaining court approval for special assessments on the property which resulted in the bond sale.

VILLAGE ATTY. Edward Hofert, said Judge Robson's ruling is certain to be appealed because of the precedent it sets. Hofert said the ruling makes the state liable for the actions of its employees, and the state cannot allow the precedent to stand without an appeal.

However, said Hofert, lengthy appeals will have no effect whatsoever on the settlement talks. These and final sale to Meridian can proceed without concern for the state liability question, he said.

Hofert is to report this afternoon to Judge Robson on the status of negotiations between the receivership and a group of the bondholders. Disagreement on settlement terms by this group has been the final factor to be negotiated in the settlement, according to Steve Bushwiler, attorney representing the bondholders.

It is anticipated public hearings will be scheduled shortly after the negotiations between the bondholders and receivership are successfully completed. The hearings would be before the Hoffman Estates Plan Commission and the village board, and would concern Meridian's development plan, which has not yet been disclosed.

Generally, parties to the negotiations have said the plan involves multiple-housing units, both for sale and for rent. One point discussed by Meridian and village officials has been density.

Mt. Sinai eyes Hoffman Estates for hospital

Representatives of Mount Sinai Hospital and Medical Center are reportedly negotiating with property owners in the Hoffman Estates area to purchase a hospital site.

The Herald learned the negotiations are in a very preliminary stage at this time. The move would represent at least the third organization considering plans to construct a hospital in the Schaumburg Township area.

Officials for Mount Sinai declined to comment on the report, but officials of the medical center have held some discussions with village officials.

It is not known whether the hospital is planning to relocate its entire facilities in this area or merely open a branch here.

A SPOKESMAN for Mrs. Ruth M. Rothstein, Mount Sinai's executive director, said he had no comment on the medical center's development plans. He did state there are plans to build a satellite facility on Chicago's north side. He would not elaborate on this facility however.

The medical center currently operates a 430-bed hospital on Chicago's west side. The institution has a national reputation in the field of cancer research and surgery, according to a hospital spokesman.

It is not known how soon negotiations for a site, which will probably be acquired along Barrington Road in the western part of Hoffman Estates, will be completed.

There is also no information available as to when the medical center will make formal announcement of their development plans.

CHess MASTER Jude Acers has been meeting with area high school chess clubs this week while in town for a chess exhibition at Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg. Acers will take on 20 challengers at 3 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. today and tomorrow at the shopping center. All comers are invited to bring their favorite board and challenge the master. Acers says he is the only chess master in the country currently making a living from the game, which he learned in a Southern orphanage. Someday, he believes, he will play and beat World Chess Champion Bobby Fischer.

Money is name of the game for chess ace Acers

Move over, Bobby, here comes Jude

by KURT BAER

Jude Acers says someday he will beat World Chess Champion Bobby Fischer. And when he does it will be for a whole castleful of money.

Money is the reason Acers plays chess. He admits it without qualm and says he is only sorry more chess masters can't make a living at the sport.

The 28-year-old chess master is in town, a guest at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel, to give a chess playing exhibition at Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg. He will take on 20 challengers at a time today and tomorrow at 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. in the shopping center's central court.

In some respects the Woodfield exhibition is just a warm-up for Acers who will engage 120 chess challengers on ABC's Wide World of Sports April 21.

"I'm THE ONLY chess master in the country making a living out of playing chess," he says, adding he fully expects to be a millionaire long before he stops playing.

But money hasn't always been a part of Jude Acers' game.

A child of Southern orphanages, he became a chess master at 17, youngest ever at that time in the South. His early career was filled with playing chess for $15 and $20 a night in San Francisco bars and coffee houses.

"My first year on a national tour, my manager lost $10,000 on me," he says. "Today I'd want $5,000 to even walk into a tournament. And I'd want a million dollars, in the bank, to play Fischer."

Acers blames the fact that most U.S. chess masters "still have to play for crumbs" on the powerful U.S. Chess Federation, an association which he says has blacklisted him from major tourna-

This Morning In Brief

The nation

The convicted triggerman in the Joseph "Jack" Yablonski murders has testified two former United Mine Workers officials told him ex-union president "Tony" Boyle ordered the killings "for the welfare of the UMW."

Three hundred government agents, using armored personnel carriers have tightened the circle around militant Indians entrenched at Wounded Knee, S.D.

The government will recommend Amtrak be given two more years to prove it can save the passenger train... but that four money-losing routes be dropped now.

Urging a one-year delay in enforcing clean air standards, Ford Motor Co. warned that allowing unreliable pollution control devices would be like throwing "a catastrophe into hands of the public."

Railroad labor and management negotiators announced tentative agreement on new contracts for 14 unions representing 500,000 rail workers. An official for the machinists' union said he may reject the proposal.

The state

The Illinois House passed, 115-42, and sent to the Senate a bill that would forbid the Environmental Protection Agency from banning open burning of leaves.

A suit filed in Juvenile Court charges that two children from Illinois were beaten, isolated, and kept in handcuffs in a room in a Texas institution for neglected children.

Bills to provide emergency loans to financially troubled mass transit systems in the state, including up to $18.9 million for the CTA, moved to the passage stage in the Senate.

The world

Operation Homecoming's reception center, idle for five days, will receive 142 released American prisoners by the end of the week, 108 of them today.

Leidecker quits park seat race

The only woman candidate running for the position of commissioner in the Hoffman Estates Park District announced last night that she plans to withdraw.

Mrs. Marilyn Leidecker, 29, of 211 Hassell Rd., Hoffman Estates said that unexpected business opportunities have forced her to withdraw from the upcoming election.

Mrs. Leidecker, in a prepared statement, said that she plans to support John Rausch. She said that she plans to campaign as actively as possible in Rausch's behalf prior to the election.

RAUSCH SAID that he was "pleased and honored" by the faith that Mrs. Leidecker has placed in his candidacy.

He added that he and Mrs. Leidecker have many of the same ideas concerning the development of the district and the priorities that should be set in the future.

Mrs. Leidecker said that her resignation from the race centers around her husband's plans to develop a subdivision in Inverness. A licensed realtor, she said she plans to assist her husband in this project and that the time required for this effort would not allow her to devote sufficient time to the park district.

"It is my sincere hope that I may serve the park district and our community in other capacities which would be less demanding," she said.

Rausch added that if he is elected to the park board, he plans to rely on Mrs. Leidecker for advice and suggestions relating to the development of the park district.

Plan unit to review commercial proposal

Plans for a 300-bed nursing home and geriatric center near the site of the proposed third fire station in Hoffman Estates will be presented to the Hoffman Estates Plan Commission soon.

Richard Regan, commission chairman, disclosed Monday night Robin Construction Co. intends to construct the facility on a site just to the rear and west of the fire station site. The fire station is to be located south of Higgins Road where it intersects on the north side with Governors Lane.

The nursing home will be patterned after one the company constructed in Chicago, near Montrose Avenue and Marine Drive, said Regan. Robin may construct the facility under existing zoning, said Regan, and will be appearing before the commission for approval of initial plan phases.

Robin indicated the activity in hospital planning in the area was a factor in its decision to build a nursing home, said Regan.

Doctors' group may seek hospital OK

A press conference may be held next week to announce whether a group of doctors practicing in the Northwest area will apply April 11 for a permit to build a hospital, Dr. Sanford Block confirmed yesterday.

Block was the spokesman for another group of doctors previously interested in building a hospital in Schaumburg Township. That group now has disbanded and no longer is considering construction, he said. But Block said he now has joined a new group, whose members do not want to reveal their names yet because they practice in this area.

If there is a press conference next week, said Block, it may be held to announce intentions to seek a state operating permit, which would allow construction to begin.

Block and his associates are contemplating property at Schaumburg and Barrington roads, according to Richard Regan, Hoffman Estates Plan Commission chairman.

Regan told of the new doctors' group Monday night when he spoke to village trustees at a conference prior to the village board meeting.

HE ALSO revealed a plan is pending by a major medical complex now operating in Chicago to construct a hospital on a site of 100 acres with Barrington Road and the Northwest Tollway its preferred location. The Chicago medical

The local scene

HOFFMAN ESTATES SCHAUMBURG

Freeman featured artist

Robert L. Freeman, of Schaumburg is the featured artist for the month of March at the Schaumburg Township Public Library 32 Library Ln., Schaumburg.

The artist's display includes oils and watercolors, from seascapes to fair ground scenes. Some of the scenes were done during his travels in Caracas, Venezuela.

Freeman will donate one of his paintings to the library after the show. Librarian Michael Madden will select a painting from the exhibit.

S and H meeting tonight

The S and H Golden Group, a senior citizens organization sponsored by the Schaumburg Park District, will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday to address newsletters for the Salvation Army Community Counseling Center.

The meeting will be held at the Meineke Community Center, 220 E. Weathersfield Way, Schaumburg.

Winter concert Thursday

The Conant High School choral music department will present its winter concert Thursday, featuring 20th Century sacred music.

The first-year chorus, girls' chorus and concert choir will participate in the event. The program will include music from "Godspell" and from modern Jewish services.

Tickets are $1 for adults and 50 cents for students.

Band in St. Pat's parade

The Schaumburg High School Marching band will participate in Chicago's St. Patrick's Day parade Saturday.

The parade will begin at 1 p.m. on State Street from Wacker Drive to Congress Street. The 140-member band will be directed by Raymond C. Williams.

Luncheon meeting set

The Greater Schaumburg Association of Commerce and Industry will meet Thursday at the Contented Sole Restaurant, Sheraton Inn-Walden for a noon luncheon meeting. The inn is located on Algonquin Road just east of Meacham Road.

Cost of the luncheon is $4.50 and advance reservations are required. Members are requested to come prepared to discuss the Schaumburg chamber's relationship to the Hoffman Estates Chamber of Commerce.

The board of directors of the Schaumburg chamber has not taken a position on a possible merger of the two associations and is interested in learning the general feeling of the membership.

Rec signup under way

Registration for the Schaumburg Park District's spring recreation programs is under way at the Meineke Community Center, 220 E. Weathersfield Way, Schaumburg.

Only pre-school program registrations will be accepted this morning. Registration for other programs will begin at 1 p.m. and continue from 9 a.m. until noon and 1 p.m. until 4 p.m. each day. Registration will also be held 9 a.m. until noon Saturday.

The district will offer both single and double sessions of the tot lot program at the Jennings House and Meineke Community Center.

Tiny tot, ballet, yoga, baton, mini-gymnastics, guitar, knitting, recreation for the handicapped, mixed volleyball, fencing and arts and crafts classes will also be offered.

Brochures, detailing the times and location of all the programs are available at the Meineke Community Center or by calling the park district at 894-4660.

Cubs learn about firemen

The operation and responsibilities of the Schaumburg Fire Department was the highlight of Cub Scout Pack 285's Blue and Gold Banquet recently.

Lt. Frank Musil of the fire department told the scouts about the department's services and facilities. He also detailed the department's new paramedic program to the group.

Other guests at the banquet included Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher, District Comr. Joe Ruddy, and Unit Comr. Ronald Bogaert.

Police 'evasiveness' charged

Conroy denies youth group's charge

A charge of evasiveness placed against Schaumburg police by some members of the Schaumburg Township Committee on Youth is unwarranted, according to Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy.

Larry Walker, director of youth services for Schaumburg Township, at a Monday COY meeting said other police departments in the township share juvenile information with him, but Schaumburg does not.

Walker said he has been unsuccessful in several attempts to meet with an authorized person from the Schaumburg department to discuss an agreement to share information about juvenile police records.

The youth worker said he has not made personal attempts to talk to Chief Conroy, but interdepartment personnel have arranged and broken several appointments.

COY MEMBER John Karston told Walker to take the direct approach and said he will contact Chief Conroy by telephone to arrange a meeting.

Mrs. Joyce Kroll, committee chairman, stressed COY is interested in working with all police juvenile departments in the township and will continue its efforts to seek mutual cooperation.

John Jensen complained "that at a December luncheon, cooperation was discussed with Chief Conroy but only months of evasiveness has followed."

Walker said his charge of not cooperating was limited to just the issue of the agreement.

HE SAID an exchange of general information is now being offered between himself and the juvenile officers.

The agreement Walker wants signed is one outlined by Circuit Court Judge William White in 1972 when the judge entered a court order during a juvenile case.

The order states that for the benefit of minors subject to the juvenile division of the Cook County Circuit Court, police and youth service agencies should share information.

Walker said the agreement includes the youth workers pledge to keep that information confidential and use it only in treatment or rehabilitation.

Conroy said he agreed to meet with COY members and workers. "I have not since then been asked to meet with them," he said.

HE WILL, IF approached, arrange such a meeting but would prefer COY deal directly with his juvenile department, said the Chief.

Chief Conroy agreed that the department's policy is to keep juvenile records "private information." He questioned the value of releasing police records to an outreach worker.

"As I understood the role of the township youth workers it was a preventive program," said Chief Conroy.

The chief said if a court order suggests this information be given to youth agencies such as COY, he would cooperate "but it's something I must investigate further before commenting on further," he said.

ments and refused to promote him to Grand Master standing.

The fortunes of war for Jude Acers began to turn when the eyes of the world, if not the television cameras, focused on Fischer's match with Russian Grand Master Boris Spassky.

THE MATCH, with all the antics and intrigue that accompanied it, shattered the popular image of chess as a stuffy game played by old men who sit around in winged-back leather chairs, and millions of Americans began to learn the Danish Gambit and to study the games of the masters.

Acers is not among those who criticize

Fischer for his eccentric behavior during his match with Spassky, although he says he respects Bobby as "the most dangerous player in chess."

"Fischer is worth the price because you need showmen," Acers says. "But he never should have barred the television cameras. That could have killed chess in America."

The next-world championship match should be held in about two years Acers says, "if Fischer will play."

"Bobby is dangerous because he'll only quit while he's ahead. The farther ahead he gets in a match, the more ruthless, the more precise his playing becomes. It's exactly the opposite of what you would expect."

ACERS TALKS about Fischer, his habits, game strategy and personal eccentricities, the way top professional boxers study and work to out-psyche their opponents.

But far beyond the limelight of world championship matches, Acers is just as fanatical about chess in places like Woodfield and Grand Rapids, Mich., where he recently finished an exhibition.

"I love playing with children," he says, adding that "at times you have to carry them along so they learn from the game."

He will tutor a child in chess, from the ground up, for $300. It is a game that can and must be learned.

"There have probably only been two or three natural chess geniuses," he says.

It's all part of his game plan to promote chess and, not incidentally, himself. He has even authored his own motto, "All he is is everything."

Bobby Fischer, it's your move.

Doctors may seek hospital permit

complex also is considering alternative sites, Regan said Tuesday.

The Monday night conference was to determine what action the board of trustees should take regarding a decision by the state hospital licensing board to grant a construction permit to Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's hospital for a branch facility on Schaumburg Road in Schaumburg.

Neither of the groups Regan mentioned would be affected by the Rush-Presbyterian development, Regan said.

Dr. Joyce Lashof, acting state director of public health, granted the permit on the licensing board's recommendation. But the recommendation came via telephone calls to board members, and not in an open meeting, as required by law. The board has placed the question back on its April 11 agenda for reconsideration.

The village trustees Monday authorized Regan and Michael Redmond, a plan commission member, to attend the April 11 licensing board meeting and represent the village. The trustees also directed Village Mgr. George Longmeyer to invite Dr. Lashof and the licensing board to tour several proposed hospital sites in Schaumburg and in or near Hoffman Estates.

REGAN AND Redmond are to urge the licensing board to read and consider the recommendations of a health care needs study conducted by the North Suburban Association for Health Resources (NSAHR).

The study recommended the Schaumburg-Barrington roads site, but members of the licensing board have said they did not read it before approving the Schaumburg Road site.

While the licensing board is not allowed to consider planning and community impact as criteria in judging permit applications, Regan noted Monday the state partially funded the study. It should not have done so, knowing the results of the study could not bear on the board decision, he said.

"One of the brutal facts we have to recognize is we were given a $2,000 sandbox to play in," said Regan, suggesting the study was a sandbox "to keep us out of their hair until they locked this thing up," referring to the Rush-Presbyterian plan.

THE INVITATION to Dr. Lashof and the board, and the appearance at the April 11 meeting, will be to encourage the board to support state legislation requiring proof of need and planning before permits to build hospitals may be issued.

This type of legislation would eliminate unnecessary duplication, which can increase costs of care to patients, both Regan and Redmond said.

"Once it (duplication) occurs, it's too late," said Redmond. The costs of operating the hospital will continue, and the patients will have to pay it, he said.

Redmond noted a recent federal study indicated "it is almost always borne out where a hospital is started such as this (the Rush-Presbyterian plan), with little if any communication with surrounding hospitals, you have duplication of services. This all relates to costs," he said.

On provost's list

Janet Rasmussen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Rasmussen, Hoffman Estates, was named to the Provost's List for the fall quarter at the University of Minnesota Technical College-Waseca.

To be eligible for the Provost's List, a student must carry at least 12 credits and earn 3.25 point average on a 4.0 basis.

The university offers a two-year technical agricultural education designed to train young men and women for employment at semi-professional, mid-management level in fields related to agriculture.

School upgrading referendum to be sought

Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 will seek a bond issue referendum to finance the remodeling of Grove and Dempster junior high schools.

The school board adopted a resolution calling for the referendum by a 6 to 1 vote at a special meeting Monday Night. A date for the referendum and the amount of bonding power sought will be decided after more information is obtained from the district's architect.

Erwin Polacki cast the opposing vote. He said he was in full support of the remodeling, but he disagreed with the way the referendum would be presented to the voters.

The referendum will be a single bond issue to be used for the replacement of heating and ventilating systems, improvements to the learning centers, relocation and remodeling of classroom areas and certain small additions to the schools.

EXCLUDED FROM the referendum is the construction of a small auditorium at each school and the installation of air conditioning.

Polacki wanted a two-part referendum. The first part would be for the replacement of the heating and ventilating systems and improvements to the learning centers at each school. The second part of the referendum would include the first part plus the remodeling and relocating of classrooms.

Polacki advocated the two-part issue as a means of giving the voters a greater voice in deciding on the remodeling. He said that although he personally favored the complete remodeling work, he wanted to offer voters a choice on the amount of money to be spent on the remodeling.

Polacki also said he felt it was gambling to put the entire remodeling project as a single bond issue. He felt the replacement of the heating and ventilating systems and improvements to the learning centers were the most important parts of the referendum. If the issues were split into two parts, there would be a better chance of at least the first part passing, he said.

AFTER LENGTHY discussion, the other board members agreed that the referendum should be a single issue so the two schools could be brought up to the comparable standards of Holmes and Lively junior high schools.

Board members felt that if the voters only approved part of the referendum, the board would not be able to fulfill its charge to bring the two schools up to the standards of Holmes and Lively.

Dempster, in Mount Prospect, and Grove, in Elk Grove Village, are the oldest junior high schools in the district. The schools were built in 1960, but several major additions have been made to each since they were first opened.

Polacki initially moved to have the referendum as a two-part issue, but the motion died for lack of a second.

Sharrle Hildebrandt then made the single-issue referendum motion. Polacki attempted to amend the motion to a two-part referendum, but the amendment was defeated. The board then passed the referendum motion.

SCOTT KELLEY, architect for the remodeling, was directed to report back to the board with revised plans and cost estimates reflecting the exclusion of auditoriums in their remodeling.

Kelley did not give an exact date for his return to the board, but indicated that he would need at least two weeks to obtain the information the board requested.

Bible Church hosts missions conference

Mount Prospect Bible Church is sponsoring a missions conference Saturday through March 23, featuring several groups and speakers.

The conference will begin March 17 with the New Tribes Mission from Waukegan, Wis. Programs are planned all day the following Sunday, featuring the New Tribes Choir and a speaker.

Monday is high school club night, with speakers Herb and Shirley Shoemaker from the West Indies Mission at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, there is an all-church meeting at 7:30 p.m., with the same speakers.

At 7:30 p.m. Wednesday there is a North Area Youth for Christ Rally, with the adult congregation in the sanctuary at 8 p.m.

WOMEN LEARN to relax during Hatha yoga Church-Community Baptist in Mount Prospect. The classes Tuesday and Friday mornings at South classes, taught by Mrs. David Hanna, emphasize posture and exercise. About 20 women attend the classes, which will continue until April.

Friendship contractor may be fired

Albert Berg, general contractor for Friendship Junior High School in Des Plaines, may be fired from the job by Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59.

The school board took the first step towards possible removal of Berg at a special board meeting Monday night, when a resolution was adopted giving Berg and his bonding company notice that he may be removed.

The resolution also directs the district's architect, Berger, Kelley & Associates, to evaluate the situation on the job site and possibly prepare the necessary certification to remove Berg.

Under the terms of the construction contract, the architect must certify that the contractor is not fulfilling the contract and should be removed.

THE ARCHITECT is to have the review and the possible certification prepared by March 26. If the architect agrees that Berg should be removed, notice of removal could be given by the school board anytime after that date.

When notice is given, Berg will have seven days to clear the job site, taking all tools and equipment with him. After seven days, the school district takes control of the site and any equipment left by the contractor.

The district will then be free to hire another contractor or make arrangements to have the work done on a piece-meal basis.

James Erivti, district superintendent, said the architects informed the administration that the progress promised by Berg has not been made. The board's attorney was then directed to draw up the resolution notifying Berg that he may be taken off the job site.

MONDAY'S RESOLUTION does not commit the board to any action, but is designed to serve as a legal warning to Berg that his work is not satisfactory to the board.

Completion of the school has been repeatedly postponed by construction delays. Grant Terrell, project representative for the architectural firm, has appeared before the board during the past few months to report on the progress at the school.

Terrell has blamed many of the delays on mismanagement by Berg.

Originally, the school was to have opened in January. The opening date was pushed back to mid-March then mid-May, then June 1 and the latest date given was July 15.

The board had hoped to have the school opened for summer school this year so there could be a trial period before the full classes start in September. Now there is a possibility the building will not be ready in September.

BERG ALSO has appeared before the school board in past months to justify the delays and promise that his firm could make up for lost time.

At the meeting Monday, Scott Kelley, architect, presented the sixth revision Berg has drawn up for the time-table. According to Berg's schedule, several projects are to be either completed or under construction by mid-March. Kelley said none of the projects have been started.

Kelley said the building could still be ready for classes in September, but not at the present rate of progress shown by Berg.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

The convicted triggerman in the Joseph "Joey" Yablonski murders has testified two former United Mine Workers officials told him ex-union president "Tony" Boyle ordered the killings "for the welfare of the UMW."

Three hundred government agents, using armored personnel carriers have tightened the circle around militant Indians entrenched at Wounded Knee, S.D.

The government will recommend Amtrak be given two more years to prove it can save the passenger train... but that four money-losing routes be dropped now.

Urging a one-year delay in enforcing clean air standards, Ford Motor Co. warned that allowing unreliable pollution

The local scene

MOUNT PROSPECT

Bible conference slated

The Rev. Erick Lavender of Northampton, England, will speak at a Bible conference March 14-16 and 18 at Northwest Assembly of God, 900 N. Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect. Evening meetings will begin at 7:30 p.m. on week nights and 7 p.m. on Sunday. Morning meetings on Thursday and Friday will begin at 10 a.m. and on Sunday at 10:45 a.m.

Awards ceremony planned

Prospect Heights Junior Girl Scout Troop 353 will have its annual Court of Awards Ceremony on March 21. Each of the 31 girls will be awarded badges they have earned in recent months. The ceremony will be at Prospect Heights Community Church, 400 N. Elmhurst Rd.

Members of the troop will also serve desert for the Eisenhower School PTA fashion show April 7.

E-Hart Girls seek members

The annual membership drive of the E-Hart Girls began this week. Brochures explaining the club's purpose and programs have been distributed to first grade girls in Mount Prospect and Prospect Heights.

Mothers of first graders who would like further information on forming a neighborhood group this fall may contact Mrs. James Jolly, 298-5734, or Mrs. Thomas Giblin, 392-0286.

A local, non-profit club, E-Hart offers activities at levels from second grade through high school. The girls' drill team is also seeking new members for fall. Members must be in sixth grade or older. Phone Mrs. Donald Faber, 827-2852, for more information.

Parks offer yoga sessions

The Prospect Heights Park District will offer a second session of yoga beginning March 21 in the gym at Anne Sullivan School, Schoenbeck and Palatine roads.

The class will meet each Wednesday from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. for eight weeks. Course fee is $12. Participants can register now at the park district office, 9B N. Elmhurst Rd., or with instructor Lori Dillman.

Seniors club meeting set

The River Trails Park District meet at 1 p.m. next Wednesday to take initial steps to organize a senior citizens club for district residents.

Plans call for twice monthly meetings, trips, programs with speakers and other activities of interest to members.

The meeting will be in the park district's community building, 1313 Burning Bush Lane, Mount Prospect. Coffee and cake will be served.

To attend the meeting, residents should call the park district office, 298-4445. Arrangements can be made for rides if necessary.

Lenten Communion service

The annual "Lenten Communion Celebration and Breakfast" at St. Mark Lutheran Church ALCW is Wednesday, March 21, at 9:30 a.m. in Fellowship Hall.

Mrs. Loren Semler and Mrs. Murray Patterson will present the program. Pastor Nolan Watson will serve communion. A sitter for preschoolers will be provided.

Thieves get electric typewriter in break-in

A $625 electric typewriter was stolen from the Lowell Insurance Agency, 1100 W. Northwest Hwy., Mount Prospect, sometime last weekend.

Police said a wrench was used to force open the door to the firm's suite. The burglary was discovered at 8:38 a.m. Monday.

$300 in valuables taken from home

Police reported $300 worth of jewelry, a radio, fishing equipment and a gold putter were taken from the Mary P. Dempsey home, 204 We-GO Trail, sometime between March 2 and March 7.

Police said entry to the home was through the family room sliding door. The break-in was discovered by a policeman on patrol March 7, but Mrs. Dempsey did not return home from a vacation until this week.

Mrs. Dempsey told police this was the second burglary in her home within a month. In late February she reported $1,050 worth of jewelry was either stolen or lost.

Go-ahead granted for nature center

The Prospect Heights Park District has given the go-ahead to the Prospect chapter of the Izaak Walton League to build a nature center on park district land along the Hillcrest Slough.

The league plans to build a one-room structure on several acres bordering Ill. Rte. 83 along the south end of the slough. Park Board Pres. Joseph Lesniak said the league can build providing all codes are met.

"If they didn't build on the land, we probably would have," said Lesniak, adding the park board was definitely in favor of a nature center.

DOLORES HAUGH, president of the local Izaak Walton chapter, said yesterday the group plans to begin fundraising for the project this spring. She stressed, however, that plans for the building are still tentative.

"It depends on how much money we can raise," she said. She said the league has set a goal of $7,000. Tentative plans for fundraising include a flea market and a car wash. The league also plans to send letters to residents and businesses in the Prospect Heights and Mount Prospect area to solicit donations.

If the league raises enough money, construction on the center could begin by next fall, Mrs. Haugh said. She said the building now being considered would be pre-fabricated and put up by the members themselves.

"It would be a nature center and a museum with pictures and displays on the slough," she said. "We feel there's a tremendous need for education on this type of open land project." She said tours of the slough probably would also be conducted.

THE PARK district is currently in the process of condemning the remaining 11.9 acres of the south slough. The land is held in trust at the Maywood Proviso State Bank by the Oakton Construction Co. of Elk Grove Village. Owners of the land have failed to respond to the park district's offer of $18,000.

Ron Greenberg, park director, said he does not like the idea of using expulsion as a discipline tool. "I think we ought to find some other way to control things instead of throwing a kid out," he said.

Board member Gene Artemenko suggested the board meet specifically to discuss approaches to discipline problems and added that Gilbert and other administrators could also find out whether any other school districts are using other methods to control students.

IN OTHER ACTION, the board authorized $57,015 for seven school buses which will be used during the day next year to bus students to outside locations connected with their classes.

Among the locations students will be bused to next year are automobile dealerships where they will work as part of the auto mechanics program and elementary and nursery schools where students in child care and social science classes will work.

Assistant Supt. Rod McLennan said last year the district spent $23,000 on busing for class purposes and added that expanding the programs may eventually allow the schools to save space.

Money for the buses will come from the district's transportation fund, not the fund which provides for educational programs.

School discipline problems weighed

The High School Dist. 214 Board decided Monday it wants to look into the problem of discipline in its schools, perhaps by calling a meeting where building administrators can express their opinions on the situation.

The board reached agreement on that issue after board member Jack Costello, newly announced candidate for reelection, expressed concern over the amount of insubordination reported in the suspension reports received by the board each month.

"I have become more and more concerned about the number of times insubordination and bad language is reported," Costello said. "I think we should deal very harshly with that. I wouldn't tolerate that kind of language and I don't think we should ask our people to tolerate it either."

SUPT. EDWARD GILBERT said the only actions the school could take would be to increase the length of suspensions required for insubordination or "if the violation is flagrant, we could go for expulsion."

Suspensions for up to 10 days may be made by school administrators. Expulsion, which could be for a full semester, must be acted on by the board.

Board member Richard Bachhuber

Scouting news

GIRL SCOUT Junior Troop 543 from Indian Grove School, Mount Prospect, is planning a St. Patrick's Day party for residents of Magnus Farms Nursing Home in Arlington Heights.

The event will begin with bingo. The girls have made eyeglass cases, artificial flowers, terrariums and fruit baskets for prizes. Refreshments also will be served.

Jack Costello

Costello to seek new school term

High School Dist. 214 Board member Jack Costello announced Monday he will be a candidate for reelection in the April 14 school board election.

Costello, of Mount Prospect, said, "These four years have been very challenging and rewarding and I appreciate the opportunity to serve. I would like to serve another three years if I'm elected."

Costello has been on the board since 1969. He is vice president and general manager of Revere Aluminum Building Products Inc.

The other two incumbents whose terms expire this year have announced they will not seek reelection. Ray Erickson and Richard Greenfield will leave the board in April.

Two candidates have filed nominating petitions for the board. They are Warren Schabinger of Mount Prospect and Donald Hoeck of Arlington Heights.

Member, Rotary Club of Mount Prospect, Ill.

"He Profits Most Who Serves Best"

Local Rotarians giving 'thanks'

Mount Prospect Rotarians recently have been giving an extra measure of thanks to persons who are especially polite or who give extremely good service.

The thanks comes in the form of "courtesy cards," gold-colored cards that express the club member's appreciation for friendly and helpful service.

Each card is signed by the Rotary Club member who gives it out, and the Rotary philosophy is printed on the back.

The cards are left at service stations, grocery stores and other places where a clerk or salesman does a better-than-average job of taking care of the customer.

The idea originated with Norman Elliott, one of the club members. He said the purpose is to reward people with more than a "thank-you."

If the project is successful, the club may expand the practice. At present the cards are being distributed only in the Mount Prospect area.

5 more Village Party candidate coffees set

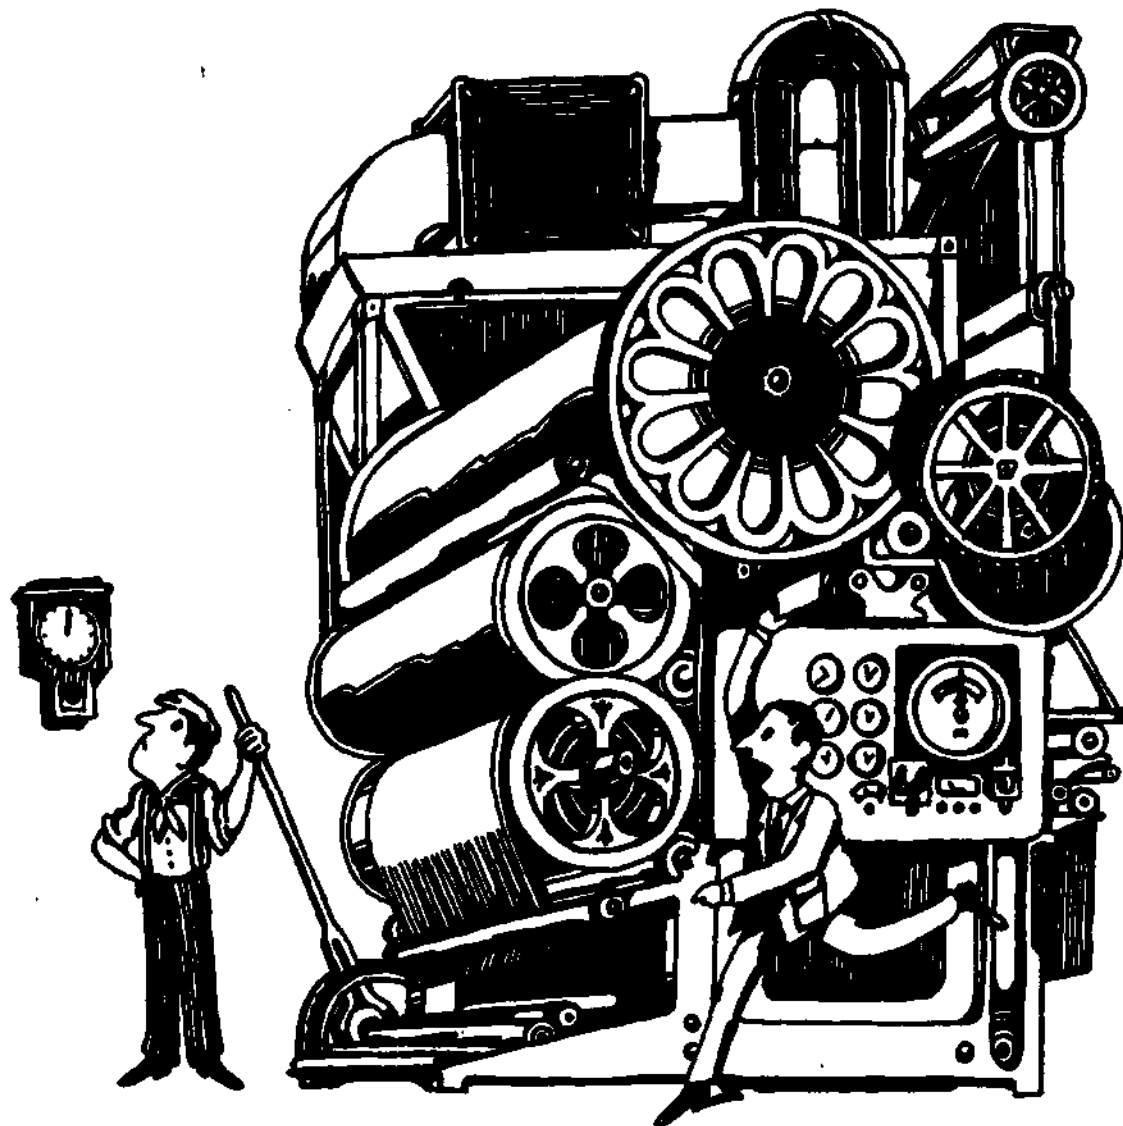

Five more coffees for the Village Party have been announced by Lynne Bennett, coffee committee chairman.

The first will be tonight at the Gerald Kijinski residence, 1515 Mark Dr. The others will be Monday at the Michael Scelsi home, 1208 Linden Ln.; March 21 at the Warren Hamilton home, 247 Hatten; and March 22 at the Ray Schultz residence, 2113 Haven St. All will start at 7:30 p.m. and persons wishing to attend should telephone first.

An afternoon coffee will begin at 3:30 p.m. March 25 at the home of Vern Eirich, 1802 Basswood Ln.

Members of the Village Party are Mayor Robert D. Teichert, Village Clerk Donald Goodman, Village Trustees Bud Richardson, Donald B. Furst and Patrick J. Link, all of whom are seeking to retain their offices, and trustee candidate Richard Hendricks.

At Des Plaines' Maryville Academy

Inner city kids breaking old barriers

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Crossing the threshold from the inner city school to the suburban high school is a difficult experience for most teenagers at Maryville Academy, a home for dependent children in Des Plaines.

The inner city student entering a competitive suburban high school often finds he can't keep up with his classmates, a realization that compounds his already difficult adjustment problems. He cuts class, lags further behind in his assignments and can end up wandering through the halls most of the day.

The Threshold program at Maine North High School in Des Plaines helps inner city teenagers adjust to life in a suburban school. Special classes with individual instruction are designed to improve such basic skills as English and math to help students become a part of the regular academic program at Maine North.

THE THRESHOLD students come from poor or ghetto schools, often have long truancy records or don't attend school at all, said Linda Selway, social worker at Maine North. Most of those entering high school on the ninth grade have reached only the third or fourth grade level academically.

But the inner city students have the same potential for learning as their suburban classmates, according to Sherman Roth, director of guidance at Maine North. The problem is to improve their skills in subjects like English and math to a level where they can participate in classroom work and to help them adjust socially so they can get along with other students and teachers he said.

The state-funded Threshold program starts in a classroom at Maryville where new students are tested to determine their academic achievement level. Richard Mateyko, Maine North teacher in the Maryville classroom, then tutors each one individually.

Social behavior is "an equally big part" of the adjustment, Mateyko said. Students have to learn the importance of good classroom behavior, getting to school on time and keeping up with assignments. Entering students are given a "social awareness test" to find out how they would react in everyday situations.

Once the student is socially and academically ready for high school he is placed in a special classroom at Maine North and taught by Mark Recker and Betty Goerss.

IN THE Threshold classroom students sit at tables, not desks. There's a typewriter, record player and, along one wall, a stand of paperback books. Students get individual lessons in English, math, history, general science or business. When they're finished, they play chess, listen to records or go to the library. The break between assignments, Mrs. Goerss said, relieves the pressure of keeping up class period after class period.

The program, started a year ago, gets $60,000 annually under the state's orphanage act. Some 45 students are enrolled in different stages of Threshold during the school year.

Its success, Mrs. Goerss feels, is based on individual instruction. Student start at their own academic level, regardless of their age. If one of them is to make progress, she said, "the important thing is to give him something he can do." That first good grade can be a turning point, sometimes reversing years of failure.

As they improve, the Threshold kids are gradually introduced to the regular program at Maine North, which at each step is made to seem "as desirable as possible," said Mrs. Goerss. When they learn to meet the competition of regular classes, Threshold students are transferred to the full high school program. The sequence usually takes about a year.

ONE SUCCESS story in the Threshold program is a 15-year-old boy who completed classes at Maryville in six weeks. He realized he would be better off at Maine North, said Mrs. Goerss, but had trouble adjusting to his new environment. He was hostile and uncooperative. Gradually, through Threshold classes at Maine North, he adjusted and became successful in some of the regular classes at the school. He made friends with other students and plans to try out for the school football team next fall.

The program isn't designed for every inner city student at Maryville, said Mrs. Goerss. Some students over 17 have no plans to graduate from high school and are placed in a special class at Maryville taught by Mateyko. They learn basic skills in the morning and work in the afternoon, said Mateyko. Other Maryville students have higher achievement levels than those in the Threshold program and are able to enter the regular program at Maine North immediately.

Schools may fire contractor

Albert Berg, general contractor for Friendship Junior High School in Des Plaines, may be fired from the job by Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59.

The school board took the first step towards possible removal of Berg at a special board meeting Monday night, when a resolution was adopted giving Berg and his bonding company notice that he may be removed.

The resolution also directs the district's architect, Berger, Kelley & Associates, to evaluate the situation on the job site and possibly prepare the necessary certification to remove Berg.

Terrell has blamed many of the delays on mismanagement by Berg.

Originally, the school was to have opened in January. The opening date was pushed back to mid-March then mid-May, then June 1 and the latest date given was July 15.

The board had hoped to have the school opened for summer school this year so there could be a trial period before the full classes start in September.

Now there is a possibility the building will not be ready in September.

BERG ALSO has appeared before the school board in past months to justify the delays and promise that his firm could make up for lost time.

At the meeting Monday, Scott Kelley, architect, presented the sixth revision Berg has drawn up for the time-table. According to Berg's schedule, several projects are to be either completed or under construction by mid-March. Kelley said none of the projects have been started.

Kelley said the building could still be ready for classes in September, but not at the present rate of progress shown by Berg.

"To say it (the construction work) can't be done is wrong," said Kelley. "I say it can be done in time, but not with the present work force of the contractor."

Kelley said several other contractors also working on the site are unable to finish their work because of the lack of progress shown by Berg.

Park district board meeting rescheduled

Because of conflicting travel schedules of several Mount Prospect Park District board members, the Mount Prospect Park District has rescheduled its regular board meeting to next Monday. The meeting will be at 8 p.m. at the Lions Park Recreation Center, 411 S. Maple. All interested residents are invited to attend.

District hires non-union electrical workers

Labor dispute for schools?

The awarding of a contract to a non-union shop may result in a labor problem for Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59.

The contract, for electrical work in connection with Life Safety Code repairs at all schools, was awarded to Arlington Electrical Construction Corp. The contract was one of three awarded at the March 5 school board meeting.

Representatives from the International

Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and a firm that had bid against Arlington Electrical for the contract said they did not believe the company could do the work at union rates and still meet its bid price of $113,117.

The representatives said they would monitor the work done by Arlington Electrical to insure that a union wage was paid.

UNDER STATE law, a school district can award a contract to a non-union company, but the wage paid by the company must be comparable to a union-scale.

Fred Johnson, architect for the life safety work, told the board the Arlington Electrical has done work for High School Dist. 214 and there have been no problems with other union shops also doing work on the same site.

Johnson said Arlington Electrical does pay a union-scale wage.

In other action at the meeting:

• A group of speakers was selected for a November dedication of Friendship Junior High School. The administration will contact the speakers to determine who would be able to attend the ceremony.

• The board ratified the new articles of agreement for the Northwest Education Co-operative and the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization.

• The board agreed to hold several informal public meetings throughout the district during the year. There will be no agenda for the meetings.

• A trial suspension of the policy forbidding the sale of carbonated beverages was approved for Holmes Junior High School.

Campaign slated to promote flood control package

An aggressive campaign to promote the $14.32 million village flood control referendum was outlined to the Citizens Action Committee Against Flooding last night.

As presented, the campaign will include referendum questionnaires that will be sent to various clubs and organizations, two village newsletters, door-to-door leafletting and meetings with the Arlington Heights Park Board and village Environmental Control Commission (ECC).

Trustee Dwight Walton, chairman of the public relations committee, told the citizens action committee that he "will not allow the P.R. committee to fall short on the job we have to do."

The information blitz is designed to sell village voters on a $14.32 million bond issue to pay for flood control projects outlined in a recent engineering report to the village board. A referendum on the flood control package has been set for June 2.

During the next two weeks, letters will be sent to about 100 church, civic and homeowner organizations asking their questions about the proposed referendum and offering to send a representative to the organization's next meeting to explain the package.

Each question will receive a formal written reply, Walton said.

BY THE END of March, a Citizens Referendum Committee will be formed, and during the second week of April, a village-wide mailing will be sent to all residents. Walton described the mailing as "an information piece" that would describe the flood control package both as a whole and in each of its component parts.

During the third week of May, a second mailing is planned, and at the end of May doorknob hangers would be put out reminding voters of the June 2 vote.

Trustee James T. Ryan, also a member of the public relations committee, said selling the referendum would be "very difficult unless all village boards and commissions present a solid front."

"When people start shooting from the hip, as we had during the past couple weeks, it really jeopardizes its (the referendum's) passage," he said.

Walton said he hoped the citizens action committee would be able to answer most of the questions raised by the park board and the ECC within the next two weeks. Meetings with both groups are being scheduled.

In other action, the citizens committee voted to recommend several legislative measures to the village board aimed at minimizing future flooding hazards.

Arlington man among POWs coming home

A 27-year-old Arlington Heights man, Army Staff Sgt. John Young, is among the latest group of war prisoners to be released from a North Vietnam prison camp.

Young, whose wife Erika and two sons, aged 3 and 7, live in Arlington Heights, was captured by the Viet Cong on Jan. 31, 1968.

Mrs. Young's address is unknown and she could not be reached for comment yesterday on her husband's return.

Young is scheduled to arrive first at Fitzsimmons General Hospital in Denver, Colo. He was a member of the Special Forces.

Young's mother, who lives in Waukegan, said the news that her son had been freed "was just too much to put into words." She said the reunion with the returning soldier would include herself, Young's wife and both children.

CHESS MASTER Jude Acers has been meeting with area high school chess clubs this week while in town for a chess exhibition at Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg. Acers will take on 20 challengers at 3 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. today and tomorrow at the shopping center. All comers are invited to bring their favorite board and challenge the master. Acers says he is the only chess master in the country currently making a living from the game, which he learned in a Southern orphanage. Someday, he believes, he will play and beat World Chess Champion Bobby Fischer.

Money is name of the game for chess ace Acers

Move over, Bobby, here comes Jude

by KURT BAER
Jude Acers says someday he will beat World Chess Champion Bobby Fischer. And when he does it will be for a whole castleful of money.

Money is the reason Acers plays chess. He admits it without qualm and says he is only sorry more chess masters can't make a living at the sport.

The 29-year-old chess master is in town, a guest at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel, to give a chess playing exhibition at Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg. He will take on 20 challengers at a time today and tomorrow at 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. in the shopping center's central court.

In some respects the Woodfield exhibition is just a warm-up for Acers who will engage 120 chess challengers on ABC's Wide World of Sports April 21.

"I'm THE ONLY chess master in the country making a living out of playing chess," he says, adding he fully expects to be a millionaire long before he stops playing.

But money hasn't always been a part of Jude Acers' game.

A child of Southern orphanages, he became a chess master at 17, youngest ever at that time in the South. His early career was filled with playing chess for $15 and $20 a night in San Francisco bars and coffee houses.

"My first year on a national tour, my manager lost $10,000 on me," he says. "Today I'd want $5,000 to even walk into a tournament. And I'd want a million dollars, in the bank, to play Fischer."

Acers blames the fact that most U.S. chess masters "still have to play for crumbs" on the powerful U.S. Chess Federation, an association which he says has blacklisted him from major tourna-

Library race has issues aplenty

Arlington Heights Library Board candidates in the April election express a potpourri of issues ranging from improving public relations to reducing the terms of board members.

Incumbent Roland G. Ley, Philip D. Jones and John Patrick O'Brien will vie for two six-year terms while James Foster, Lois Davidheiser and Audrey Rieder will compete for a four-year term.

Ley, 1519 N. Hickory, believes a need for long range planning for the library, such as coordinated in-depth study for the next five, ten and 20 years. The study would be updated every few years and serve as a guide for taking more specific actions, such as providing major services, building a collection of library materials and building expansion. Building expansion, according to Ley, is "top priority" because facilities must be expanded in order to maintain the "high quality level of library service."

"Although we will undoubtedly squeeze more books into the present building it will not be done without sacrificing seating and other much needed space," Ley said. "Expansion seems to be a must and soon."

LEY ALSO WOULD like to study the possible advantages of further merging into the village's governmental structure to "exchange resources." Public relations also could improve, such as reactivating the Friends of the Library group and provide press releases to encourage public support.

Informative releases also are favored by candidate Jones, 947 N. Kennicott Ave. Jones would like to see a semi-annual brochure mailed to each household to increase adult and student participation in the varied opportunities the library has to offer.

Jones is strongly opposed to the possible method of electing a library board member by appointment, a suggestion made earlier by a library board member when only one resident had filed a petition to run in the race. Appointing a member as such, he feels, will "dilute the ability of the citizen to communicate directly with those responsible for the spending of his tax dollar."

The bookmobile that will soon be in effect, coupled with the brochures, will encourage young people to feel comfortable and return for reading and study materials, thereby improving their effectiveness in school, Jones said.

"The six-year term may be too long and scare away qualified people to run for the board," said Jones, who would like to investigate the possibility of reducing the library term from six to four years. "Other village managements are doing this and are working quite well with this."

O'BRIEN, 520 N. Haddon, stated that the library deserves a great deal of merit and hopes to "supplement what has been going on."

"The race is not an issue-orientated election," said O'Brien. "My predominant thought is to maintain the high level of performance that the library already has."

Although the bookmobile operation is a well-favored endeavor among the members of the board, Foster, 1418 N. Walnut, expresses opposition. "The bookmobile is an example of an area where I believe the current library organization has fallen down," said Foster, who is seeking the four-year term. He feels that the board has not communicated to the public on the purpose of a bookmobile in Arlington Heights. "My experience with bookmobiles is that they are generally used to serve people who cannot or will not go to the library, i.e. rural areas, ghettos, etc. I do not see a large need in Arlington Heights."

FOSTER WOULD like to see press releases "to keep the lines of communications open to the public." He also believes that cooperation between the various municipal groups should be developed for mutual benefit, to have more than just the inter-library organizations.

"Innovative concepts which may not be feasible for one library to undertake may be made very desirable through cooperation," said Foster.

Also seeking the four-year term is Mrs.

Davidheiser, 420 E. Park, who sees the position of the library board member as a representative of the taxpayer who oversees the policy, services and functions of the library. She also expressed the responsibility of working with the new executive librarian, Frank Dempsey. "A library should provide leadership and stimulation for adults and children in the use of books and other medias of communications," said Mrs. Davidheiser. "Our library does this and I would like to see it continue to do so."

Mrs. Rieder, 1717 W. Grove, believes that a well balanced library board should represent a cross section of the community.

"A board of directors with a diversity of backgrounds and viewpoints is not only more democratic," said Mrs. Rieder, "but is also conducive to a healthier relationship between library and community."

Parks, rec headquarters relocation OK asked

The Arlington Heights Park District board was asked to approve the relocation of the administrative offices last night.

In a surprise move, Thomas Thornton, superintendent of parks and recreation, asked that the offices be moved from Olympic Park, 600 N. Ridge to the new tennis facility, currently under construction adjacent to Forest View High School, 2121 S. Goebbert Road.

Thornton said changes in the building plan would amount to about $4,000 and would include redesigning meeting rooms into a partitioned office area.

"Administrative officers at the tennis facility would be inconvenient. The offices should be accessible to the people," said Commissioner Kay Muller.

"Since we've assigned clerks to the local community centers, we don't have much public traffic in these offices and the people who do come here have to make their way through undesirable conditions," said Thornton.

THOUGH THORNTON asked the board for immediate approval of his plan, the board decided to meet within the next few weeks to study the proposal.

"We're being asked to approve a change of philosophy," said Robert Rees, board member. "If we made a spur-of-the-moment decision we could end up with the same problem we have with these offices — and you say they've been inadequate since you moved in in 1968."

According to Roger Burke, treasurer of the district, the current office conditions are "deplorable." He also said the situation will become totally unbearable when another bookkeeper is hired to handle the accounts of the tennis facility. The six-court, $700,000 facility, being constructed with revenue bonds which won't affect the district tax rate, is expected to be completed in May.

Burke said an alternate to moving to the tennis facility would be to use the

Look out Bobby, here comes Jude

ments and refused to promote him to Grand Master standing.

The fortunes of war for Jude Acers began to turn when the eyes of the world, if not the television cameras, focused on Fischer's match with Russian Grand Master Boris Spassky.

THE MATCH, with all the antics and intrigue that accompanied it, shattered the popular image of chess as a stuffy game played by old men who sit around in winged-back leather chairs, and millions of Americans began to learn the Danish Gambit and to study the games of the masters.

Acers is not among those who criticize Fischer for his eccentric behavior during his match with Spassky, although he says he respects Bobby as "the most dangerous player in chess."

"Fischer is worth the price because you need showmen," Acers says. "But he never should have barred the television cameras. That could have killed chess in America."

The next-world championship match should be held in about two years Acers says. "If Fischer will play."

"Bobby is dangerous because he'll only quit while he's ahead. The farther ahead he gets in a match, the more ruthless, the more precise his playing becomes. It's exactly the opposite of what you would expect."

ACERS TALKS about Fischer, his habits, game strategy and personal eccentricities, the way top professional boxers study and work to out-psyche their opponents.

But far beyond the limelight of world championship matches, Acers is just as fanatical about chess in places like Woodfield and Grand Rapids, Mich., where he recently finished an exhibition.

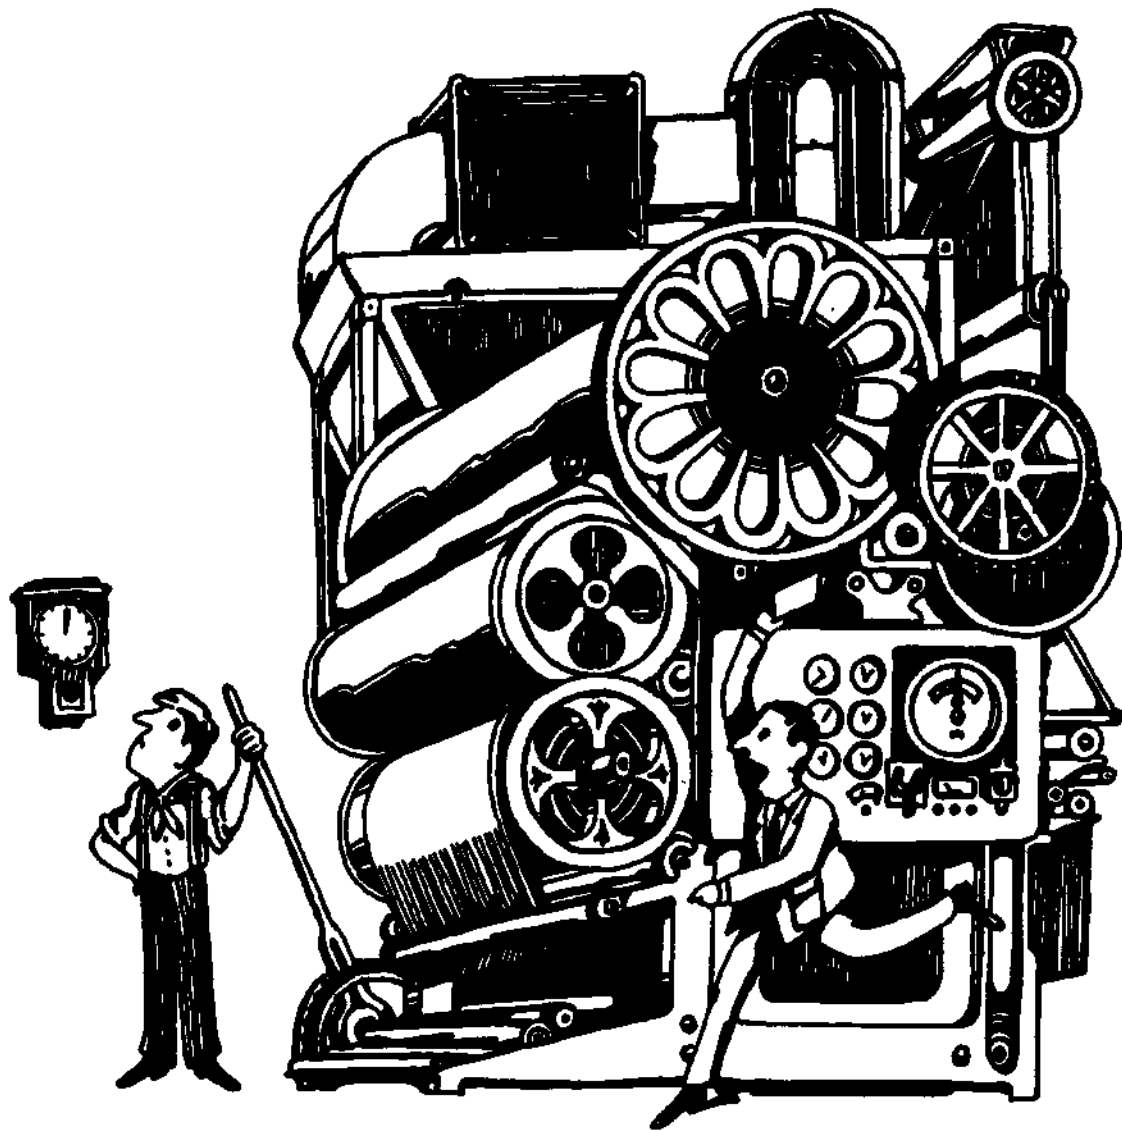

"I love playing with children," he says, adding that "at times you have to carry them along so they learn from the game."

He will tutor a child in chess, from the ground up, for $300. It is a game that can and must be learned.

"There have probably only been two or three natural chess geniuses," he says.

It's all part of his game plan to promote chess and, not incidentally, himself. He has even authored his own motto, "All he is everything."

Bobby Fischer, it's your move.

Psychic phenomena series

A five-part series on psychic phenomena will be held Wednesdays from March 21 through April 18 at 8 p.m. at St. James Junior High School, 800 N. Arlington Heights Road.

Justine O'Brien, an assistant professor in the Theology Department of Loyola University, will be the lecturer. He has spent the past two years studying and researching theology and psychic phenomena in Europe and the British Isles.

Lecture topics will include dreams, meditation, haunted houses and mystery of death.

The fee for the series is $5 and senior citizens may participate free of charge. Registration for the series should be made by calling 394-3704.

POW legal advice offered

Free legal advice for returning prisoners of war and their families is available from Arlington Heights Attorney Robert C. Buckley.

Buckley, a colonel in the United States Air Force, is one of 613 civilian attorneys throughout the country who will give the legal assistance in their capacity as Air Force Reserve Judge Advocates.

"We will give returning prisoners and their families any aid any other lawyer could provide except for representing them in court," said Buckley. "We can give advice on leases, mortgages, marital problems or military rights."

Buckley has been in the Air Force for 30 years. During World War II he flew B-17s, during the Korean War he flew a B-29 and in 1969 he became a reservist.

So far only one family has contacted Buckley for the service.

He can be reached at his office in Room 1801A Civic Center, Chicago, 443-8300.

Fencing class signups now

Fencing classes for boys and girls in grades 4 through 8 will be held Monday nights at Hasbrook Park, 333 W. Maude, beginning Monday.

Classes for girls will be held from 7 to 8 p.m. and the boys' class will be held from 8 to 9 p.m. The fee for the six week class is $6.

Cub Pack 135 honors 16

Over a dozen awards were presented to members of Arlington Heights Cub Pack 135 at the recent annual blue and gold dinner.

Award winners included Chris Broehl, John Delacker, Michael Dunavin, David Dunavin, Bill Fasth, Greg Germanos, Ben Ahrens, Gregg Rodriguez, Ron Schleser, Ray Dolejs, John Elder, David Fanizza, Paul Hill, Scott McFarland, Mike Tarkoff and Brian Meyers.

Two scouts, James Boushley and Walter Belluomini, earned their wolf badges.

School discipline problems weighed

The High School Dist. 214 Board decided Monday it wants to look into the problem of discipline in its schools, perhaps by calling a meeting where building administrators can express their opinions on the situation.

The board reached agreement on that issue after board member Jack Costello, newly announced candidate for reelection, expressed concern over the amount of insubordination reported in the suspension reports received by the board each month.

"I have become more and more concerned about the number of times insubordination and bad language is reported," Costello said. "I think we should deal very harshly with that. I wouldn't tolerate that kind of language and I don't think we should ask our people to tolerate it either."

Supt. Edward Gilbert said the only actions the school could take would be to increase the length of suspensions required for insubordination or "if the violation is flagrant, we could go for expulsion."

Suspensions for up to 10 days may be made by school administrators. Expulsion, which could be for a full semester, must be acted on by the board.

Board member Richard Bachhuber said he does not like the idea of using expulsion as a discipline tool. "I think we ought to find some other way to control things instead of throwing a kid out," he said.

Board member Gene Artemenko suggested the board meet specifically to discuss approaches to discipline problems and added that Gilbert and other administrators could also find out whether any other school districts are using other methods to control students.

IN OTHER ACTION, the board authorized $57,015 for seven school buses which will be used during the day next year to bus students to outside locations connected with their classes.

Among the locations students will be bused to next year are automobile dealerships where they will work as part of the auto mechanics program and elementary and nursery schools where students in child care and social science classes will work.

Assistant Supt. Rod McLennan said last year the district spent $23,000 on busing for class purposes and added that

Youth council forming directory of resources

Either there are few youth services in Arlington Heights or they're all a well-kept secret, according to a recent survey by the Arlington Heights Youth Council.

The youth council is attempting to form a directory of youth resources in the community and sent out more than 140 letters to local organizations six weeks ago.

"The response has not been too good," said Rodney Kath, a youth council member. "We've only received about a dozen replies."

In the letter, churches, fraternal organizations and other groups were asked if they had any programs developed with youth in mind and if they were willing to back a youth-oriented program with meeting space, manpower or money.

According to Kath, the group which has been most responsive are churches. The council plans to contact organizations which have not responded by phone.

"Perhaps the lack of response means that most groups have little to offer youth," said Kath.

The youth council, recently reactivated after nearly a year of inactivity, includes nine adult and six youth members.

Youth members recently appointed to the council include Lynn Matthews of Hersey High School, Julie Nichols of Arlington High School, Pat Hand of Forest View High School and Tom Gaffney of Rolling Meadows High School.

Court denies Taras challenge

The objection made by Michael P. Taras, 2215 N. Champlain St., Arlington Heights, who charged the Wheeling Township Republican candidates were improperly slated, has been struck down in Cook County circuit court.

The township officer's electoral board voted to sustain the motion entered by the candidates on the ground that there was no legal objection.

Taras charged specifically that Wheeling Township legal counsel Richard A. Cowen did not notify the public that Lawrence Carrozza, Wheeling Township highway commissioner, was not seeking reelection to that post.

According to Taras, this prevented him from filing a petition to run in the April 3 election.

The Republican candidates contended they were following the rules of the Republican party caucus, and according to the rules, Taras, or any other eligible person could have been nominated on the date set by the caucus.

Taras was unavailable for comment.

Liquor licenses asked for two cafes

The public health and safety committee has recommended that village liquor licenses be issued to the Dunton House Restaurant and Siegelman's Restaurant.

A license application for Elm Farm grocery store was rejected by the committee and an application from the Pit 'n' Pub Restaurant was continued.

Plan unit to view nursing home plans

The Arlington Heights Plan Commission will review a proposal tonight for a 6.3-acre commercial development along Rand Road immediately north of Stonebridge Hill apartments.

Hollywood Builders, the company which built Stonebridge, is proposing a plan that includes a restaurant, commercial buildings and a Hebrew school on the site.

The meeting is set for 8 p.m. at the Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Circle campus honors

Howard J. Orchow and Daryl Eaton of Arlington Heights recently earned bachelor degrees at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle campus.

Orchow is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard J. Orchow, 915 E. Miner, and Eaton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Eaton, 2234 S. Goebbert Rd.
